Exhibit 1

Report on Identification Number Requirements for Mail Balloting under SB 1

La Unión del Pueblo Entero v. Texas

United States District Court for the Western District of Texas

Eitan Hersh Associate Professor Department of Political Science Tufts University Medford, MA

February 28, 2022

I. Abstract

1. In Senate Bill 1 ("SB 1"), Texas imposes new identification verification rules when registered voters choose to cast ballots by mail. As I will demonstrate, more than 1 in 7 Texans can submit a ballot application – as well as a ballot itself – in perfect accordance with the state's instructions under SB 1, and yet Texas election officials must still reject the voters' forms. Officials must reject the voters' forms because Texas's voter registration database does not contain the information necessary for election officials to accurately confirm the identity of millions of Texans who possess proper identification numbers. SB 1 delays and/or prevents citizens from casting ballots who follow the state's instructions and are eligible to vote by mail.

II. Summary of Inquiry

2. For Texas voters who understand the mail ballot instructions and correctly fill out the state's mail ballot forms in accordance with the rules set forth by SB 1, how many of them could have their forms rejected due to the state's inability to confirm the voters' identification numbers? I answer this question by merging personal information contained in Texas's voter registration database with information contained in Texas's Department of Public Safety (DPS) records. Through comparing records of identification numbers, including driver's licenses and other DPS ID Numbers as well as social security numbers, I have found that over 2.6 million Texans can accurately and completely fill out government forms in accordance with SB 1 and with the forms' instructions, and their forms would still be rejected by Texas election officials. Included in this number are hundreds of thousands of senior citizens (65 and older),

- disabled veterans, homebound citizens, and overseas citizens (including some at military addresses), populations that are most likely to make use of mail balloting.
- 3. According to SB 1, a registered voter applying for a mail ballot must now include "the number of the applicant's driver's license, election identification certificate, or personal identification card issued by the Department of Public Safety" ("DPS ID Number"). If a registrant "has not been issued" a DPS ID Number, then he or she must include in his/her mail ballot application "the last four digits of the applicant's social security number" ("SSN4"). When submitting a completed ballot by mail, registrants must again provide a DPS ID Number or, if they do not have a DPS ID Number, their SSN4.
- 4. When Texas election officials receive a mail ballot application, or when they receive a completed mail ballot, the officials must compare the DPS ID Number or SSN4 listed by the registrant with the official records in the voter registration database. The Texas voter registration database, also known as Texas Election Administration Management system ("TEAM"), lists a DPS ID Number and/or an SSN4 for most voters. If the voter does not provide an identification number that is listed on TEAM, "the clerk shall reject the application."
- 5. I have determined three main reasons why correctly filled-out forms that are required by Texas under SB 1 would be rejected by election officials:

¹ Note that election officials do not confirm mail ballot applicants' DPS ID Numbers by looking up those numbers on a DPS database. According to the state's guidelines, election officials are to "check the voter's application for ballot by mail and the carrier envelope to be sure that the number of the voter's driver's license, election identification certificate, or personal identification card issued by the DPS is included and is associated with the voter's registration record (my emphasis)." In other words, if a voter has a valid DPS ID but it happens not to be associated with the registration record in TEAM, election officials must reject the voter's mail ballot forms. See: "Early Voting Ballot Board & Signature Verification Committee, Handbook for Election Judges and Clerks 2022," Office of the Texas Secretary of State, page 14.

- a. Reason #1: Millions of Texans have multiple DPS ID Numbers. Many have both a personal identification number and a driver's license number. Some have multiple driver's license numbers. According to SB 1 requirements, voters may list on their mail ballot applications any of their DPS ID Numbers, including expired ones. However, the TEAM voter registration database shows only one DPS ID Number for each voter. If the voter uses a DPS ID Number on his or her mail ballot application but it is not the same number listed in TEAM, SB 1 requires election officials to reject the application.
- b. Reason #2: Hundreds of thousands of Texans are listed in TEAM without a DPS ID Number at all. These voters tend to be older. Almost half are over 65 and may, by law, request an absentee ballot without offering any reason. As I show below, the majority of these individuals do, in fact, have DPS ID Numbers. If they submit a mail ballot application or mail ballot with their DPS ID Number listed, as they are instructed to do by Texas's updated application form, SB 1 requires clerks to reject their materials.
- c. Reason #3: Tens of thousands of Texans are listed in TEAM with SSN4s and DPS ID Numbers that have typographical errors in them. (As Texas is one of only eight states that has not adopted online voter registration, Texas may have more citizens registering to vote using paper forms than is typical elsewhere in the country, which can lead to transcription errors when the information is entered into a computer system.²) When voters who are listed with typographical errors in their ID numbers submit a mail ballot form with their proper SSN4 or DPS ID

² National Conference of State Legislatures, "Online Voter Registration," July 26, 2021, https://www.ncsl.org/research/elections-and-campaigns/electronic-or-online-voter-registration.aspx.

Number, SB 1 requires election officials to reject these forms on account of inaccurate record-keeping in Texas government records.

- 6. These are not the only reasons that Texas election officials will reject mail ballots and ballot applications as a result of SB 1's identification requirements for absentee balloting. There are other reasons that are beyond the scope of this analysis but could cause additional Texans to have mail ballot forms rejected by state election officials. For instance, applicants might accidentally include a typographical error when writing down their DPS ID Number or their SSN4 on their mail ballot forms. A separate analysis would be required to estimate how many mail ballot forms might be rejected for this reason. Applicants might also have lost, misplaced, or surrendered their license or other DPS ID card and therefore cannot complete the mail application form required by SB 1. A separate analysis would be required to estimate how many forms might be rejected for this reason.³ Setting aside these other possibilities, the three reasons stated above affect over 2.6 million Texans, according to my analysis. These Texans possess an identification number required by SB 1 and can properly fill out mail ballot application forms and, nevertheless, SB 1 will require election officials to reject their forms.
- 7. SB 1 essentially asks 1 in 7 registered voters to be lucky in order to cast a mail ballot without their application or ballot being rejected: the voters must guess correctly which one of several possible identification numbers are listed on TEAM, and they must hope that TEAM records do not contain typographical errors on their individual records.

³ There is a field on the DPS database related to "card status" that could possibly be used to count the number of individuals who have DPS ID Numbers but they do not have access to their ID cards, for instance because they surrendered the cards. If license status information was made available to me, I could provide a supplementary analysis of these records.

III. Background and Qualifications

- 8. I am a tenured associate professor of political science at Tufts University in Medford, Massachusetts. I joined the faculty at Tufts in July 2017. Prior to that, I was an assistant professor and a resident fellow of the Institution for Social and Policy Studies at Yale University in New Haven, Connecticut. I joined the faculty at Yale in 2011. I received my PhD in government from Harvard University in 2011.
- 9. In addition to my appointment in the Department of Political Science, I currently have two other affiliations. I serve as an Associate Professor of Civic Studies at the Tisch College for Civic Life, also at Tufts University. And, during the 2022 calendar year, I have an affiliation as an Emerson Collective Fellow in the Emerson Collective's Democracy Cohort. Through the Emerson Collective, I am engaging in research on the civic role of business leaders.
- 10. My scholarly research focuses on U.S. elections, on topics such as voter behavior, civic engagement, election administration, and political campaigns. My methodological focus is on using individual-level data such as voter registration records to study politics. Publications that specifically include analysis of individual-level voter registration data include, among others, Hacking the Electorate (Cambridge University Press, 2015); "ADGN: An Algorithm for Record Linkage Using Address, Date of Birth, Gender, and Name" (Statistics and Public Policy, 2017); "The Primacy of Race in the Geography of Income-Based Voting" (American Journal of Political Science, 2016); Validation: What Big Data Reveal about Survey

- Misreporting and the Real Electorate" (Political Analysis, 2012); and "The Politics of 130,000 Religious Leaders (Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion, 2021).
- 11. I have been deposed as an expert witness five times, in Judicial Watch v. King, Fish v. Kobach, Stringer v. Pablos, U.S. v. City of Eastpointe, and Holmes v. Moore. The first three of these cases were focused on compliance with the National Voter Registration Act in Indiana, Kansas, and Texas, respectively. U.S. v. Eastpointe focused on compliance with the Voting Rights Act. Holmes v. Moore was a case in North Carolina state court involving a voter identification law. I have also served as an expert consultant in Texas v. Holder and Veasey v. Perry, two cases involving a voter identification law in the State of Texas.
- 12. In four of the above cases, my work as an expert required me to develop and implement methods to link individual records between voter registration databases and other databases (namely, driver's license databases). I use a similar methodology in this report. It is also the methodology that is the focus of the peer-reviewed work I published in "ADGN: An Algorithm for Record Linkage Using Address, Date of Birth, Gender, and Name."
- 13. I have filed declarations in other cases in which I was not deposed. These include, among others, Vote Forward v. DeJoy, a 2020 case involving the U.S. Post Office and mail voting, as well as Kelly v. Verizon, a class action case for which voter registration data was used to evaluate the domicile of class members.
- 14. I have served as an expert both for defendants (e.g. Judicial Watch v. King, Kelly v. Verizon) as well as for plaintiffs (e.g. Fish v. Kobach, U.S. v. City of Eastpointe).
- 15. I am compensated for my work at a rate of $350 per hour.

16. A copy of my current CV is attached as Exhibit A to this Report.

IV. Analysis Plan and Summary Statistics

A. Overview

Called Session 2021," August 30, 2021.

- 17. The analysis here requires me to look up registered voters in the Department of Safety's database of ID holders. For each registrant, I seek answers to four simple questions:
 - i. Does the registrant have a DPS ID Number?
 - ii. Does the registrant have more than one DPS ID number?
 - iii. Does the DPS ID Number(s) listed for a voter in the DPS database match the DPS ID Number listed for that voter in the TEAM database?
 - iv. Does the SSN4 listed in the DPS database match the SSN4 listed for that voter in the TEAM database?
- 18. The first of these questions is relevant because some registrants are not listed in TEAM with any DPS ID Number. If these individuals possess a DPS ID number, they are required by SB 1 to list it on their mail ballot application. If these registrants list their DPS ID Number, SB 1 requires election officials to reject their forms as the number is not recorded on the TEAM database.⁴

⁴ The Texas Secretary of State has issued guidance to election officials that if registrants (even those possessing DPS ID Numbers) list their SSN4 when applying for a mail ballot, then their ballots and ballot applications should not be rejected (Texas Secretary of State, "FAQs on Applications for Ballots by Mail (ABBMs)," January 28, 2022, page 8.). However, Texas's handbook (see footnote 1) offers conflicting guidance, which is consistent with the law and with the application form instructions, that registrants with a DPS ID Number must list that number. On the mail application form itself, a registrant is not asked to list their SSN4 if they possess a DPS ID Number. The registrant would have no obvious way of knowing of alternative guidance, as it is inconsistent with SB 1's text and the text of the mail ballot application form. In addition, the state has allocated no funds with the passage of SB 1 to pay for any kind of educational advertisement that indicates the Secretary's interpretation of the law. For the lack of allocation of funds for public education, see: Jerry McGinty, Legislative Budget Board, "Fiscal Note 87th Legislature 2nd"

- 19. The second question is relevant because registrants with more than one DPS ID Number can list one of their Numbers that happens not to be the one recorded in the TEAM database. If registrants list a number but not one listed on the TEAM file, their forms are rejected.
- 20. The third and fourth questions are relevant because typographical errors in the recording of SSN4s and DPS ID Numbers mean that registrants can fill out their correct DPS ID Number or SSN4 but their forms will be rejected because the correct number is not the same as the number listed on the TEAM file.
- 21. While the analysis that follows is simple in principle, it is somewhat complex in the details. The main reason for the complexity is that "looking up" a voter in the DPS database is not as straightforward as it sounds. Suppose, for instance, that I look up each registrant by their social security number. I could do so, and then compare the DPS ID Number for that voter listed in TEAM with the DPS ID Number(s) for that voter listed in the DPS records. I do perform such an analysis. However, the work is not complete. If voters are listed in TEAM with typos in their social security numbers, then they would not match to their DPS record on the basis of the social security number. Similarly, if voters are listed in TEAM with no social security number at all, then they would not match to their DPS record either. Consequently, simply linking the TEAM database and the DPS database on the basis of a social security number does not provide critical information such as the number of people with erroneous social security numbers listed on TEAM. Thus, I need to use additional strategies to look up registrants in the DPS database.

22. Before proceeding with the analysis, I will summarize key features of the two databases upon which this analysis relies: the DPS file of ID holders and the TEAM file of registered voters. Then, I will explain the methodology I use to link the two files together. Finally, I will conduct the analysis and explain the results. In the results, I will be attentive to several subpopulations of interest, including registrants who are aged 65 years or older, registrants with overseas mailing addresses, and registrants whose DPS records suggest they are disabled or homebound.

B. Data Used in Analysis

Department of Public Safety Data

- 23. As transmitted to me, the DPS database of driver's license holders and other ID holders was divided into 10 separate files. According to the file labels, the files were extracted from Texas's DPS system on January 7, 2022. I combined the ten files into one file.
- 24. In total, the DPS file contains 36,227,819 records. In nearly all cases, each row is associated with a unique DPS ID Number. For each of these numbers, the row shows information such as the name, address, and social security number of the associated individual. Many Texans are listed on more than one row with different DPS ID Numbers. This is evidenced by data on nine-digit social security numbers (SSN9) contained in the DPS database. Of the 36.2 million DPS records, 94.98% are listed with an SSN9. The other 5 percent are missing an SSN9. Of those with an SSN9 listed, 24,569,348 (71.40%) have a unique SSN9 within the database. The remaining ⁵ Out of the 36.2 million rows, there are 140 rows that show a duplicate DPS ID Number. All other rows show unique DPS ID Numbers.

- records (9,841,121) represent individuals who are listed with two more or more different DPS ID Numbers to their name.
- 25. From the data provided to me by the state, I cannot determine all the circumstances under which individuals have multiple DPS ID Numbers. Primarily, it appears to be the result of individuals who possess both a driver's license number and a personal identification number. But there are tens of thousands of individuals who have multiple driver's license numbers or multiple personal identification numbers. Texans with multiple DPS ID Numbers may have numbers that are expired as well as ones that are unexpired. However, according to SB 1, a registered voter applying for a mail ballot or submitting a mail ballot may use current or expired DPS ID Numbers.
- 26. The DPS database shows other evidence of individuals possibly possessing multiple DPS ID Numbers in addition to the fact that individuals appear on multiple rows. In about ten percent of rows in the DPS file (specifically, in 3,440,039 rows), there is a field populated with data that is called "AKA DL/ID Number." This field appears to list additional identification numbers associated with a person on the file. However, many of these numbers appear different in format to Texas's DPS ID Numbers, such as that they include letters in addition to numbers. Because I am not certain of the meaning of the AKA DL/ID Number field, I make the conservative assumption that these numbers are not DPS ID Numbers that Texans could use in submitting a mail ballot application or mail ballot.
- 27. Table 1 shows the rate at which key fields in DPS are missing data. As is clear, zero records or at least less than 0.01% of records are missing names, birthdates, gender (male or female), or zip code. A small number of records are missing a street address number. And, as noted above, 5.02% of DPS records are missing an SSN9.

Voter Registration Data

- 28. On January 27, 2022, I received a copy of Texas voter registration records (TEAM). According to the file labels, the files were extracted by Texas on January 24, 2022. Each of 254 counties had records contained in separate files. On each row of each county file, an individual registered voter is listed with personal information (e.g. name, birthdate, address) and information about the person's election participation. On each row, the individual voter is also associated with a Voter Unique Identifier number, or "VUID."
- 29. For individuals who have recently cast ballots, the database extract that was produced by the state shows multiple records per person (one row per election in which each person is recorded as casting a ballot). For individuals who have not recently cast ballots (or not ever cast ballots), the database extract shows one row per person.⁶

- 30. In order to conduct the analysis in this report, I need to create a version of the TEAM file in which each individual who Texas considers a registered voter is listed once. By doing so, I am able to report on the total number of registrants whose mail ballot forms could be rejected due to SB 1's identification number requirements. Since the version of TEAM transmitted to me has many individuals listed on more than one row, I take the following steps to de-duplicate the database.
- 31. First, for the individuals who have cast a ballot in one or more elections, I preserve the record of their most recent election. I preserve the most recent election because this record is presumed to be most up-to-date. I also preserve records of registrants who are listed as having not cast ballots in recent elections.
- 32. In total, across all 254 counties, this sums to 18,656,786 records. I create a file with fields from TEAM relevant to my analysis, including name, address, birthdate, gender, and identification number fields, plus a few other fields such as whether the individual has a non-US mailing address.
- 33. Of these 18,656,786 records, 822,166 are duplicative on all the fields I retained. That is, the same individual with all the same identifiers is listed on multiple rows within the county TEAM files. I remove these duplicates. This leaves 17,834,620 records.
- 34. I next remove six records that have no VUID listed. My methodology requires the database to have a unique identifier associated with each person. As the VUID identifier is available for all but six records, I utilize it as a unique identifier, which is why I remove the 6 records without a VUID.
- 35. Although VUID is called a "unique identifier", the VUID listed on the TEAM files (even after the de-duplication procedures above) is only unique for 91.06% of records. Duplicates appear to represent individuals who are listed under different residential addresses or different mailing addresses but are the same person and have a common VUID. As an extreme example, consider the case of one individual who is listed five times on TEAM. In all five records, she has the same VUID, the same birthdate, driver's license number, social security number, and date of registration. In one county, she appears twice but on one of these two records she has a mailing address listed while on the other one she does not. This individual is also listed at three other addresses in three other counties.

- 36. In order to work with a version of the TEAM database in which each registrant is represented once on the file, I remove records that are duplicative on VUID. For instance, in the case of the individual mentioned above whose VUID appears five times, I retain one of her five records. If any of the duplicate records on VUID differ such that one record contains a social security number while another does not, I retain the record that contains a social security number. This de-duplication removes 808,560 additional records, leaving the statewide file with 17,026,054 records. My analysis is based on this database of 17,026,054 records.
- 37. While Texas did not supply me with a file in which each person it considers to be a registered voter is listed once, the state does report statistics about the total number of registrants in its records, both statewide and by county. Are the state's published numbers comparable to the data I am using? According to its report from January 2022 (the month in which I was supplied with a version of the TEAM file), Texas

⁷ I retain the record containing a social security number to enable me to link the TEAM record to the DPS database using the social security number for as many records as possible, per the methodology described below.

- reports 17,119,632 registered voters.⁸ In the records supplied to me, after deduplication, there are 17,026,054.
- 38. While the two files are close in the overall number of records, I checked, county by county, to determine if any counties showed substantially different numbers of registrants between the published numbers and the ones from the database supplied to me. In Figure 1, I count registered voters by county, and compare the number listed on the Secretary's website with the numbers in the file sent to me. In the left panel, I show all 254 counties. In the right panel, I zoom in on the 246 counties in which fewer than 50,000 individuals are registered. Both panels indicate that no county is an outlier. That is, there is no county where the number of registrants according to the Secretary's website differs meaningfully from the number in the data provided to me. The differences between the two are likely attributable to the fact that registration databases are dynamic, with additions and removals occurring frequently. The snapshot of the voter file provided to me is slightly different in the number of records from the snapshot used by Texas in publishing its January 2022 statistics, but the databases appear to be comparable. I have no reason to believe that the differences between versions of the TEAM database would systematically impact the analysis that follows or bear on any of the conclusions I draw.

39. Table 2 shows the rate at which key fields in TEAM are missing data. As is clear, zero records – or at least less than 0.01% of records – are missing names. A small number – less than a tenth of a percent – are missing birthdates, street numbers, or zip codes. Whereas the DPS data treats gender as a binary field, with only M or F listed, the TEAM file has other gender designations. Most significantly, 623,052 individuals are listed with gender code of U. For the purpose of linking databases using the gender field, I treat those not M or F as missing on gender.

C. Data Quality Checks in TEAM Voter Records

- 40. I performed a series of additional diagnostics on the TEAM file, examining the quality of the key fields.
- 41. Birthdates. On TEAM, 4,066 individuals have invalid birthdates. These are either missing completely or have dates such as "01-01-0001". Another 5,235 individuals have birthdates indicating they were born before 1912, suggesting they are over 110 years old. Of these, most (4,824) have birthdates listed before October 1, 1906. That date, according to AARP, is the birthdate of the oldest American as of January 2022. That is, TEAM lists almost five thousand registered voters with birthdates older than the oldest American. Many of these individuals are listed with birthdates such as January 1, 1900 and January 1, 1901.
- 42. Social Security Number. The social security number (SSN) field in TEAM is missing completely for 398,140 individuals. For 436,948 additional individuals, a four-digit SSN is listed rather than a nine-digit SSN. ¹⁰
- 43. While 16,190,957 (95.10%) have a nine-digit SSN listed on TEAM, some of these numbers are invalid. For instance, SSNs cannot start with three zeroes (000-XX-XXXXX), nor can they end with four zeroes (XXX-XX-0000). They cannot start with a 9 (9XX-XX-XXXXX), nor start with a 666 (666-XX-XXXX), nor can they have two

- zeroes in the middle (XXX-00-XXXX). 11 All of these instances appear in the TEAM file and affect 183 records. Another 181 records share an SSN listed as 111-11-1111. Seven records share the SSN of 999-99-9999.
- 44. Much more common than invalid SSN9s are duplicative SSN9s. Several hundred thousand records on TEAM share an SSN9 with another record. In most of these cases, these are multiple records of the same individual who has multiple rows with different VUIDs. In other cases, however, different people (with different names and dates of birth) are listed with a common SSN9. There are 15,835 records who share a 9-digit SSN with another registrant in Texas, according to TEAM, but have a different last name, first name, and date of birth from that other listed registrant.
- 45. Altogether, 15,895,752 individuals of the 16,190,957 listed with an SSN9 have a unique nine-digit SSN. That is, SSN9 is not unique for 1.82% of individuals who are listed with an SSN9. Thus, while a 9-digit SSN is, in principle, a unique identifier, that isn't quite the case in TEAM records. A variety of circumstances can result in duplicate SSN9s, including individuals assigned incorrect SSN9s, such as 111-11-1111, and typos such that a person ends up being listed with the SSN9 of another person who has a similar SSN9.
- 46. Driver's License/ID card. Of all the records in TEAM, 537,270 (3.16%) are not listed with a DPS ID Number. Of these, 102,074 are also not listed with an SSN4 or SSN9. Apart from TEAM records missing a DPS ID Number altogether, other records have ID numbers listed that are not valid. For instance, 3,610 have a nine-digit DPS ID Number even though the DPS ID is officially an 8-digit number. Forty-seven individuals share an DPS ID Number of 111111111 and thirty individuals share the number 99999999.

47. Table 3 summarizes information about the SSN and DPS ID Number information contained in TEAM. In Table 3, records for SSN4 and DPS ID Number include those that are invalid. For instance, the 47 individuals listed with DPS ID numbers as 11111111 are included in the totals. If such a person possesses a DPS ID Number that is not 1111111 and includes that number on a mail ballot application, election officials would reject the application as it does not match the 11111111 that is listed on TEAM.

- address number. Gender is either missing or defined as unknown or other than male and female for 627,115 records.
- 49. Before proceeding with the next stage of the report, Table 4 reviews and summarizes a few key abbreviations of terms used up until this point in my report.

V. Methodology for Linking Records between TEAM and DPS

- 50. As stated above, the methodology of this analysis is to look up each registered voter in the DPS database and determine if the registered voter has one (or more) DPS ID Numbers listed, and to see if there are typos or other inconsistencies between the DPS ID Numbers and SSN4s listed on TEAM versus those listed on the DPS Database.
- 51. I will adapt a methodology I developed and published in Ansolabehere and Hersh (2017). 12 I will illustrate this methodology through an example of a fictitious registered voter. I will call this person John Smith and assign him the fake social security number of 123-45-6789 and the fake birthdate of July 4, 1976. The fictitious John Smith is a male who lives at 655 E Cesar E. Chavez Blvd, San Antonio TX 78205. This is the address of the United States Courthouse. It is a real address. But, again, our fake illustrative person, John Smith, does not actually live there.
- 52. Suppose John Smith has a unique social security number listed on TEAM database.

 That is, his SSN9 is listed in registration records and no one else on TEAM is listed with that SSN9. He would be one of 93.36% of registered voters with a unique SSN9 on the TEAM file. The first step of my analysis is to merge the TEAM file with the DPS file for these 93.36% of TEAM records on the basis of their SSN9s.

¹² Stephen Ansolabehere and Eitan Hersh, "ADGN: An Algorithm for Record Linkage Using Address, Date of Birth, Gender and Name," Statistics and Public Policy, 4:1, 2017.

TABLE 5: Illustration of Linking TEAM and DPS based on SSN9

TEAM Data	base		DPS Databa	ase
Name	SSN9	DPS ID No.	Name	SSN9	DPS ID No.
John Smith	123-45-6789	(missing)	John Smith	123-45-6789	11223344

- 53. In the scenario depicted in Table 5, John Smith does not have a DPS ID Number listed on the TEAM file (similar to more than half a million Texans). When I search for his SSN9 on the DPS file, however, I find his record and learn that he does, in fact, have a DPS ID Number. If Smith were to include only this DPS ID Number on his mail ballot application (as the mail ballot application form instructs him to do), his application would be rejected by election officials since that DPS ID Number does not appear in TEAM.
- 54. After linking TEAM and DPS based on SSN9s, I calculate the key statistics, such as the number of individuals who, like Smith, do not have a DPS ID Number listed in TEAM but do have one listed in DPS.
- 55. For two reasons, I also must match TEAM and DPS based on identifiers other than SSN9. For one, 6.5% of registrants in Texas are not listed in TEAM with a unique SSN9. For another, suppose there are inaccuracies in how SSN9 is stored. Maybe, when John Smith registered to vote, an election official entered Smith's social security number with a typo, noting it as 123-45-6782 instead of 123-45-6789. In this scenario, John Smith would not match to his DPS record based on the SSN9, since the SSN9 is recorded incorrectly. Additionally, if Smith were to submit a mail ballot application using the last four digits of his social security number as his identification, his application would be rejected. He would write "6789" as his SSN4, but the TEAM record would show "6782".

- 56. Therefore, in addition to linking TEAM and DPS based on SSN9s, I also link the databases on combinations of personal information. The first combination I will use is first name + last name + date of birth. I use the following procedure. Observing that birthdate in TEAM is stored MM-DD-YYYY while in DPS it is stored as YYYY-MM-DD, I reconfigure the TEAM birthdate information to match DPS. Next, following my past research (Ansolabehere and Hersh, 2017), I prepare the first name and last name fields. Sometimes, names are stored differently in different databases. For instance, names with dashes, apostrophes, or spaces are sometimes stored with punctuation or spaces and other times not. Names with suffixes, such as Jr. or III, are sometimes stored with the suffix as part of the surname and other times not. I process the first and last names in TEAM by removing punctuation, spaces, and suffixes. I then combine the three fields into a field I will refer to as "ND" for name + date of birth.
- 57. Thus, the fictitious John Smith would have an ND value of "JOHNSMITH1976-07-04." I create this field in the TEAM file and I create an equivalent field in the DPS file. I then merge the files together on the basis of this ND field, just as I had done using SSN9. I can then compare how John Smith's SSN4 and DPS ID Number appear on the TEAM file with how these numbers appear on the DPS file.
- 58. Is ND a unique identifier similar to SSN9? Excluding the records of individuals who are missing birthdate information in TEAM, ND uniquely identifies 98.62% of individuals in TEAM. The remaining 1.38% are duplicative. Note that the rate of duplicates on ND is less than the rate of duplicates on SSN9 in TEAM (1.82%),

- which was discussed above. In addition, because name and birthdate are rarely missing, the identifier is available for 17,021,992 (99.98%) of the records.
- 59. There are several reasons why an individual might not have a unique ND identifier in a small number of cases. Similar to non-unique SSN9s, there are some individuals in TEAM who are listed multiple times, with different VUIDs, or perhaps at different addresses. The de-duplication processes described earlier in this report would not have accounted for individuals listed with different VUIDs. These individuals would nevertheless show up as duplicates on ND and SSN9. In addition, just as there are rare cases on TEAM where different individuals (with different names and birthdates) share an SSN9, there are a small number of individuals who are different people but share a value on ND. In the case of SSN9, the duplicate is due to an error, as no two individuals are supposed to share an SSN9. With the ND identifier, there are a small number of individuals who do share a first name, last name, and exact date of birth with another registrant.
- 60. How common is it for two different people to share a value on ND? Consider individuals who have unique SSN9s on TEAM (N=15,895,752). Because they are unique on SSN9, they are not likely to include instances of individuals who are listed on TEAM more than once with different VUIDs. Of those with a unique SSN9, 99.64% (15,838,711) also have a unique ND value. Thus, the remaining 0.36% may have a non-unique ND because they share a name and date of birth with another registrant.
- 61. I guard against linking two different people who share a common ND by only attempting to link records if the value of ND is unique on the TEAM file. In other words, for the 1.38% of records that are not unique on TEAM based on their ND (either because they contain erroneous information, identify individuals who are listed multiple times in TEAM, or identify multiple individuals who have the same name and birthdate), I do not attempt to link them to the DPS database using ND. Furthermore, in an analysis described below, I will be able to estimate whether individuals who are listed in TEAM are a false-positive match to different individuals with the same names and birthdates who are listed in DPS.

- 62. In addition to linking TEAM and DPS based on SSN9 and based on the combination of name and birthdate, I perform one additional linkage between the files, based on address, gender, and date of birth. Why is this additional linkage necessary? While the Name + Date of Birth combination is available for nearly all registrants in TEAM and exhibits a higher rate of uniqueness than SSN9, it does have a drawback in linking individuals between two databases. Namely, it is stored less consistently than SSN9. Surnames often change when people marry. First names are sometimes recorded with nicknames. The fictitious John Smith may have registered to vote using his nickname, Johnny Smith. Or, maybe John Smith took on a hyphenated surname when he got married. As such, he is listed as John Smith in the DPS records but John Smith-Jones on TEAM. Name inconsistencies across databases mean that a person with a unique name and date of birth on TEAM might fail to match to his or her record on DPS.
- 63. Accordingly, I also link records between TEAM and DPS with an alternative identifier that excludes name information. I match individuals based on a combination of address, date of birth, and gender. Following procedures discussed in Ansolabehere and Hersh (2017), I extract two pieces of information from addresses, the street number and the five-digit zip code. I then combine them. Our fictitious character John Smith lives at 655 E Cesar E. Chavez Blvd, San Antonio TX 78205. From this address, I would extract 65578205 (the 655 from the street number, the 78205 from the zip code). By extracting just these numbers, I avoid possible inconsistencies in how addresses are stored in different databases. In one database, Smith's address might be listed as "E Cesar E Chavez Blvd" whereas in another database it could be listed as "East Cesar Chavez Boulevard". Due to inconsistences in naming conventions of streets, I focus just on the street number and zip code.

- 64. I combine the address information with the date of birth and gender (represented by "M" or "F") of registrants. I call this combination ADG, for address + date of birth + gender. For instance. John Smith's ADG combination would be 655782051976-07-04M. If the individual does not have residential address information listed but does have mailing address information listed, I use the mailing address (and PO boxes, when street addresses are not present) in place of the residential address.
- 65. The ADG identifier can be constructed for all registrants who have a gender, birthdate, and address listed. This amounts to 16,398,349 individuals (96.31% of TEAM). Of these, the ADG identifier is unique for 99.29% of them. This compares to 98.62% for ND and 98.18% for SSN. Among individuals who are unique on SSN, 99.52% are also unique on ADG.
- 66. As with the other identifiers, there are rare circumstances where two different individuals share the same ADG identifier. For instance, two twins of the same gender who are registered at the same address would be two different people with a

- matching ADG. As with the other identifiers, I only seek to link records based on ADG for individuals who are unique on ADG in the TEAM file. Thus, in the case of same-gender, same-address twins, I would not seek to link them to DPS based on ADG. However, assuming they are uniquely identified by either their SSN or DN, they would be linked to the DPS file in those ways.
- 67. Just as the ND combination will not match individuals if there is a discrepancy in the name or date of birth field, the ADG combination will not match individuals if there is a discrepancy in the address, gender, or date of birth fields. The most likely scenario of a non-match on ADG is when an individual has an old residential address listed on one database and a new residential address listed on another database. If a person has two different addresses listed on TEAM and DPS, then the person's records will not match on ADG. However, assuming the individual has a unique SSN9 listed OR has his/her name and birthdate listed consistently across databases, then the person on TEAM would match to his/her record on DPS. Out of all 17,026,054 registered voters, I can attempt to link all but 39,549 (0.23%) records to DPS. These 0.23% of records are not unique on the TEAM file on any of SSN9, ND, or ADG.
- 68. Table 6 summarizes the names of the fields used to match across databases. On the DPS file, I create a parallel set of fields: SSN9, ND, and ADG. The major difference between preparing the TEAM file and the DPS file is that the DPS file has multiple rows of individuals who have more than one DPS ID Number. Thus, the linkage fields are meant to uniquely identify individual people on DPS but they are not meant to uniquely identify individual records. When linking records between TEAM and DPS, I thus perform 1-to-many merges. This means that for each TEAM record that is unique on SSN9, I find one or more records on DPS that match that SSN9. For each TEAM record that is unique on ND, I find one or more records on DPS that match that ND. And for each TEAM record that is unique on ADG, I find one or more records on DPS that match that ADG.

TABLE 6: Summary of Fields Used in Linking TEAM Database to DPS Database

Field Name	Explanation	"John Smith" example
SSN9	9-digit social security number	"123-45-6789"
ND	First name + Last name + Date of birth	"JOHNSMITH1977-07-04"
ADG	Address + Date of birth + Gender	"655782051976-07-04M"

- 69. In creating these linkage combinations, some questions may arise. First, if a record in TEAM links to a record on DPS based on ND or ADG, how confident ought we be that the person with these name, birthdate, address, and gender attributes on TEAM is the same person with these attributes on DPS? Below, I will validate the accuracy of the linkage technique by comparing social security numbers of those who match on ND or ADG. I will show that a person who matches on ND or ADG almost always matches on SSN9 as well. And when the person does not have matching SSN9s, it is far more likely to be due to a typographical error in SSN9 rather than a false positive match on ND or ADG.
- 70. The second question that arises is why use the particular combinations here (ND and ADG) rather than other possible combinations. Indeed, in prior court cases and published work, I utilized alternative algorithms. For instance, in Fish v. Kobach, I utilized ND, ADN (address, date of birth, and name), and AD (address and date of - birth). In Hersh and Ansolabehere (2017), which relates to expert testimony of Dr. Ansolabehere in Veasey v. Perry, we used several additional combinations, such as gender, date of birth, and name (GDN).

- 71. The exact set of linking combinations depends on the features of the data and the research question in any particular case. The methodology can be adapted based on what is needed. For instance, in Veasey v. Perry, a nine-digit social security number was only available for half of registered voters in Texas (Ansolabehere and Hersh, 2017). In the present case, SSN9 is available for over 90% of registrants. As such, one need to rely less on combinations of other identifiers. In the current data, because gender is missing for about 4% of records but name and birthdate are missing for less than 0.01% of records, it is advantageous to link based on name and birthdate (ND) without adding gender to that combination. Because first names are typically distinctive by gender, gender only aids in generating unique identifiers in rare cases when two individuals with the exact same name and birthdate are of different genders.
- 72. The combinations used here, ND and ADG, are advantageous because they uniquely identify almost every registered voter and together, they are able to do so without using the name field (in the case of ADG) and the address field (in the case of ND). Due to residential moves, nick-names, and married names, these two fields can be stored inconsistently across databases. Successive attempts at matching based on SSN9, ND, and ADG allow for matches to individuals who are missing data or have inconsistent records on SSN9, name, address, and gender.

73. Finally, as the analysis below demonstrates, the three linkages used here identify almost all (98.7%) of registrants on the DPS database who have a DPS ID Number listed on TEAM. Additional attempts to link the databases based on different combinations of address, gender, date of birth, and name would only serve to find a few more DPS ID holders and identify a few more instances of problems associated with SB 1's identification number requirements.

Subpopulations

- 74. In addition to preparing the DPS database and TEAM databases as described above, I prepare the data files so I can observe rates of problematic SSN4s and DPS ID Numbers for specific subpopulations of registered voters.
 - a. Over 65: I create a file that notes every registered voter listed as born before 1957 and after 1906. This represents the over-65 population (excluding those with implausibly old birthdates).
 - b. Recent Voters: I create a file that notes every registered voter who cast a ballot in the November 2020 election. Why these voters? I sought to determine whether problems with the ID verification requirement are just concentrated among registrants who have obsolete records or who have not recently cast ballots. If that were the case, maybe the problems identified would not be seen as acute. However, problems affecting records of individuals who just recently voted suggests the identification verification requirement impacts actively engaged voters.

- c. Overseas Voters: I create a file that notes every registered voter who has a non-US mailing address. These could include some members of the armed forces, military families, and other overseas citizens who would be particularly likely to cast ballots by mail.
- d. Homebound/Disabled Veteran: In the DPS database, individuals are flagged if they have a status as a disabled veteran or a homebound person. I perform a separate link between TEAM records and the DPS records of those who have a disabled veteran flag or homebound flag using the same methodology as used for the general population.

VI. Linkage Part I: TEAM Records with missing DPS ID Numbers

- 75. I divide the analysis into two parts. First, I examine individuals whose TEAM records do not show any DPS ID Number. Second, I examine individuals whose TEAM records do show a DPS ID Number.
- 76. Out of 17,026,054 records in TEAM, 537,270 do not have a DPS ID Number listed in the voter registration records. If any of these individuals actually has a DPS ID Number, they are instructed by the mail ballot application forms to include that DPS ID Number. But SB 1 requires that these forms the application and the ballot itself to be rejected because the DPS ID Number is not listed on TEAM.
- 77. Registrants who do not have a DPS ID Number recorded on TEAM are different from those who do have a DPS ID Number recorded on TEAM. Namely, they are older.

 The median age for a registrant without a DPS ID Number on TEAM is 58. The median age for a registrant with a DPS ID Number on TEAM is 48. Whereas 24% of individuals with a DPS ID Number on TEAM are 65 or older, that rate is nearly double (42%) for individuals without a DPS ID Number. Age 65 and older is relevant as all voters 65 and older may request an absentee ballot under Texas law.

TABLE 7: TEAM records by Presence/Absence of Unique SSN9 and DPS ID

Number

		Unique SSN9
	Present Absent TOTAL			TOTAL
DPS ID	Present	15,745,864	742,920	16,488,784
Number	Absent	149,888	387,382	537,270

- 78. I link the 537,270 individuals who do not have DPS ID Numbers recorded in TEAM to the DPS database using the SSN, ND, and ADG techniques described above.
- 79. I first link by SSN9. Of the 537,270 individuals without a DPS ID Number, 149,888 have a unique SSN9 listed (as noted in Table 7). Of those, 83.93% match to the DPS database by their SSN9. A total of 76.18% of the records match to a single DPS ID Number, and 7.75% link to multiple DPS ID Numbers.
- 80. I next link these individuals based on ND. As noted in Table 7, most individuals who lack DPS ID Numbers on TEAM also lack an SSN9. However, nearly all of the records have a unique ND combination. Of the 537,270 lacking a DPS ID Number on TEAM, 517,283 (96.28%) have a unique ND. Of those who have a unique ND, 33.86% match to a single DPS record and 5.46% match to multiple DPS records.
- 81. I next link these individuals based on ADG. Of 537,270 records lacking a DPS ID Number on TEAM, 478,632 (89.09%) have a unique ADG. Of those with a unique ADG, 36.82% match to a single DPS record and 4.54% match to multiple DPS records.

TABLE 8: Results of Linking TEAM to DPS Records for TEAM Records without a DPS ID Number listed

	No Match to DPS	Single Match to DPS	Multiple Match to DPS	Attempted to Match
SSN9	16.07%	76.18%	7.75%	149,888
ND	60.68	33.86	5.46	517,283
ADG	58.63	36.82	4.54	478,632
Any	47.97	45.64	6.39	531,251

- 82. Table 8 summarizes the analysis of records that do not have a DPS ID Number listed on the TEAM voter file. Each of the first three rows summarizes a linkage between TEAM and DPS based on SSN9, ND, and ADG, respectively. For instance, the first row shows that I attempted to match 149,888 records in TEAM based on SSN9. This reflects the number of TEAM records with a unique SSN9. Of those, 16.07% did not match to DPS. The others did match.
- 83. The bottom row of Table 8 provides the overall summary for the TEAM records lacking a DPS ID Number. Of the 537,270 total records lacking a DPS ID Number, I attempted to link 531,251 (98.88%) to the DPS database. (The other 1.12% did not have a unique or complete value for SSN9, ND, or ADG). Of the 531,251 individuals I attempted to find on DPS, a majority (52.03%) matched to a DPS record. That amounts to 276,405 registered voters. These individuals possess a DPS ID Number and therefore are instructed by Texas's mail ballot forms to list their DPS ID Number on their mail ballot application. However, SB 1 requires that their ballot application, and their ballot, to be rejected because the number is not listed on TEAM.
- 84. Subpopulations: Of the 276,405 individual who match to DPS and have a DPS ID Number even though no such number is listed on TEAM,

- 155,583 are over age 65
- 95,892 voted in the 2020 election
- 59,567 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
- 374 have non-US mailing addresses
- 781 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

These numbers clearly show that many active voters who are eligible to vote by mail under Texas law are listed in TEAM without DPS ID Numbers but do in fact possess DPS ID Numbers.

A. Validation of Methodology

85. There are obvious reasons why an individual who matches on SSN9 would fail to match on ND or ADG. If there is a nickname used in one database, if a surname has changed, if gender is not recorded as male or female, or if an address has changed, this would cause individuals who match on SSN9 not to match on one or more of the other combinations. However, individuals who match on ND or ADG but DO NOT match on SSN9 present a puzzle. Do these individuals fail to match on SSN9 because ND or ADG are causing false positive matches between two different people? Or do these individuals fail to match on SSN9 because the SSN9 information is recorded in error on either TEAM or DPS?

TABLE 9: Rates of Mismatches on SSN9 for Records that Matched on ND or ADG

If matched on	SSN9 Match	SSN9 No Match	N
ADG	97.66	2.34	98,547

- 86. In Table 9, I show how often records that match on ND or ADG do not match on SSN9. It is rare. For instance, the first row assesses those who have SSN9 present on both TEAM and DPS and who matched on ND. Of these 83,504 individual records, 97.63% also matched on SSN. As the table shows, on both ND and ADG, just over 2 percent of individuals have mismatched SSN9s.
- 87. In these 2 percent of cases with mismatched SSN9s, I conduct a further analysis. This analysis demonstrates conclusively that individuals who match on ND or ADG but not on SSN9 fail to match because of typos in SSN9 rather than because these linkage strategies generate false-positive matches.
- 88. The further analysis I conduct uses a measurement tool known as Levenshtein distance. The Levenshtein distance is simply the number of characters in a string that would need to change in order for two strings to match each other. For instance, consider these two strings of numbers. String #1 is: 123-45-6789. String #2 is: 123-45-6788. The Levenshtein distance between these two strings is 1, since only one character would need to change for these two strings to be identical. Now consider the Levenshtein distance between String #1 (123-45-6789) and a new string, String #3. String #3 is 987-65-4321. The Levenshtein distance between String #1 and String #3 is 8, because 8 of the 9 numbers in String #1 (all the numbers except the 5) would need to change for 123-45-6789 to equal 987-65-4321.
- 89. Now consider the registrants in TEAM who match to individuals in DPS based on their ND or ADG, but they do not have matching SSN9s. If these represent false-positive matches (i.e. two different people who share traits such as name, address, birthdate, and gender), then their social security numbers should be entirely different from one another. If their social security numbers are entirely different from one another, then the Levenshtein distance should be high (i.e. most or all of the numbers in the SSN9 would need to change for these two random people to have matching SSN9s). However, consider another possibility, which is that the person who matches on ND or ADG but not on SSN9 is one individual with one SSN9, but there is an error in how this person's SSN9 is recorded either on TEAM or on DPS. The recording error in a Texas database would be the reason the records do not match based on an SSN9. If there is a typographical error on one or two of the digits, then the Levenshstein distance would be low (i.e. just one or two of the digits would need to change for these two SSN9s to match).

TABLE 10: Levenshtein Distance Measures between SSN9 on DPS and SSN9 on TEAM for records that match on ND or ADG but Do Not Match on SSN9

	ND	ADG
1	65.49%	66.07%
2	18.47	18.98
3	2.57	2.61
4	1.87	1.95
5	1.56	1.61
6	2.62	2.65
7	3.18	2.52
8	2.98	2.69
9	1.26	0.91
N	1,982	2,302

90. For each record that matches on ND or ADG but does not match on SSN9, I compare the SSN9 as it is recorded in TEAM and the SSN9 as it is recorded in DPS. In Table 10, I record the distribution of Levenshtein distances. As is shown, for approximately 85% of these cases, the Levenshtein distance is 1 or 2, which signals that the SSN9s as recorded in TEAM and DPS are identical but for one or two digits. Table 10 provides conclusive evidence that in the rare cases in which records match on DN or AGD but not on SSN9, it is overwhelmingly because there are typos in the recording of SSN9s.

B. Typographical Errors in SSN4

91. The above analysis is not only useful in validating the linkage technique used here. It also signals an issue with SB 1. Namely, some typos in SSN9 happen to be in the last four digits of the social security number. A registered voter who applies for a mail ballot and records their SSN4 correctly on the application will have their application rejected if there is a typo in SSN4. Among registrants who lack a DPS ID Number recorded on TEAM but who match to a record in DPS based on ND or ADG, I compare the SSN4 as recorded on the two databases. I find that 3,726 individuals who appear on both databases have discrepancies in their SSN4s. If the DPS records of SSN are correct, then these 3,726 cases result from inaccuracies on TEAM. They would result in election officials rejected mail ballot forms from citizens who include their correct SSN4 on the forms.

VII. Linkage Part II: TEAM Records Listed with DPS ID Numbers

92. I now turn to the analysis of the 16,488,784 records in which a DPS ID Number is listed in the TEAM databases. As noted above, in Table 7, 95.5% of these records have a unique SSN9 associated with them. I first link these records to DPS by matching on SSN9. Of 15,745,864 records with a unique SSN9 on TEAM, 99.66%

- match to a record in DPS. However, 15.60% of the records match to more than one DPS ID Number.
- 93. Next, I link records based on the ND combination. The ND combination is unique for 16,269,349 individuals who have a DPS ID Number listed on TEAM. Of these, 97.39% match to a record in DPS. However, 15.20% match to more than one DPS ID Number.
- 94. Next, I link records based on the ADG combination. The ADG combination is unique for 15,803,406 individuals who have a DPS ID Number listed on TEAM. Of these, 79.32% match to a record in DPS. However, 9.84% match to more than one DPS ID Number. Notice, fewer individuals on TEAM match to records on DPS based on the ADG indicator compared to the ND indicator. This is attributable to residential address differences between individuals listed on TEAM and those same individuals listed on DPS.

TABLE 11: Results of Linking TEAM to DPS Records for TEAM Records with a DPS ID Number listed

	No Match to DPS	Single Match to DPS	Multiple Match to DPS	Attempted to Match
SSN9	0.34%	84.06%	15.60%	15,745,864
ND	2.61	82.19	15.20	16,269,349
ADG	20.68	69.48	9.84	15,803,406
Any	1.30	85.25	13.45	16,455,254

95. Table 11 summarizes the analysis of records missing a DPS ID Number on the voter file. Consider the bottom row. Of the 16,488,784 records in TEAM listed with a DPS ID Number, I attempted to link 16,455,264 (99.80%) of them to the DPS database. The remaining 0.20% did not have a unique or complete record on SSN, ND, and

ADG. Of these 16,455,254 records, 98.70% (that is, all but 1.30%) matched to a record in DPS. However, 13.45% of these 16.5 million people are listed more than once on DPS, with multiple ID numbers. These 13.45% of records sum up to 2,213,676 records. That is, for 2.2 million Texas registered voters who have a DPS ID Number listed, they may put a correct DPS ID Number on their mail ballot application form but nevertheless have their application (or their ballot) rejected because the DPS ID Number they write down, while correct, happens not to be the DPS ID Number recorded on the TEAM file.

- 96. The 2.2 million figure may be a significant underestimate. Recall that on about 10% of rows in the DPS file, ID holders are listed not just with one DPS ID Number but they have alternative ID numbers stored as "AKA DL/ID Numbers." Of the 14,027,371 TEAM records that linked to a single DPS ID Number, 1,412,213 of them linked to a record that listed alternative ID numbers in the "AKA DL/ID Number" field. If these ID Numbers are current or expired Texas ID Numbers such as driver's license numbers, a registrant who uses these alternative numbers when submitting a mail ballot application or mail ballot would also have his or her forms rejected. However, as stated earlier, it is unclear from the information Texas has provided thus far whether the "AKA DL/ID Number" field includes any DPS ID Number or some DPS ID Numbers combined with ID numbers from other states or other kinds of numbers altogether. Accordingly, I will focus here on registered voters who have multiple DPS ID Numbers exclusive of the AKA DL/ID Numbers.
- 97. Subpopulations: Of the 2,213,676 individuals who match to multiple DPS ID Numbers,

- 189,699 are over age 65
- 1,105,194 voted in the 2020 election
- 114,129 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
- 277 have non-US mailing addresses
- 5,308 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

These numbers show that many active voters who are eligible to vote by mail under

Texas law are listed in TEAM with a DPS ID Number but possess multiple DPS ID

Numbers. If they list a DPS ID Number other than the one that happens to be recorded in TEAM, SB 1 requires their mail ballot forms to be rejected.

A. Validation of Methodology

98. As in the analysis regarding individuals not listed with DPS ID Numbers, I now conduct the same validation exercise for those who do have DPS ID Numbers listed.

Namely, I investigate the records that matched between TEAM and DPS based on ND and/or ADG, but did not match across databases on SSN9.

TABLE 12 Rates of Mismatches on SSN9 for Records that Matched on ND or ADG

SSN9
If matched	Match	No Match	N on
ND	99.81	0.19	15,420,951
ADG	99.78	0.22	12,100,999

99. In Table 12, I restrict the analysis to those who have an SSN9 recorded both in the TEAM file and the DPS file. The rows indicate the percent that matched on SSN9. As

Table 11 shows, if an individual record linked based on ND or ADG, the record also links based on SSN9 in 99.8% of cases. But even in these 0.2% of cases, why do individuals link on name, address, date of birth, and gender, but not on SSN9?

TABLE 13: Levenshtein Distance Measures between SSN9 on DPS and SSN9 on TEAM for records that match on ND or ADG but Do Not Match on SSN9

	ND	ADG
1	70.06%	70.51%
2	19.24	19.30
3	2.36	2.32
4	1.56	1.56
5	0.71	0.70
6	1.27	1.19
7	1.85	1.65
8	1.99	1.86
9	0.94	0.91
N	29,982	26,520

100. As Table 13 shows, in 90% of cases in which a record links based on ND or ADG but not SSN9, the SSN9 listed in TEAM and the SSN9 listed in DPS are off by just one or two digits. This is indicative that typos in one or two positions in an SSN9 are the cause of most the mismatches.

B. Typographical Errors in SSN4

101. Looking just at the last 4 digits of social security numbers, I calculate the number of individuals in TEAM who match to records in DPS based on ND and ADG, but whose TEAM records show a different SSN4 than is shown on DPS. There are 40,718 individuals who appear on DPS with different SSN4s than shown on TEAM. If the DPS database is correct and these individuals mark down their correct SSN4 on a mail ballot application, then their application will be rejected because of incorrectly recorded data in TEAM.

- 102. Subpopulations: Of the 40,718 individuals whose SSN4s listed on TEAM do not match the SSN4s listed in the DPS database
 - 15,544 are over age 65
 - 28,880 voted in the 2020 election
 - 12,015 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
 - 25 have non-US mailing addresses
 - 98 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

These numbers clearly show that many active voters who are eligible to vote by mail under Texas law are listed in TEAM with an SSN4 that is inconsistent with the SSN4 listed in the DPS database.

C. Typographical Errors in DPS ID Numbers

103. Just as there are discrepancies between the SSNs listed in TEAM and the corresponding SSNs listed in DPS, there are also discrepancies in DPS ID Numbers. However, they are more complicated to tabulate. For each of the three linkages (SSN9, ND, and ADG), I calculate the rate of mismatches on DPS ID between the two databases. As Table 14 shows, in over 99% of cases, the DPS ID Number listed on TEAM matches one of the DPS ID Numbers listed in the DPS database. (In this analysis, for registrants who match to multiple DPS ID Numbers, I count them in the "match" column if one of the DPS ID Numbers listed in DPS matches the DPS ID Number listed in TEAM.)

TABLE 14 Rates of Mismatches on DPS ID Number for Records that Matched on SSN9, ND, or ADG

If matched on	DPS ID Match	DPS ID No Match	N
SSN9	99.59	0.41	15,692,006
ADG	99.24	0.76	12,536,045

on TEAM and the DPS ID Numbers recorded on DPS. The table makes the calculation for the less than 1% of individuals who have mismatched DPS ID Numbers. For individuals on TEAM whose records match to multiple DPS ID Numbers, the table reflects the DPS ID Number on the DPS database that is closest (i.e. has the lowest Levenshstein distance).

TABLE 15: Levenshtein Distance Measures between DPS ID Number on DPS and DPS ID Number on TEAM for records that match on SSN9, ND, or ADG

	SSN9	ND	ADG
1	25.36%	26.05%	15.71%
2	6.94	7.22	4.51
3	1.25	1.33	1.13
4	2.20	2.22	2.47
5	8.58	8.35	9.93
6	22.54	21.64	25.92
7	24.89	24.70	29.76
8	8.24	8.49	10.57
N	64,346	68,959	94,870

- 105. As Table 15 shows, about 20-33% of mismatched DPS ID Numbers are off by just one or two digits. The majority of those with mismatched DPS ID Numbers show entirely different DPS ID Numbers. For example, consider the 64,346 individuals (Table 15, Column 1) who have a DPS ID Number and SSN9 listed on TEAM. They were matched to DPS records based on their SSN9. However, a comparison between the DPS ID Number listed in TEAM and the DPS ID Number listed in the DPS database show mismatching DPS ID Numbers. While a third of these are just off by one or two digits (suggesting typographical errors), most are showing completely different DPS ID Numbers.
- 106. Why does this occur? In some of the cases where the DPS ID Numbers are completely different, it is because these individuals in TEAM have a typo in their social security numbers rather than their DPS ID Numbers. When they match to a record in the DPS ID database based on their SSN9, they are actually matching to a different person (i.e. they match to the person who has the social security number that is incorrectly recorded for them). In other cases, these registrants may be matching to the right record in DPS, but the DPS database shows an entirely different DPS ID Number than is shown in TEAM.
- Number listed in TEAM that is different than the DPS ID Number listed in DPS, I cannot count all the results in Table 15. Some of these individuals might have an accurate DPS ID Number but they have an inaccurate SSN9, so if they just use their DPS ID Number when submitting a mail ballot application, their application would not be rejected.

- Levenshtein distance of any of three linkages (SSN9, ND, ADG). An example will help explain this. Suppose John Smith has a typo in his SSN9 as it is listed in TEAM. His SSN9 is 123-45-6789, but it is listed in TEAM as 123-45-6788. When I link his record to DPS, his links to another person's records. She is Jane Doe, and her SSN9 is 123-45-6788. Now, when I compare the DPS ID Number on John Smith's TEAM record to the DPS ID Number on the record he matches to (Jane Doe's record), the DPS ID Numbers are completely different. They might have a Levenshtein distance of 6, 7, or 8.
- 109. However, I also link John Smith to his DPS record based on his ND and ADG combinations. In those linkages, Smith links to his actual record in DPS. If there are no typos or other discrepancies in how his DPS ID Number is stored, he would have a Levenshtein distance of zero, and I would not treat this as a problematic record with respect to the DPS ID Number. (I would, of course, treat it as a problematic record with respect to the faulty SSN9). However, suppose that Smith also has a typo or other discrepancy in his DPS ID Number. On TEAM, his DPS ID Number would read 11223345, but on the DPS database his DPS ID Number would read 11223344. The comparison between these numbers would generate a Levenshtein distance of 1.
- 110. For each person in TEAM, I thus calculate the Levenhstein distance between their DPS ID Number listed in TEAM and the closest DPS ID Number they link to in the DPS database. By this conservative estimation method, I calculate that 68,190 individuals do not have a DPS ID Number in TEAM that matches any DPS ID Number in DPS.

- 111. Subpopulations: Of the 68,190 individuals on TEAM who match to DPS on SSN9, ND, and ADG, but do not have DPS ID Numbers that correspond to the DPS database,
 - 17,270 are over age 65
 - 34,187 voted in the 2020 election
 - 11,690 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
 - 18 have non-US mailing addresses
 - 370 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

VIII. Summary of Results

- 112. To comply with the identification verification requirements in SB 1, registered voters who have a DPS ID are instructed to record their ID number on a mail ballot application and again when submitting a mail ballot. If they do not have an ID number, they must record their SSN4.
 - a. 276,405 registered voters are not listed in TEAM with a DPS ID, but they do have a DPS ID. These individuals are instructed to list their DPS ID, but when they do so, their ballot or ballot application will be rejected.
 - i. Of these, 155,583 are over 65 years old, 59,567 of whom voted as recently as the 2020 general election.
 - ii. Of these, 1,155 have overseas addresses or are listed as disabled veterans or as homebound citizens.
 - b. 2,213,676 individuals who are listed on TEAM with an associated DPS ID have more than one DPS ID Number. If they happen to write down a DPS ID number that is correct but is not the DPS ID number recorded in TEAM, their ballot or ballot application will be rejected.

- i. Of these, 189,699 are over 65 years old, 114,129 of whom voted as recently as the 2020 general election.
- ii. Of these, 5,585 have overseas addresses or are listed as disabled veterans or as homebound citizens.
- c. 44,444 individuals have SSN4s listed in their TEAM records that do not match the SSN4s listed in the DPS database.
- d. At least 68,190 individuals who are listed on TEAM registration records with a DPS ID Number do not show the same DPS ID Number listed in the DPS database.
- 113. Altogether, over 2.6 million registered voters in Texas (out of 17 million) are at risk of having a mail ballot or mail ballot application rejected due to identification number requirements in SB 1. These numbers do not include individuals who have misplaced or surrendered their IDs or who mis-enter information on a mail ballot form. These 2.6 million individuals can correctly fill out their forms, but their applications and ballots would be rejected nonetheless.

IX. Conclusion

114. The identification number requirements of SB 1 require election officials to reject mail ballots and mail ballot applications from a large number of voters due to limitations and errors in the state's record-keeping practices rather than due to any limitations or oversights on the part of eligible voters. Texas's databases are simply not well-suited to SB 1's demands. The law demands that those who have a DPS ID list the ID number on mail ballot applications. Yet, many of these ID numbers are not stored by Texas on its voter registration records. The law demands that some registrants include social security number information. But the state database has tens of thousands of typos in its recording of Texans' social security numbers. The database has even more typos in its recording of Texans' DPS ID Numbers. The law demands that voters list one of their DPS ID numbers when applying for a mail ballot, but millions of voters have more than one DPS ID number, and election official are only able to validate one of them.

the demands of SB 1 results in election officials delaying and/or preventing citizens from casting ballots who follow all the rules and are eligible to vote by mail. As I have shown, over 2.6 million Texans can follow all the rules and instructions set forth by SB 1 when applying for, or submitting, an absentee ballot, and they still face a substantial risk that their applications and ballots will be rejected. Those affected include Texans living overseas, disabled veterans and homebound citizens living at home, plus over 350,000 senior citizens.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States that the forgoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge.

Supplement to

Report on Identification Number Requirements for Mail Balloting under SB 1

United States v. Texas

United States District Court for the Western District of Texas

May 4, 2022

I. Abstract

- 1. Since I filed my expert report on February 28, 2022, I have received updated Department of Public Safety (DPS) data and updated voter registration (TEAM) data from the State of Texas. I have also received a rebuttal to my report written by Dr. Mark Hoekstra. Finally, I have received voter history information from the March 1, 2022 Texas primary, the first election that was administered under the identification verification rules set forth by Senate Bill 1 (SB 1).
- 2. In this supplemental report, I re-run the main analysis conducted in my February report with the updated DPS and TEAM data. Then, I respond to the main points raised by Dr. Hoekstra. Lastly, I conduct a new analysis of data from the March 1 primary.
- 3. My key findings are as follows:
 - a. In spite of the passage of several months of time that might have allowed databases to be updated and identification issues to be resolved, my updated analysis finds that over 1 in 7 Texas registered voters can submit a mail ballot application and/or a mail ballot in perfect accordance with SB 1 and yet election officials must reject the voters' forms.
 - Tens of thousands of registered voters are listed with typos in the DPS ID numbers and/or Social Security Numbers on the databases maintained by election officials.
 - Hundreds of thousands of individuals who have valid DPS IDs are not listed in election records with these ID numbers.
 - Over two million individuals have multiple DPS IDs, while only one of the numbers is listed by election officials.

Altogether, over 2.7 million out of 17.3 million registered voters could fill out a mail ballot form correctly and have it rejected due to one or more of these circumstances. This population includes many Texans over 65-years-old, Texans who are homebound and disabled veterans, and active-duty members of the military and their families.

b. Following this update to my analysis, I address critical flaws in the rebuttal report of Dr. Hoekstra. I explain how Dr. Hoekstra's framework for analyzing the effects of SB 1 (i.e., estimating the typical number of voters who will be burdened in any given election) is inappropriate. Using data from the March 2022 primary election, I also show how Dr. Hoekstra's analysis is wrong even on his own terms of evaluation. Whereas Dr. Hoekstra argues that "the likely burden on the...registered voters who will either have to cure their ballot or vote in person as a result of SB 1 is likely minimal, and quite possibly zero," I find that the vast majority of Texans whose mail ballots were rejected due to SB 1 in March 2022 did not end up voting at all, either by mail or in person.

II. Updated analysis using new versions of DPS and TEAM databases

A. Databases

4. DPS. The updated DPS database I received is dated March 13, 2022. The database contains 36,417,304 records, an increase of 189,485 (0.5%) records from the January 2022 version of the file I analyzed in my main report. As in the version previously analyzed, the March version of the data has complete or nearly complete records in all fields of interest (e.g., name, date of birth, address, gender) except that 5% of records are

- not populated with Social Security Numbers, which was also the case in the January data.

 Table 1 below updates Table 1 of my main report with the new data.
- 5. The March update to the DPS database contains an additional field that was not previously made available to me: "Card Status." The status field is populated with a variety of codes. Of relevance here is a code named "Voluntary Surrender," which may indicate that the ID holder does not possess a physical identification card with that ID number listed on it. Without a physical identification card, it may be difficult for a person to access their ID number and write it on a government form.

TABLE 1: Rate of Missing Information in DPS

Missing SSN	4.98%
Missing unique SSN9	28.65
Missing First Name	0.00
Missing Last Name	0.00
Missing Birthdate	0.00
Missing M/F Gender	0.00
Missing Street Number	0.03
Missing Zip Code	0.00
TOTAL IN DATABASE	36,417,304

6. TEAM. The updated version of TEAM records is dated April 21, 2022. In the TEAM data, each county's records are stored in a different file. Registered voters can be listed on many lines within a county file. For instance, Texas counts 29,128 registered voters in Anderson County as of March 2022. In the April TEAM export I received, there are

261,644 rows of registrants in Anderson County. Different rows show different interactions that registrants have had with the election system. For each county file, I processed the data so that each person, represented by their Voter Unique Identification Number (VUID), is listed one time. Specifically, I observed the dates labeled "ballot_last_updated" and retained the most recent date for each registrant. I also retained registrants who had no date listed in this field. If there were registrants with multiple records but only one of the records listed a Social Security Number (SSN) or DPS ID Number, I retained the record with those identifiers. I retained the fields of interest (e.g., name, address, date of birth, and so forth) and combined the 254 county files into a single file. I then identified individuals who had records in multiple county files. I kept only one record for each of these individuals, again ensuring to retain a record with an SSN or DPS ID if only one of the records contained these identifiers.

7. After the de-duplication process, the April TEAM file consists of 17,330,189 records. I sought to confirm that this number is close to the state's official reporting. According to the Secretary of State's website, as of March 2022, there were 17,183,996 registered Texas voters. Given the typical fluctuation in registration numbers and the fact that the April 21 records were pulled several weeks after the publicly reported numbers were calculated, a difference of less than 1% suggests the data I have been given by the state is consistent with the state's publicly reported information.

B. Data Quality Checks in the TEAM Voter Records

8. I performed the same set of data quality checks as described in my initial report. Tables 2 and 3 offer summary statistics on key fields of interest. There are slightly fewer records listed with Social Security Numbers and slightly more records listed with DPS ID

Numbers. Specifically, whereas 2.34% of records in TEAM were missing an SSN in the January data, 2.52% of records are missing an SSN in the April data. Whereas 3.16% of records in TEAM were missing a DPS ID Number in the January data, 2.85% of records are missing a DPS ID Number in the April data.

- 9. The numbers are all similar to the January data, with the exception of the address fields. Whereas less than 1% of records in the January file were missing values for street number and zipcode, over 20% of the records in the April file are missing this information. The absence of address information is concentrated in registration records that also have a blank "ballot last updated" field.
- 10. The difference in the address fields may be attributable to the fact that state supplied me with a different format of the database in April than in January. Ultimately, it is not clear to me why the state's April records show so many voters with missing address information. However, as my methodology uses information other than address information (e.g., name and birthdate, SSN), I can proceed to update the analysis from my prior report with the March and April data. And, indeed, the overall results are very similar in this supplementary report as in my initial report.

C. Methodology

11. The methodology employed is the same as in my initial report. See Paragraphs 50-73 in that report for a detailed explanation. My goal is to look up each registered voter in the DPS database and determine if the registered voter has one (or more) DPS ID Numbers listed, and to see if there are typos or other inconsistencies between the DPS ID Numbers and SSN4s listed on TEAM versus those listed on the DPS Database. I create three linkage fields to connect the TEAM and DPS databases together. The first field is the nine-digit Social Security Number (SSN9). The second field is the combination of name (First and Last) and date of birth. I call this linkage field "ND" for Name + Date of Birth. The third field, a combination of Address (Street Number and Zipcode) + Date of Birth + Gender, I call "ADG". Table 4 (a replica of Table 6 from my previous report) illustrates the three linking fields with an example of a fictional registered voter named John Smith.

TABLE 4: Summary of Fields Used in Linking TEAM Database to DPS Database

Field Name	Explanation	"John Smith" example
SSN9	9-digit social security number	"123-45-6789"
ND	First name + Last name + Date of birth	"JOHNSMITH1977-07-04"
ADG	Address + Date of birth + Gender	"655782051976-07-04M"

12. As in the main report, in addition to calculating statistics for the whole population of registered voters, I also look at several subpopulations. In the prior report, I observed a.) registered voters over age 65, b.) 2020 general election voters, c.) voters with overseas mailing addresses, and d.) individuals marked in the DPS database as homebound or disabled veterans. In this report, I again investigate registrants over 65, registrants who voted in 2020, and registrants who have homebound/disabled veteran statuses. Instead of looking at voters with overseas mailing addresses (a population that may contain members of the armed forces and military families), I investigate registrants who are listed with specific codes in TEAM signaling that they have applied for Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) registration forms, which are voter registration forms used by members of the military, their families, and Americans who are residing overseas. I refer to these as FPCA voters. Finally, I also investigate the subpopulation of registrants who match to DPS records indicating that their licenses have been "voluntarily surrendered."

D. Linkage Part I: TEAM Records with missing DPS ID Numbers

- 13. I divide the analysis into two parts. First, I examine individuals whose TEAM records do not show any DPS ID Number. Second, I examine individuals whose TEAM records do show a DPS ID Number.
- 14. Out of 17,330,189 records in TEAM, 494,148 do not have a DPS ID Number listed in the voter registration records. If any of these individuals actually has a DPS ID Number, they are instructed by the mail ballot application forms to include that DPS ID Number (and only that identification number). But SB 1 requires that these forms the application and the ballot carrier envelope to be rejected because the DPS ID Number is not listed within registration records.

TABLE 5: TEAM records by Presence/Absence of Unique SSN9 and DPS ID

Number

Unique SSN9
		Present	Absent	TOTAL
DPS ID	Present	16,144,007	692,034	16,836,041
Number	Absent	102,784	391,364	494,148

- 15. I link the 494,148 individuals who do not have DPS ID Numbers recorded in TEAM to the DPS database using the SSN, ND, and ADG linkage fields that are described in Paragraph 11 above.
- 16. I first link by SSN9. Of the 494,148 individuals without a DPS ID Number, 102,784 have a unique SSN9 listed (as noted in Table 5). Of those, 73.33% match to the DPS database by their SSN9. A total of 66.76% of the records match to a single DPS ID Number, and 6.56% link to multiple DPS ID Numbers.
- 17. I next link these individuals based on ND. As noted in Table 5, most individuals who lack DPS ID Numbers on TEAM also lack an SSN9. However, nearly all of the records have a unique ND combination. Of the 494,148 lacking a DPS ID Number on TEAM, 482,787 (97.7%) have a unique ND. Of those who have a unique ND, 25.81% match to a single DPS record and 4.58% match to multiple DPS records.
- 18. I next link these individuals based on ADG. Of 498,148 records lacking a DPS ID Number on TEAM, 231,002 (46.74%) have a unique ADG. Recall that many more records in the April TEAM data are missing address information than in the January data. ADG is the only linking field that makes use of address information. Of those with a unique ADG, 38.98% match to a single DPS record and 3.85% match to multiple DPS records.

TABLE 6: Results of Linking TEAM to DPS Records for TEAM Records without a DPS ID Number listed

	No Match to DPS	Single Match to DPS	Multiple Match to DPS	Attempted to Match
SSN9	26.67%	66.76%	6.56%	102,784
ND	69.61	25.81	4.58	482,787
ADG	57.16	38.98	3.85	231,002
Any	57.00	37.39	5.58	486,421

- 19. Table 6 summarizes the analysis of records that do not have a DPS ID Number listed on the TEAM voter file. Each of the first three rows summarizes a linkage between TEAM and DPS based on SSN9, ND, and ADG, respectively. For instance, the first row shows that I attempted to match 102,784 records in TEAM based on SSN9. This reflects the number of TEAM records without a DPS ID Number that include a unique SSN9. Of those, 26.67% did not match to DPS. The others did match.
- 20. The bottom row of Table 6 provides the overall summary for the TEAM records lacking a DPS ID Number. Of the 494,148 total records lacking a DPS ID Number, I attempted to link 486,421 (97.65%) to the DPS database. (The other 2.35% did not have a unique or complete value for SSN9, ND, or ADG). Of the individuals I attempted to find on DPS, 43% matched to a DPS record. That amounts to 209,137 registered voters. These individuals possess a DPS ID Number and therefore are instructed by Texas's mail ballot forms to list their DPS ID Number (and only their DPS ID Number) on their mail ballot application. However, if they follow those instructions and list only that DPS ID Number, SB 1 requires their ballot applications, and their ballots, to be rejected because the number is not listed on TEAM.

- 21. Subpopulations: Of the 209,137 individuals who match to DPS and have a DPS ID Number even though no such number is listed on TEAM,
 - 83,622 are over age 65
 - 66,001 voted in the 2020 election
 - 32,252 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
 - 1,574 have FPCA statuses
 - 378 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

These numbers show that many active voters who are eligible to vote by mail under

Texas law are listed in TEAM without DPS ID Numbers but do in fact possess DPS ID

Numbers.

22. Typos in Social Security Number. Among registrants who lack a DPS ID Number recorded on TEAM but who match to a record in DPS based on ND or ADG, I compare the SSN4 as recorded on the two databases. I find that 3,015 individuals who appear on both databases have discrepancies in their SSN4s. If the DPS records of SSN are correct, then these 3,015 cases result from inaccuracies on TEAM. They would cause election officials to reject mail ballot forms from citizens who include their correct SSN4 on the forms.

E. Linkage Part II: TEAM Records Listed with DPS ID Numbers

23. I now turn to the analysis of the 16,836,041 records in which a DPS ID Number is listed in the TEAM databases. As noted above in Table 5, 95.9% of these records have a unique SSN9 associated with them. I first link these records to DPS by matching on SSN9. Of

- 16,144,007 records with a unique SSN9 on TEAM, 99.53% match to a record in DPS. However, 16.03% of the records match to more than one DPS ID Number.
- 24. Next, I link records based on the ND combination, as described in Paragraph 11 above.

 The ND combination is unique for 16,669,651 individuals who have a DPS ID Number listed on TEAM. Of these, 97.36% match to a record in DPS. However, 15.61% match to more than one DPS ID Number.
- 25. Next, I link records based on the ADG combination, as described in Paragraph 11 above. The ADG combination is unique for 12,662,154 individuals who have a DPS ID Number listed on TEAM. Of these, 80.74% match to a record in DPS. However, 7.91% match to more than one DPS ID Number.

TABLE 7: Results of Linking TEAM to DPS Records for TEAM Records with a DPS ID Number listed

	No Match to DPS	Single Match to DPS	Multiple Match to DPS	Attempted to Match
SSN9	0.47%	83.49%	16.03%	16,144,007
ND	2.64	81.75	15.61	16,669,651
ADG	19.26	72.83	7.91	12,662,154
Any	1.17	84.57	14.25	16,787,046

26. Table 7 summarizes the analysis of records with a DPS ID Number on the voter file.

Consider the bottom row. Of the 16,836,041 records in TEAM listed with a DPS ID

Number, I attempted to link 16,787,046 (99.70%) of them to the DPS database. The remaining 0.30% did not have a unique or complete record on SSN, ND, and ADG. Of these 16,787,046 records, 98.83% matched to a record in DPS. However, many of them are listed more than once on DPS, with multiple ID numbers. These 14.25% of records sum up to 2,392,733 records. That is, for 2.4 million Texas registered voters who have a

- DPS ID Number listed, they may put a correct DPS ID Number on their mail ballot application form but nevertheless have their application (or their ballot envelope) rejected because the DPS ID Number they write down, while correct, happens not to be the DPS ID Number recorded on the TEAM file.
- 27. The 2.4 million figure may be an underestimate. Many DPS ID holders are listed not just with one DPS ID Number but they have alternative ID numbers stored as "AKA DL/ID Numbers." Of the TEAM records that linked to a single DPS ID Number, 1,421,849 of them linked to a record that listed alternative ID numbers in the "AKA DL/ID Number" field. During her April 20, 2022 deposition, Sheri Gibson, chief of the Texas DPS driver's license division, explained that these AKA DL/ID numbers are identification numbers associated with the ID holder that are either erroneous or originate from a prior version of the state's license system. If registrants use these alternative identification numbers when submitting a mail ballot application or mail ballot, they will also have their forms rejected because the AKA DL/ID Numbers are not the identification numbers on the voter registration records that are associated with these registrants. However, if these ID Numbers are considered by DPS to be erroneous or otherwise invalid (i.e., not just "expired," which does not impact validity for SB 1 purposes), the implications for SB 1 are unclear to me. Accordingly, in order to perform a conservative analysis, I focus here on registered voters who have multiple DPS ID Numbers exclusive of the AKA DL/ID Numbers.
- 28. Subpopulations: Of the 2,392,733 individuals who match to multiple DPS ID Numbers,
 - 166,035 are over age 65
 - 1,060,944 voted in the 2020 election

- 82,575 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
- 1,344 have FPCA status
- 4,134 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

These numbers show that many active voters who are eligible to vote by mail under

Texas law are listed in TEAM with a DPS ID Number but possess multiple DPS ID

Numbers. If they list a DPS ID Number other than the one that happens to be recorded in TEAM, SB 1 requires their mail ballot forms to be rejected.

- 29. Typos in Social Security Number. Looking just at the last 4 digits of social security numbers, I calculate the number of individuals in TEAM who match to records in DPS based on ND and ADG, but whose TEAM records show a different SSN4 than is shown on DPS. There are 41,900 individuals who appear on DPS with different SSN4s than shown on TEAM. If the DPS database is correct and these individuals mark down their correct SSN4 on a mail ballot application, then their application will be rejected because of incorrectly recorded data in TEAM.
 - a. Subpopulations: Of the 41,900 individuals whose SSN4s listed on TEAM do not match the SSN4s listed in the DPS database
 - 14,991 are over age 65
 - 27,247 voted in the 2020 election
 - 10,121 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
 - 101 have FPCA status
 - 88 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

These numbers show that many active voters who are eligible to vote by mail under

Texas law are listed in TEAM with an SSN4 that is inconsistent with the SSN4 listed in the DPS database.

- 30. Typos in DPS ID Numbers. Just as there are discrepancies between the SSNs listed in TEAM and the corresponding SSNs listed in DPS, there are also discrepancies in DPS ID Numbers. Using the methodology for calculating these discrepancies that was explained in my previous report, I calculate that 74,897 individuals do not have a DPS ID Number in TEAM that matches any DPS ID Number in DPS.
 - a. Subpopulations: Of the 74,897 individuals on TEAM who match to DPS on SSN9, ND, and ADG, but do not have DPS ID Numbers that correspond to the DPS database,
 - 15,835 are over age 65
 - 31,781 voted in the 2020 election
 - 9,475 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
 - 83 have FPCA status
 - 342 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.
- 31. Voluntary surrender: Out of 36.4 million DPS records, 2,881,780 have a designation of "voluntary surrender." I isolated a subset of the DPS records to just the ones listed with the "voluntary surrender" status and I matched the TEAM records based on SSN, ND, and ADG to these DPS records. I find that 1,704,499 current registered voters match to a "voluntary surrender" ID Number.

- 32. Most of these 1.7 million registrants seem to have other DPS IDs that are not surrendered. After matching the TEAM records to surrendered DPS IDs, I checked to see if the DPS ID number listed on the voter file matches to the surrendered ID Number listed in DPS. In 1,487,008 cases (87.24%), the current registered voter has a different ID number listed than the surrendered ID.
- 33. The other 217,491 do not have a different DPS ID Number. For the 217,491 registered voters who match to a DPS ID record for which the TEAM database shows the same DPS ID Number as a surrendered license, these Texans might be at risk of not being able to provide the ID Number that election officials have on file.
- 34. However, DPS's Sheri Gipson explained in her deposition that the "voluntary surrender" status designation is not a reliable indicator of whether a person is in physical possession of the card that lists the associated identification number. In some cases but not in all cases Texans who have "voluntary surrender" status may have physically surrendered the card during a surrender transaction. They also may or may not have disposed of the card once it was no longer valid. Therefore, I cannot confidently use this designation in counts of individuals who may be affected by SB 1. Instead, I treat all DPS ID Numbers associated with registered voters to be valid numbers for the purpose of identification verification under SB 1. However, if hundreds of thousands of individuals have a DPS ID Number listed on TEAM records that is associated with a license that they potentially cannot access because it has been physically surrendered or discarded, this likely increases the problems associated with SB 1.

F. Summary of Results from Updated Analysis

- 35. To comply with the identification verification requirements in SB 1, registered voters who have a DPS ID are instructed to record their ID number on a mail ballot application and again when submitting a mail ballot. If they do not have an ID number, they must record their SSN4. The analysis from the updated TEAM and DPS files show the following:
 - a. 209,137 registered voters are not listed in TEAM with a DPS ID, but they do have a DPS ID. These individuals are instructed to list only their DPS ID, but if they do so, their ballot or ballot application will be rejected.
 - i. Of these, 83,662 are over 65 years old, 32,252 of whom voted as recently as the 2020 general election.
 - ii. Of these, 1,952 have FPCA status or are listed as disabled veterans or as homebound citizens.
 - b. 2,392,733 individuals who are listed on TEAM with an associated DPS ID have more than one DPS ID Number. If they happen to write down a DPS ID number that is correct but is not the DPS ID number recorded in TEAM, their ballot or ballot application will be rejected.
 - i. Of these, 166,035 are over 65 years old, 82,575 of whom voted as recently as the 2020 general election.
 - ii. Of these, 5,478 have FPCA status or are listed as disabled veterans or as homebound citizens.
 - c. 44,915 individuals have SSN4s listed in their TEAM records that do not match the SSN4s listed in the DPS database.

- d. At least 74,897 individuals who are listed on TEAM registration records with a DPS ID Number do not show the same DPS ID Number listed in the DPS database.
- 36. Altogether, over 2.7 million registered voters in Texas (out of 17.3 million) are at risk of having a mail ballot or mail ballot application rejected due to identification number requirements in SB 1. These numbers do not include individuals who have misplaced or surrendered their IDs or who mis-enter information on a mail ballot form. These 2.7 million individuals can correctly fill out their forms, but their applications and ballots would be rejected nonetheless.

III. Response to Dr. Hoekstra

37. Dr. Mark Hoekstra's rebuttal report of March 29, 2022 does not challenge my database matching technique or the numbers derived from this technique. Rather, he challenges the interpretation of these numbers and the application of the technique to the questions raised in this case. Unfortunately, Dr. Hoekstra's interpretations and assumptions suffer from a number of serious flaws. I will address four key problems in his analysis.

A. Measuring Burdens

38. Dr. Hoekstra approaches this case by asking whether SB 1 makes absentee voting substantially burdensome such that it affects the overall rate of voting in Texas elections. I do not believe this is the right question. Texas law grants certain voters the right to vote by mail. As I have shown, citizens who are fully qualified by Texas law to vote by mail will have their applications and mail ballots rejected because the state's records do not actually allow officials to verify voters' personal identification in the way SB 1 requires.

The fact that so many Texans, including elderly and disabled citizens and members of the military, can fully comply with the law but will nevertheless have ballots rejected seems problematic. Whether Texans who are denied the ability to vote by mail can learn about the rejection and make other arrangements in time to vote in person on Election Day, thus "curing" the problem, is worth considering, and I address it below. But the fact that SB 1 requires the rejection of mail ballot materials is a problem, even if voters still manage to find a way to vote.

- 39. However, even if one believes, as Dr. Hoekstra asserts, that the main question here is about whether SB 1 will affect turnout rates, Dr. Hoekstra's analysis is flawed because it relies on evidence that is irrelevant to the issues surrounding SB 1. All of Dr. Hoekstra's tables and figures are copied-and-pasted from an article about mail voting and turnout rates that was published in 2021 in Science Advances. That article, written by Professor Andrew Hall and his students, is first-rate. I assign it to my own students in my course on elections. One of its main findings is that 64-year-olds and 65-year-olds in Texas voted at the same rate (but using different voting methods) in years prior to the adoption of SB 1. The article does not deal with the question of what happens when new burdens, such as identification verification requirements, are introduced to voters.
- 40. Dr. Hoekstra views the comparison between 64-year-olds and 65-year-olds as a test for how burdens on mail voters in general affect overall turnout. For 64-year-olds, Dr. Hoekstra views the burden as high. After all, in Texas, a 64-year-old needs an excuse, such as they are out of town or sick, in order to cast a ballot by mail. But 65-year-olds can choose to vote absentee by mail without a specific reason, so their burden to vote by mail is low. Dr. Hoekstra reasons that if 64-year-olds and 65-year-olds have the same turnout rates in 2020, as Dr. Hall's research shows, then burdens on mail voters in general do not affect turnout. As Dr. Hoekstra puts it, "it is implausible to believe that the much more moderate limitations on absentee voting enacted by SB1 would reduce turnout."

- 41. To understand why Dr. Hoekstra's reasoning is flawed, just consider how easy it is for a Texan to anticipate if they will be at least 65 years old on Election Day. In contrast, consider how difficult it is for a Texan to anticipate if they will have a problem voting by mail due to SB 1. They would have to think: "Do election officials have my DPS ID Number on record? Is my DPS ID recorded with a typo in state records? I have more than one DPS ID, which one do officials have on record? Do officials have my Social Security Number on record? Is there a typo in that record?"
- 42. The contrast in how easy it is to answer the question of how old one is compared to the difficulty in answering the questions about SB 1 protocols illustrates why Dr. Hoekstra's comparison of the burdens of SB 1 relative to the burdens of mail balloting prior to SB 1 is inapt. Baked into the similarity in overall turnout between 64-year-olds and 65-year-olds in 2020 (and earlier years) is an awareness on the part of each age group whether they qualified to vote by mail. If they did not qualify by age, they knew they would have to vote in person or offer a valid excuse. They could plan accordingly. But with SB 1, it is likely that many registrants do not know if their identification information matches information held by election authorities. They won't know whether they will get caught up in delays and ballot rejections until they are in the midst of the process of trying to vote by mail. They won't know how quickly, or how close to Election Day, it will be before they are advised by election officials of a problem with their materials. And, as I'll show below, by that point it is often too late for the voter to be able to correct the problem.

43. In analogizing the burdens on mail voting before SB 1 to those created by SB 1, Dr. Hoekstra misjudges the issues involved in this case. The burdens of SB 1, particularly the burdens created by faulty and incomplete state records that lead to uncertainty on the part of a voter of how and whether they can comply with SB 1, are categorically different than the burdens of mail voting related to simple and clear rules such as age-based eligibility.

B. Dr. Hoekstra's Mischaracterization of a "Simulation"

- 44. Dr. Hoekstra repeatedly refers to my analysis as a "simulation," which is a mischaracterization of the research. In Dr. Hoekstra's strawman interpretation, he supposes that I am "simulating" an election held under SB 1 and then estimating that 1 in 7 voters will be affected in that election. This number is preposterous, argues Dr. Hoekstra, because it requires "rather extreme assumptions," such as that everyone in Texas attempts to vote by mail, "a set of potential absentee voters that is vastly larger than anything seen in Texas history." I agree it would be preposterous to assume every Texas voter would attempt to vote by mail in a single election, but I do not make that assumption in my research.
- 45. My analysis is not a "simulation" of how many voters are likely to be affected by SB 1 in any given election. Rather, the analysis shows how many Texans could run into trouble if an election was approaching and they wanted or needed to cast a ballot by mail. In the first paragraph of my report, I explain that 1 in 7 Texans "can submit a ballot application

- as well as a ballot itself in perfect accordance with the state's instructions under SB 1, and yet Texas election officials must still reject the voters' forms."
- 46. In rebutting an argument that I never made, Dr. Hoekstra's report misses the mark.

 Consider the voters under 65 in Texas. Some may get sick. Some may become disabled.

 Some may expect a baby to come within a few weeks of Election Day. Some may get called out of town for work or for a family obligation. Some may be members of the military who are called overseas. If we were to "simulate" how many Texans would fall into these categories in any specific election, the number would likely be modest. But in any given election cycle, it is impossible to anticipate which specific Texans are going to be sick or out of town, or become disabled, or expectant of a baby, or called overseas. So, the question I answered in my report is how many Texans, should they suddenly fall into these categories and therefore become eligible to vote by mail, might have their mail ballot materials rejected.
- 47. To offer an analogy, suppose a hospital in Texas has medical records for 17 million citizens. But for 2.6 million of these people, the records are incomplete or incorrect. If one of these 2.6 million Texans comes into the hospital to receive treatment, they could face a delay in care or, worse, they could be denied medical care altogether. How big of a problem are the faulty medical records? Well, since only a small fraction of the public will come sick to the hospital in any one year, an analyst could treat the record-keeping issues as a small problem. Dr. Hoekstra's reasoning is akin to the view that few people use the hospital each year, so the faulty records are not a serious problem. Plus, in his line of reasoning, sick patients could always try to find another hospital. My read of the situation is different. Since any one of these 2.6 million people could come to this hospital in any year, the fact that the hospital's records are incomplete or incorrect for so many people creates a broad risk to the public.

C. Mail Voters Including DPS IDs and SSNs in SB 1 Forms

- 48. Dr. Hoekstra's report advances an argument that a narrowly-distributed set of guidelines to voters should be taken more seriously than the plain text of SB 1 and SB 1's implementation materials.
- 49. Texas's mail ballot application states clearly the circumstances under which voters should list the last four digits of their social security number (SSN4) on the form: voters are instructed to list their social security number only if they do not have a driver's license number or other DPS identification number. The ballot application states, "If you do not have a Texas Driver's License, Texas Personal Identification Number or a Texas Election Identification Number, give the last 4 digits of your Social Security Number." This exact same language is printed on the carrier envelope used for submitting a mail ballot. The language in the text of SB 1 is similar: "...if the applicant has not been issued a number described by Paragraph (A) [a DPS ID number], the last four digits of the applicant's social security number."
- 50. In my original report (footnote 4), I explain that the Texas Secretary of State has issued guidance that encourages voters to include both a DPS identification number and an SSN4 on these documents, if they have both. However, because that guidance is not conveyed in SB 1, on the carrier envelopes that most Texans must use, or on the mail ballot applications issued by the Secretary of State, my analysis does not presume that voters will follow the Secretary's guidance.

- 51. Dr. Hoekstra considers this a "serious flaw" in my analysis. On multiple occasions in his rebuttal report, he draws attention to a February 16, 2022 press release and video message in which Secretary of State John Scott recommends that voters write down on mail ballot forms both their SSN4 and their DPS ID Number. Dr. Hoekstra writes, "A more credible analysis would assess the extent to which voters who could encounter a problem write down both numbers, as recommended by the Secretary of State."
- 52. The text of Secretary's Scott press release summarizes the language of the mail ballot materials and the text of SB 1.4 A voter must record their DPS ID Number, "OR if you have not been issued one of the above numbers, the last 4 digits of your Social Security Number." Further down on the webpage, however, and in contrast to the language just quoted, the press release continues, "You may put both numbers in the spaces provided on your ABBM and Carrier Envelope."
- 53. The Secretary's website directs readers to a YouTube video statement by the Secretary of State. On the video, the Secretary articulates his recommendation that registrants include both the SSN4 and DPS ID on the mail ballot forms, even though both are not required.
- 54. The Secretary's message was released approximately two weeks before the March 1, 2022 election. In an election season involving 15 million nonvoters and 3 million voters (including over 150,000 mail voters), the Secretary's video message has been viewed a total of 676 times, as of April 27, 2022. That View Count includes three views by me, and probably dozens, if not hundreds, of views by other experts such as Dr. Hoekstra, by lawyers, and by government officials. In short, it appears that few ordinary Texas voters have viewed Secretary of State Scott's message.

55. On the one hand, then, we have the text of SB 1 and the text of the standard mail ballot request form and the text of the carrier envelope, all of which say that voters should include an SSN4 only if they do not have a DPS ID number. On the other hand, we have press statements that few have seen but that suggest voters should include both a DPS ID and SSN4 when submitting mail ballot forms. Given the differences in the distribution rates for the differing interpretations of SB 1, I think it is appropriate to assume voters will follow the instructions on the forms that they must fill out rather than the advice of Secretary Scott.

D. Can Voters Correct Problems Caused by SB 1?

- 56. Dr. Hoekstra's next argument is that mail voters whose materials are rejected due to SB 1 can cure the problem and successfully vote either by mail or in person. For this reason, he expects SB 1 would not have a measurable impact on voting rates. Dr. Hoekstra performs no test of this claim. Rather, he supports the claim through the argument, discussed above, that the burdens imposed by SB 1 are smaller than the burdens imposed on 64-year-olds prior to 2021. Since 64-year-olds and 65-year-olds voted at the same rates in 2020, Dr. Hoekstra thinks burdens from SB 1 are "implausible."
- 57. As I will now show, through an analysis of voter data from Texas's March 1 election, Dr. Hoekstra's speculation is clearly wrong. The majority of Texas registrants whose mail ballots were rejected by the state failed to have a ballot counted. In addition to this evidence, I will also provide data to help explain why voters are unable to vote after their ballots are rejected. As is true across the country, mail voters in Texas tend to cast ballots at the end of the election season, sending in their ballot very close to the receipt deadline. Correcting an error requires knowing about an error, and many voters may not submit mail ballot forms with enough time to learn about an error, particularly if they are not immediately responsive to telephone calls from unfamiliar numbers or emails from unfamiliar senders. A voter who submits a ballot application near the deadline may not learn that the application was rejected due to SB 1 compliance until it is too late to correct it. The next section describes the data and analysis of the March 1 election that advances these claims.

IV. March 1, 2022 Election Analysis

- 58. The April voter file export contains voter history data from the March 1, 2022 primary election, the first election held under SB 1. I restrict my attention here to records with the election date listed as "03-01-2022." Across the counties, 3,164,179 TEAM records have information related to the March 3, 2022 election. Not all of these records appear to be records of successful voters. Some represent individuals whose ballots were rejected or who sought a mail ballot application but never submitted the ballot.
- 59. The database export shows no record of individuals whose mail ballot applications were rejected due to SB 1 compliance issues. However, according to the database, 31,107 records are listed with a code for a reason that their ballots for the March 1 primary were rejected. More than 4 in 5 of these (specifically, 25,429 of them, or 82%) are listed with a designation related to the SB 1 law. The designation is for ballots that have "Incorrect or Missing SSN/TDL #." These numbers align fairly closely with Election Director Keith ⁵ I would have analyzed rejected applications if they had been made available to me in the TEAM export. In deposition, Mr. Keith Ingram, director of Texas's Election Division, testified that fields used to track acceptance and rejection of mail ballot applications were included in the export. An Excel spreadsheet labeled STATE057755 shows a code of "IS" under a field of "mail in request reject reason" to indicate "Incorrect or Missing SSN / TDL #." However, while the April TEAM database export does use this code for rejected ballots, it shows no such code for rejected mail ballot applications.

Ingram's April 7, 2022 disclosure indicating a total of 24,636 rejected ballots statewide. Mr. Ingram's report seems to include records of all rejected mail ballots, though, not specifically those associated with incorrect/missing identification numbers. Part of the discrepancy is attributable to the fact that there are some individuals who have multiple rows in the database indicating that ballots were rejected more than one time.

- 60. A key question is how many of the individuals who had their ballots rejected were then able to vote in person or vote by mail following a correction. Dr. Hoekstra asserts that voters can easily substitute in-person voting for mail voting, and because of this, there really is no meaningful burden. Dr. Hoekstra concludes his rebuttal report by saying that "the likely burden on the...registered voters who will either have to cure their ballot or vote in person as a result of SB 1 is likely minimal, and quite possibly zero."
- 61. As I show just below, Dr. Hoekstra's assessment is incorrect. But first, it is worth showcasing that there are instances that are consistent with Dr. Hoekstra's theories. There are voters whose records indicate that they applied for and received mail ballots in early February. But then they seemed to hit a snag. The voter file lists that their ballots were rejected, with a code of "IS", indicating missing or incorrect information in the SSN or DPS ID fields. Fortunately, on other rows in the voter file, the record shows that these same voters, whose mail ballots were rejected, ended up casting ballots in-person on March 1.
- 62. The scenario I just outlined seems to be the kind of story that Dr. Hoekstra has in mind, namely, a voter hit a problem with SB 1 compliance but was then able to vote in person.

 However, these cases represent the minority of impacted voters. Out of 25,429 individuals who had mail ballots rejected on account of missing/incomplete identification numbers, only 6,509 (25.60%) have records indicating that they cast an accepted mail ballot or voted in person. The remaining 18,920 (74.40%) are recorded as not having cast a vote. That is, 3 out of 4 Texans who had their mail ballot rejected due to SB 1 requirements did not go on to successfully cast a ballot in the election.

63. Dr. Hoekstra did not just argue that few Texans would be affected by SB 1. He argued specifically (paragraph 30) that, conditional on a registrant having to cure their ballot due to SB 1, there would be little or no consequence for turnout. However, as just shown with the state's data, among qualified Texans who went through the trouble of applying for and submitting a mail ballot and then had their mail ballot rejected due to SB 1, 3 out of 4 of them ended up not having any ballot counted in the March 1 primary at all.

The Timing of Mail Ballots

- 64. If mail applicants and mail voters have materials rejected, they are supposed to be notified by phone and/or email. But if they are not immediately responsive and/or they submit forms right before the deadline, then it might not be possible for them to cure the problems presented by SB 1. It turns out that many mail voters submit forms very close to the deadline.
- 65. Consider the calendar for the March 1 state primary in Texas. Texans could send applications for a mail ballot as early as January 1, 2022. Applications had to be received by election officials no later than February 18. In the TEAM records, 260,275 registrant records are listed as submitting an absentee ballot application. Figure 1 shows the dates on which those applications were received.

Note: "Jan 1" includes a handful of records that are listed as submitted prior to Jan 1. "LATE" combines all dates after February 18.

66. As Figure 1 shows, out of the 49-day period in which registrants could submit a ballot application, almost no applications were received for the first third of the timespan. Then, starting on January 18, weekdays saw a consistent stream of applications, up until (and, actually, after) the February 18 deadline. In fact, of all the applications that were received before the deadline, 1 in 5 were received in the last week (February 12-February 18).

Another 9,973 applications were received after the deadline.

Note: "Feb 1" includes a handful of records that are listed as submitted prior to Feb 1. "LATE" combines all dates after March 3.

67. Figure 2 shows the pattern of dates in which the ballots themselves were received. These data include 196,831 records and include ballots that were received late or were otherwise marked invalid. Here, the pattern looks different than in Figure 1 in that the bars rise as Election Day approaches. As the election date gets closer, there are, on average, more ballots each day. In fact, the last week of eligibility (from February 25 until March 3) shows 39% of ballots received by election officials. Over 11% of ballots submitted on time were received on a single date, February 28, the day before Election Day.

68. These patterns suggest that voters may have difficulty addressing problems in mail balloting due to SB 1. Given that 1 in 5 Texans who submit applications on time do so in the last week of eligibility, and given that 2 in 5 Texans who submit ballots on time do so in the last week of the election season means that many voters may not learn that they must address problems caused by SB 1 until it is too late. This concern is particularly salient given that three-quarters of individuals whose mail ballots were rejected due to SB 1 did not go on to vote by any method.

V. Summary of Findings

- 69. In this report, I have updated my analysis of TEAM and DPS data using more recent exports from the State of Texas. The results of this new analysis are consistent with the analysis of my prior report: many Texans can submit mail ballot forms correctly and yet their forms will be rejected due to deficiencies in state records.
- 70. Furthermore, I have addressed the major points raised by Dr. Hoekstra. Unlike other requirements on mail voters in Texas (e.g., the requirement to have an excuse to vote by mail if under age 65), SB 1 requires eligible voters to know detailed information about state record-keeping in order to vote by mail without risk of being rejected due to no fault of their own. While rejected voters can, in theory, cure errors by not voting by mail, and instead voting in person, the March 1 election data confirms that three-quarters of rejected voters did not successfully vote in the election after their ballots were rejected due to SB1.

I. Abstract

- 1. This report contains three analyses. First, using new data supplied to me in January 2023, I calculate the number of registered voters in Texas whose registration records indicate that they could have a mail ballot application or carrier envelope rejected on account of identification verification requirements imposed by Senate Bill 1 ("SB 1"). My analysis shows similar results as in two prior expert reports that I have filed in this case. I find that 1 in 7 Texans can accurately and completely fill out a mail ballot application and the application could still be rejected on account of SB 1's verification procedures.
- 2. Second, I conduct an analysis of rejected mail ballots during the first federal election held since the passage of SB 1, the November 2022 election. Among other findings, I show that the overwhelming majority (more than 80%) of rejected mail ballots were rejected on account of SB 1 identification rules.
- 3. Third, I analyze the behavior in the November election of individuals who I have flagged as having records that could lead to mail ballot rejections. Those deemed at risk have a significantly lower rate of successfully voting by mail than the general population.

II. Replication of Previous Analyses and Meta-Analysis

4. In a February 28, 2022 report ("Initial Report"), I described a methodology for evaluating the number of Texans who were particularly vulnerable to having a mail ballot application rejected on account of identification verification rules in SB 1. For several reasons, a registered voter could fill out a mail ballot application (or mail ballot carrier envelope) correctly but the materials would be rejected by election officials:

- a. Many Texans have multiple identification numbers because they have multiple Department of Public Safety IDs ("DPS IDs"). But Texas only stores up to one DPS ID Number on its list of registered voters (the Texas Election Administration System, or "TEAM"). If a registrant lists a correct DPS ID number on mail ballot materials but not the number that happens to be listed in TEAM, the voter's mail ballot or mail ballot application will be rejected.
- b. Some Texans are listed on TEAM without a DPS ID Number. Many of these individuals do in fact have DPS IDs. They are instructed by the language in the mail ballot application and on the carrier envelope to list only their DPS ID when filling out mail ballot forms. However, because their DPS ID Number is absent from TEAM, their materials will be rejected.
- c. Administrative records are not perfect. Tens of thousands of Texans are listed on TEAM with typos in their Social Security numbers ("SSN") and/or their DPS ID numbers. When a registered voter fills out a mail ballot application (or ballot carrier envelope) correctly, the material will be rejected on account of these administrative typos.
- 5. In my Initial Report, I established a methodology for linking TEAM records to DPS records in order to count the number of individuals who might have their materials rejected. In addition to explaining the methodology, I was able to test the validity of the methodology. I reported that 1 in 7 registered voters in Texas could have their mail ballot materials rejected on account of SB 1 even if they followed instructions correctly. I concluded that "Texas's databases are simply not well-suited to SB 1's demands" (Paragraph 114). On account of incomplete records as well as typos and other inconsistencies across state databases, the law can prevent citizens from voting. I conducted subgroup analyses to show that the affected population includes many senior citizens, Texans living overseas, disabled veterans and homebound citizens, all of whom rely on mail voting more than the general population.

- 6. In a May 4, 2022 supplemental report ("First Supplemental Report"), in addition to some new analyses, I replicated the analysis described above with updated DPS and TEAM records. Whereas DPS and TEAM data in the Initial Report were produced in January 2022, data in the First Supplemental Report were produced by the State in March and April 2022. The results were substantively the same.
- In January of 2023, I received yet another update to DPS and TEAM records. The DPS records were drawn in December of 2022, and the TEAM records were compiled in early January 2023.
- 8. In Appendix A to this report, I describe the details of this additional replication with the new data from December 2022/January 2023. In Table A, here, I provide the top-line summary statistics from that analysis and place the results in context, alongside results from the Initial Report and First Supplemental Report.

TABLE A: Summary of Results from Three Analyses of DPS and TEAM Records

	Initial Report	First Suppl. Report	Second Suppl. Report
	February 2022	May 2022	January 2023
No DPS ID in TEAM; Possesses DPS ID	276,405	209,137	189,095
One DPS ID in TEAM; Possesses Multiple DPS IDs	2,213,676	2,392,733	2,394,435
Typo/Inconsistent SSN4 in DPS vs TEAM	44,444	44,915	44,353
Typo/Inconsistent DPS ID in DPS vs TEAM	68,190	74,897	62,461
Total Issues	2,602,715	2,721,682	2,690,344
Total TEAM Records	17,026,054	17,330,189	17,451,752
Issues/Total (Percent)	15.3%	15.7%	15.4%

- 9. As the first line of data in Table A shows, the results indicate a decline in the number of individuals who are listed in TEAM without a DPS ID Number but who do in fact possess a DPS ID Number. The number went from 276,000 when I first ran the analysis a year ago to 209,000 a few months later, to 189,000 in the current analysis.
- 10. During the same period, the number of Texas registered voters who are listed in DPS with more than one DPS ID number has increased from 2,214,000 to 2,393,000 to 2,394,000. As noted in the Initial Report, according to SB 1, a voter may use a current or expired ID in filling out mail ballot materials, but TEAM only stores zero or one ID number per registered voter.
- 11. The number of typos or other data errors in the storage of Social Security numbers (specifically in the last four digits of the Social Security numbers ("SSN4")) is nearly exactly the same across the three analyses. The number of typos or errors in DPS ID numbers went from 68,000 to 75,000 and then down to 62,000. The last rows of Table A summarize the total number of issues and divides these by the total number of TEAM records. The analysis was performed three times over the course of twelve months with three different snapshots of Texas administrative data. The results are consistent, with 15-16% of records affected by issues that might lead to ballot materials being rejected on account of SB 1 requirements, even with voters dutifully following mail ballot instructions.

III. Analysis of November 2022 Federal Election

- 12. In this section, I analyze mail ballot data from the November 2022 federal election. First, I measure the consistency between statistics reported by Texas and the January 3, 2023 data transmitted to me regarding participation in the November election. Then, I report three key findings.
 - a. I estimate that the initial mail ballot rejection rate in Texas at 4.1%. This is higher than the final rejection rate of 2.7% that Texas has reported.
 - b. I estimate that over 80% of rejected mail ballots are rejected on SB 1 grounds. I count 5 Federal Post Card Application ("FPCA") voters—military and overseas voters—whose ballots were rejected on SB 1 grounds.
 - c. I estimate that more than 50% of individuals who are flagged for having a mail ballot rejected due to SB 1 did not end up voting in the November election, either by mail or in person.

- 13. According to the website of the Texas Secretary of State, in the November 2022 election, 7,775,713 votes were cast in person and 359,526 ballots were cast by mail.¹ The count of 359,526 mail ballots submitted is higher than 345,697, which is the count provided by state officials to the media.³ It is also higher than 345,679, which is the count disclosed by Texas in court documentation in January 2023.⁴
- 14. In the January 2023 TEAM database I received, there are 8,178,445 voter history records associated with the November 8, 2022 election. However, about 70,000 of these records are instances of registrants who are listed on more than one line of the TEAM database, for instance a line representing that they requested a mail ballot but another line representing that they actually voted in person.
- 15. In order to gauge turnout as it is represented in the TEAM records, I retain only the most recent voter history record for each registrant, by selecting the date listed as most recently

¹ See "November 08, 2022 GENERAL ELECTION Cumulative Totals Thru Close of Business November 08, 2022" https://earlyvoting.texas-election.com/Elections/getElectionEVDates.do. The counts as reported by Texas here are dynamic and are regularly updated. The counts listed reflect numbers as of January 30, 2022. The mail ballots in this tabulation come from county numbers and appear to reflect ballots submitted rather than ballots officially counted. This is evidenced by the fact that the state website records ballots submitted as early as October 2, 2022, a date prior to when signature verification committees began to meet and review mail ballots. For information on the timeline for reviewing ballots, see: "Early Voting Ballot Board & Signature Verification Committee, Handbook for Election Judges and Clerks 2022," Texas Secretary of State Elections Division. See Page 9: "A [signature verification] committee may not begin operating before the 20th day before election day." https://www.sos.state.tx.us/elections/forms/ballot-board-handbook.pdf.

² Note that there is more than one way to tabulate voter turnout. For instance, elsewhere on its website, the Texas Secretary of State's office refers to ballots counted in the gubernatorial election (the highest office on the ballot in 2022) as its voter turnout. See Texas Secretary of State, "Turnout and Voter Registration Figures (1970-current)," https://www.sos.texas.gov/elections/historical/70-92.shtml. updated. After this procedure, all in-person ballots cast (election day ballots and early ballots, including provisional ballots) yield a tally of 7,775,194. This number is nearly identical to the count of 7,775,713 in-person ballots received according on the State's website as referenced above. Since the website is continuously updated but the voter file I received is static and dated January 3rd, it is expected that the number counted on the website would be slightly higher than tabulated based on the static voter file. Note that some of these ballots (5,901 of them) have a code indicating that they were ultimately rejected. Nearly all the others (7,768,874) have a code indicating that they were accepted. The remaining 419 records have neither an accepted nor rejected code.⁵

16. 378,487 other records have a code associated with a mail ballot. Nearly all of these have one of the following "ballot status" codes:

TABLE B: Ballot Status Codes of Mail Ballot Records in November 2022 Election

CODE	Definition	Count
AB	Absentee ballot received	1,492
AC	Absentee ballot cancelled by voter	16,420
AM	Absentee ballot mailed	29,719
AV	Absentee ballot accepted	322,423
AX	Absentee ballot rejected	8,366
RB	Absentee ballot returned by PO	20
(No Code)		47

17. Of these records, the total ballots submitted are those with codes AB (Absentee ballot received), AV (absentee ballot accepted), and AX (absentee ballot rejected). These sum

⁵ The method of voting is defined by a field in the database called "ballot type." The rejected/accepted status comes from a different field, called "ballot status". For in-person ballot types, 7,768,874 have a code of "A" (accepted); 5,901 have a code of "R" (rejected); and 419 have no code.

- to 332,281.⁶ The other codes reflect ballots that either never reached the voter (returned by Post Office) or were received by the voter but the voter never mailed back the ballot or else cancelled the request.
- 18. This number (332,281) is lower than the other counts mentioned above, both in public reports (345,697 ballots received) and in the State's count on its website (359,526 ballots received). One possible explanation for the discrepancy is if those sources include in their counts ballots that were cancelled by voters. Adding in these 16,420 records would bring the voter file count up to 348,701. However, based on the codes and definitions made available to me, I will count ballots submitted as only those that have the codes of AB, AV, or AX.
- 19. According to the January 2023 data, there are 18,187 records listed with a reason that a ballot was rejected. Of these, 13,638 were mail ballot rejections. About 40% of records that indicate a reason for a mail ballot being rejected have a status code that indicates the ballot was accepted. Presumably, these are cases in which a ballot was initially rejected but eventually cured and accepted. Of all the mail ballot rejections, 11,430 (83.8%) have a code indicating that identification verification was the reason for the rejection. With 13,638 rejections and 332,281 mail ballots submitted, the rejection rate is estimated as 4.1%. This number is higher than the publicly reported rate of 2.7%.

⁶ If one calculates this number without removing the duplicate voters listed in TEAM, as described above, the total count of submitted ballots would nevertheless be quite similar: 332,885.

⁷ These codes are: IS, ISR, EVBIS, EVBISR, EVCIS, EVCISR, and ISF. The first two of these codes are identified in Defendant's disclosed document STATE057755. The remaining codes are identified by county disclosed documents, such as Dallas County document, MS016221.

⁸ According to NPR, 9,348 of 345,697 mail ballots were rejected. These numbers are based on "NPR inquiries with state officials." Ashley Lopez, "Despite mail voting changes, ballot rejections remain relatively low in 2022 midterms," NPR, January 13, 2023

- 20. Among those with rejected ballots include 5 individuals who use Federal Post Card Applications, which are voter registration forms used by members of the military, their families, and American citizens who are residing overseas.
- 21. Of the 11,430 records indicating voters who were rejected on SB 1 grounds, less than half of them (44.4%) are associated with a registrant whose record also shows that they were able to vote either by mail or in person. Most (55.6%) failed to vote successfully following their ballot being rejected.
- 22. If one calculates the rate of rejected ballots as those that appear as uncured in the TEAM file, the rejection rate would be lower than 4.1%. For example, of all 13,638 records listed with a reason that a mail ballot was rejected, 8,306 show no indication that the registrant successfully voted, whether by curing the mail ballot or cancelling the mail ballot and voting in person. If we divide 8,306 by the sum of 8,306 and 322,423 (the number of successful mail votes), then the uncured/uncanceled rejection rate would be 2.5%, which is close to the rejection rate of 2.7% reported by the State. Such a calculation does not take into account those voters who, in order to resolve a rejection attributable to SB 1, needed to vote in person rather than by mail.
- 23. The analysis above suggests a mail ballot rejection rate of 4.1% and an uncured/uncanceled rejection rate of 2.5%. However, estimates of rejection rates must be observed with caution, as some cured ballots may have had their codes in TEAM overridden once they were cured. According to Kristi Hart, the State's Director of Election Administration and Voter Registration, TEAM records that are rejected but eventually cured would have the rejection flag overridden. At the same time, in some cases registrants have multiple records on TEAM, one indicating a rejection and one an accepted form. Thus, from the TEAM data alone, it is not possible to offer a definitive account of the number of ballots rejected and cured. The numbers reported here reflect what can be discerned with the available data.

24. In comparison to the March 2022 primary, which was the first election held under SB 1 rules, two facts are apparent. First, the rejection rate reported in the March 1, 2022 state primary was higher than in November; 12% of ballots were reportedly rejected in March. Second, a smaller share of voters who cast ballots did so by mail in November 2022 (4.4% according to the State's reporting) compared to the share in March 2022 (5.6%). 11

IV. Relationship between Records Flagged and Mail Voting in 2022 Election

- 25. The first part of the analysis in this report showed that 15% of Texas registered voters could have a problem voting by mail on account of SB 1. The second part of the analysis showed that some 4% of mail voters had ballots rejected on account of SB 1 identification rules. Here, I will briefly put these two analyses in context of one another.
- 26. As I noted in my First Supplemental Report, a useful analogy to the problems identified here is that of a hospital that has poor record-keeping practices. Suppose the hospital had incorrect records for 15% of the population. In any one year, few people go to the hospital, so it isn't the case that 15% of the total public will be mistreated by the hospital on account of poor record-keeping. But when those in that 15% "at-risk" population suddenly need to visit the hospital, they may be inconvenienced or harmed on account of the record-keeping. The analogy is helpful because it clarifies that while there is a large pool of citizens at risk of having a problem, most will not be confronted with that problem in any one election year.

¹⁰ Robert Garrett, "Rejection of Texans' Mail Ballots Decline Markedly from the Big Surge in March Primary", Dallas Morning News, Dec 23, 2022.

¹¹ https://earlyvoting.texas-election.com/Elections/getElectionDetails.do.

27. Consider the 2.7 million records of registrants whose data demonstrate a possible barrier to meeting SB 1 requirements. I merge these with the records of individuals who requested a mail ballot in November 2022. Of all the 2.7 million registrants with record issues, 28,437 requested a mail ballot. It is not surprising that only a small percent of these 2.7 million voters requested a mail ballot, as only about 2% of all registered voters in Texas voted by mail in the November election. 12 Among those 28,437 registrants who tried to cast a mail ballot, 6,380—or 22.44%—never cast a successful mail ballot. These registrants include those rejected due to SB 1 and those rejected for reasons other than SB 1, as well as those who never returned their ballot or returned their ballot late. In comparison, among those registrants who are not in the "at risk" pool of the 2.7 million voters, only 16.17% of them who began the mail voting process never cast a successful mail ballot (a statistically significant six percentage-point difference, p < .0001). Again, this baseline of 16.17% includes those whose mail ballot applications or ballots are rejected for reasons unrelated to SB1 as well as individuals who do not end up returning a mail ballot at all or returning it late. The fact that the subpopulation of 2.7 million has a much higher rate of non-voting by mail conditional on requesting a ballot is likely to be related to SB 1 requirements.

V. Conclusion

28. In this analysis, I have replicated my main analysis for the second time. The analysis shows (as it has shown twice before) that about 15% of registration records in Texas could have an issue with the SB 1 identification verification rule if the registrant was to apply to vote by mail. Second, I have shown that while only 2% of registrants voted by mail in the 2022 general election, more than 11,000 ballots were rejected on account of SB 1 identification issues. Most of the individuals who submitted those rejected ballots did not successfully vote, either by mail or in-person. Third, I have shown that "at-risk" registrants who tried to cast a ballot by mail in the 2022 general election were significantly less likely to successfully vote by mail than individuals who are not in the pool of the 2.7 million "at-risk" registrants.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States that the forgoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge.

APPENDIX A: REPLICATION OF ANALYSIS USING DEC 2022/JAN 2023 VERSIONS OF DATA

A. Databases

- 1. DPS. The updated DPS database I received is dated December 17, 2022. The database contains 37,377,423 records, an increase of almost a million records from the 36,417,304 records identified in the March 2022 data I analyzed in my prior supplemental report. As in the versions previously analyzed, the December 2022 version of the data has complete or nearly complete records in all fields of interest (e.g., name, date of birth, address, gender) except that 5% of records are not populated with Social Security numbers, which was also the case in the prior versions. Table 1 below updates Table 1 of my Initial Report with the new data.
- 2. The percent of DPS records with missing SSNs has declined from 5.02% in the Initial Report to 4.98% in the First Supplemental Report, to 4.85% here. The percent of records missing a unique SSN9 (i.e., the number of SSNs associated with more than one DPS ID Number) has increased from 21.6% to 27.5% here (the First Supplementary Report had this rate even higher, at 28.7%).

- 3. TEAM. The updated version of TEAM records is dated January 3, 2023. The TEAM data was transmitted to me as a single data file. (In prior transmissions, the data had been stored by county in separate files). Registered voters can be listed on many lines within the file. For instance, Texas counts 28,868 registered voters in Anderson County as of January 2023. In the January 2023 TEAM export I received, there are 57,459 rows of registrants in Anderson County. Different rows show different interactions that registrants have had with the election system. I processed the data so that each person, represented by their Voter Unique Identification Number (VUID), is listed one time. Specifically, I observed the dates labeled "ballot_last_updated" and retained the most recent date for each registrant. I also retained registrants who had no date listed in this field.
- 4. After the de-duplication process, the January 2023 TEAM file consists of 17,451,752 records. I sought to confirm that this number is close to the State's official reporting. According to the Secretary of State's website, as of January 2023, there were 17,450,474 registered Texas voters. Given the typical fluctuation in registration numbers, a difference of less than 0.01% suggests the data I have been given by the State is consistent with the State's publicly reported information.

B. Data Quality Checks in the TEAM Voter Records

5. I performed the same set of data quality checks as described in my prior reports. Tables 2 and 3 offer summary statistics on key fields of interest. In the updated data, 2.27% of records are missing SSN (compared 2.52% in March 2022 and 2.34% in January 2022).

¹³ https://www.sos.state.tx.us/elections/historical/jan2023.shtml

- In the January 2023 data, 2.62% are missing a DPS ID Number (compared to 2.85% in April 2022 and 3.16% in January 2022).
- 6. The numbers are all similar to those in my previous reports, with one exception. In the January 2023 data as well as the January 2022 data, less than 1% of records are missing street number and ZIP code. In the March 2022 data, over 20% of the records were missing this information.

C. Methodology

7. The methodology employed is the same as in my Initial Report. See Paragraphs 50-73 in that report for a detailed explanation. My goal is to look up each registered voter in the DPS database and determine if the registered voter has one (or more) DPS ID Numbers listed, and to see if there are typos or other inconsistencies between the DPS ID Numbers and SSN4s listed on TEAM versus those listed on the DPS Database. I create three linkage fields to connect the TEAM and DPS databases together. The first field is the nine-digit Social Security number (SSN9). The second field is the combination of name (First and Last) and date of birth. I call this linkage field "ND" for Name + Date of Birth. The third field, a combination of Address (Street Number and ZIP code) + Date of Birth + Gender, I call "ADG". Table 4 (a replica of Table 6 from my Initial Report) illustrates the three linking fields with an example of a fictional registered voter named John Smith.

Field Name	Explanation	"John Smith" example
SSN9	9-digit Social Security number	"123-45-6789"
ND	First name + Last name + Date of birth	"JOHNSMITH1976-07-04"
ADG	Address + Date of birth + Gender	"655782051976-07-04M"

8. As in the prior reports, in addition to calculating statistics for the whole population of registered voters, I also look at several subpopulations, including registrants over 65, registrants who voted in 2020, registrants who have homebound/disabled veteran statuses, and registrants who are listed with specific codes in TEAM signaling that they have applied using Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) registration forms, which are voter registration forms used by members of the military, their families, and Americans who are residing overseas. I refer to these as FPCA voters. In the April report, I did a separate analysis of "voluntary surrender" designations in DPS records, but I concluded, based on disclosures from Texas, that these designations did not contain sufficient information to determine if the citizen holding a surrendered card would or would not be able to use the ID card for the purposes of mail voting. Accordingly, I do not repeat the analysis of surrendered licenses here.

D. Linkage Part I: TEAM Records with missing DPS ID Numbers

- I divide the analysis into two parts. First, I examine individuals whose TEAM records do not show any DPS ID Number. Second, I examine individuals whose TEAM records do show a DPS ID Number.
- 10. Out of 17,451,752 records in TEAM, 457,441 do not have a DPS ID Number listed in the voter registration records. If any of these individuals actually has a DPS ID Number, they are instructed by the mail ballot forms to include that DPS ID Number (and only that identification number). But SB 1 requires these forms—the application and the ballot carrier envelope—to be rejected because the DPS ID Number is not listed within registration records.

TABLE 5: TEAM records by Presence/Absence of Unique SSN9 and DPS ID

Number

		Unique SSN9
		Present	Absent	TOTAL
DPS ID	Present	16,340,755	653,556	16,994,311
Number	Absent	88,140	369,301	457,441

- 11. I link the 457,441 individuals who do not have DPS ID Numbers recorded in TEAM to the DPS database using the SSN, ND, and ADG linkage fields.
- 12. I first link by SSN9. Of the 457,441 individuals without a DPS ID Number in TEAM, 88,140 have a unique SSN9 listed (as noted in Table 5). Of those, 71.42% match to the DPS database by their SSN9. A total of 64.81% of the records match to a single DPS ID Number, and 6.61% link to multiple DPS ID Numbers.

- 13. I next link these individuals based on ND. As noted in Table 5, most individuals who lack DPS ID Numbers on TEAM also lack an SSN9. However, nearly all of the records have a unique ND combination. Of the 457,441 lacking a DPS ID Number on TEAM, 449,224 (98.2%) have a unique ND. Of those who have a unique ND, 23.72% match to a single DPS record and 4.22% match to multiple DPS records.
- 14. I next link these individuals based on ADG. Of 457,441 records lacking a DPS ID

 Number on TEAM, 401,073 (87.68%) have a unique ADG. Of those with a unique ADG, 26.81% match to a single DPS record and 3.48% match to multiple DPS records.

TABLE 6: Results of Linking TEAM to DPS Records for TEAM Records without a DPS ID Number listed

	No Match to DPS	Single Match to DPS	Multiple Match to DPS	Attempted to Match
SSN9	28.58%	64.81%	6.61%	88,140
ND	72.06	23.72	4.22	449,224
ADG	69.70	26.81	3.48	401,073
Any	58.36	36.25	5.39	454,073

- 15. Table 6 summarizes the analysis of records that do not have a DPS ID Number listed on the TEAM voter file. Each of the first three rows summarizes a linkage between TEAM and DPS based on SSN9, ND, and ADG, respectively. For instance, the first row shows that I attempted to match 88,140 records in TEAM based on SSN9. This reflects the number of TEAM records without a DPS ID Number that include a unique SSN9. Of those, 28.58% did not match to DPS. The others did match.
- 16. The bottom row of Table 6 provides the overall summary for the TEAM records lacking a DPS ID Number. Of the 457,441 total records lacking a DPS ID Number, I attempted to link 454,073 (99.26%) to the DPS database. (The other 0.74% did not have a unique or complete value for SSN9, ND, or ADG). Of the individuals I attempted to find on DPS, 42% matched to a DPS record. That amounts to 189,095 registered voters. These individuals possess a DPS ID Number and therefore are instructed by Texas's mail ballot forms to list their DPS ID Number (and only their DPS ID Number) on their mail ballot forms. However, if they follow those instructions and list only that DPS ID Number, SB 1 requires their ballot applications, and their ballots, to be rejected because the number is not listed on TEAM.

- 17. Subpopulations: Of the 189,095 individuals who match to DPS and have a DPS ID Number even though no such number is listed on TEAM,
 - 74,982 are over age 65
 - 52,157 voted in the 2020 election
 - 28,152 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
 - 1,475 have FPCA statuses
 - 391 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

These numbers show that many active voters who are eligible to vote by mail under

Numbers.

18. Typos in Social Security Number. Among registrants who lack a DPS ID Number recorded on TEAM but who match to a record in DPS based on ND or ADG, I compare the SSN4 as recorded on the two databases. I find that 3,431 individuals who appear on both databases have discrepancies in their SSN4s. If the DPS records of SSN are correct, then these 3,431 cases result from inaccuracies on TEAM. They would cause election officials to reject mail ballot forms from citizens who include their correct SSN4 on the forms. A voter may include an SSN4 on ballot materials as a precautionary measure based on supplemental instructions from election administrators.¹⁴

E. Linkage Part II: TEAM Records Listed with DPS ID Numbers

- 19. I now turn to the analysis of the 16,994,311 records in which a DPS ID Number is listed in the TEAM databases. As noted above in Table 5, 96.2% of these records have a unique SSN9 associated with them. I first link these records to DPS by matching on SSN9. Of 16,340,755 records with a unique SSN9 on TEAM, 99.71% match to a record in DPS. However, 16.34% of the records match to more than one DPS ID Number.
- 20. Next, I link records based on the ND combination, as described in Paragraph 11 above.
 The ND combination is unique for 16,869,025 individuals who have a DPS ID Number listed on TEAM. Of these, 97.66% match to a record in DPS. However, 15.89% match to more than one DPS ID Number.
- 21. Next, I link records based on the ADG combination. The ADG combination is unique for 16,316,427 individuals who have a DPS ID Number listed on TEAM. Of these, 85.19% match to a record in DPS. However, 11.01% match to more than one DPS ID Number.

TABLE 7: Results of Linking TEAM to DPS Records for TEAM Records with a DPS ID Number listed

	No Match to DPS	Single Match to DPS	Multiple Match to DPS	Attempted
				to Match
SSN9	0.29%	83.36%	16.34%	16,340,755
ND	2.34	81.76	15.89	16,869,025
ADG	14.81	74.19	11.01	16,316,427

¹⁴ See discussion of the State's instructions in my Initial Report, Footnote 4, and in First Supplemental Report, Paragraphs 50-55.

21

- 22. Table 7 summarizes the analysis of records with a DPS ID Number on the voter file.

 Consider the bottom row. Of the 16,994,311 records in TEAM listed with a DPS ID

 Number, I attempted to link 16,980,669 (99.92%) of them to the DPS database. The remaining 0.08% did not have a unique or complete record on SSN, ND, and ADG. Of these 16,980,669 records, 99.18% matched to a record in DPS. However, many of them are listed more than once on DPS, with multiple ID numbers. These 14.10% of records sum up to 2,394,435 records. That is, for 2.4 million Texas registered voters who have a

 DPS ID Number listed, they may put a correct DPS ID Number on their mail ballot application form but nevertheless have their application (or their ballot envelope) rejected because the DPS ID Number they write down, while correct, happens not to be the DPS

 ID Number recorded on the TEAM file.
- 23. The 2.4 million figure may be an underestimate. Many DPS ID holders are listed not just with one DPS ID Number but they have alternative ID numbers stored as "AKA DL/ID Numbers." Of the TEAM records that linked to a single DPS ID Number, 1,407,010 of them linked to a record that listed alternative ID numbers in the "AKA DL/ID Number" field. During her April 20, 2022 deposition, Sheri Gibson, chief of the Texas DPS driver's license division, explained that these AKA DL/ID numbers are identification numbers associated with the ID holder that are either erroneous or originate from a prior version of the State's license system. If registrants use these alternative identification numbers when submitting a mail ballot application or mail ballot, they will also have their forms rejected because the AKA DL/ID Numbers are not the identification numbers on the voter registration records that are associated with these registrants. Because some AKA ID Numbers are considered by DPS to be erroneous or otherwise invalid (i.e., not just "expired," which does not impact validity for SB 1 purposes), in order to perform a conservative analysis, I focus here on registered voters who have multiple DPS ID Numbers exclusive of the AKA DL/ID Numbers.

- 24. Subpopulations: Of the 2,394,435 individuals who match to multiple DPS ID Numbers,
 - 174,880 are over age 65
 - 1,073,661 voted in the 2020 election
 - 91,469 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
 - 1,325 have FPCA status
 - 5,279 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

These numbers show that many active voters who are eligible to vote by mail under

Texas law are listed in TEAM with a DPS ID Number but possess multiple DPS ID

Numbers. If they list a DPS ID Number other than the one that happens to be recorded in TEAM, SB 1 requires their mail ballot forms to be rejected.

25. Typos in Social Security Number. Looking just at the last 4 digits of Social Security numbers, I calculate the number of individuals in TEAM who match to records in DPS based on ND and ADG, but whose TEAM records show a different SSN4 than is shown on DPS. There are 40,922 individuals who appear on DPS with different SSN4s than shown on TEAM. If the DPS database is correct and these individuals mark down their correct SSN4 on a mail ballot application, then their application will be rejected because of incorrectly recorded data in TEAM.

- a. Subpopulations: Of the 40,922 individuals whose SSN4s listed on TEAM do not match the SSN4s listed in the DPS database
 - 14,945 are over age 65
 - 25,795 voted in the 2020 election
 - 10,294 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
 - 100 have FPCA status
 - 110 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

These numbers show that many active voters who are eligible to vote by mail under

Texas law are listed in TEAM with an SSN4 that is inconsistent with the SSN4 listed in the DPS database.

- 26. Typos in DPS ID Numbers. Just as there are discrepancies between the SSNs listed in TEAM and the corresponding SSNs listed in DPS, there are also discrepancies in DPS ID Numbers. Using the methodology for calculating these discrepancies that was explained in my Initial Report, I calculate that 62,461 individuals have a DPS ID Number in TEAM that does not match any DPS ID Number in the DPS database.
 - a. Subpopulations: Of the 62,461 individuals on TEAM who match to DPS on SSN9, ND, and ADG, but have DPS ID Numbers that do not correspond to the DPS database,
 - 14,602 are over age 65
 - 27,441 voted in the 2020 election
 - 9,006 are over 65 AND voted in the 2020 election
 - 75 have FPCA status

 359 individuals matched to DPS records indicating homebound status or disabled veteran status.

F. Summary of Results from Updated Analysis

- 27. To comply with the identification verification requirements in SB 1, registered voters who have a DPS ID are instructed to record their ID number on a mail ballot application and again when submitting a mail ballot. If they do not have an ID number, they must record their SSN4. The analysis from the updated TEAM and DPS files show the following:
 - a. 189,095 registered voters are not listed in TEAM with a DPS ID, but they do have a DPS ID. Official forms instruct these individuals to list only their DPS ID, but if they do so, their ballot or ballot application will be rejected.
 - i. Of these, 74,982 are over 65 years old, 28,152 of whom voted in the most recent presidential election.
 - ii. Of these, 1,475 have FPCA status or are listed as disabled veterans or as homebound citizens.
 - b. 2,394,435 individuals who are listed on TEAM with an associated DPS ID have more than one DPS ID Number. If they happen to write down a DPS ID number that is correct but is not the DPS ID number recorded in TEAM, their ballot or ballot application will be rejected.
 - i. Of these, 174,880 are over 65 years old, 91,469 of whom voted in the most recent presidential election.
 - ii. Of these, 5,279 have FPCA status or are listed as disabled veterans or as homebound citizens.

- c. 44,353 individuals have SSN4s listed in their TEAM records that do not match the SSN4s listed in the DPS database.
- d. At least 62,461 individuals who are listed on TEAM registration records with a DPS ID Number do not show the same DPS ID Number listed in the DPS database.
- 28. Altogether, 2.7 million registered voters in Texas (out of 17.5 million) are at an increased risk of having a mail ballot or mail ballot application rejected due to identification number requirements in SB 1. These numbers do not include individuals who have misplaced or surrendered their IDs or who mis-enter information on a mail ballot form.

 These 2.7 million individuals can correctly fill out their forms, but their applications and ballots would be rejected nonetheless.

ADDENDUM TO

Second Supplement to Report on Identification Number Requirements for Mail Balloting under SB 1

United States v. Texas

United States District Court for the Western District of Texas

May 8, 2023

I. Summary

- 1. In Part IV of my February 3, 2023 report ("Second Supplemental"), I compared the successful mail voting rates in the November 2022 election of individuals whose records I had deemed "at risk" for a ballot being rejected on account of the identification requirements in SB 1 with the successful mail voting rates of those not deemed "at risk." I found that at-risk voters successfully voted by mail at a significantly lower rate than other voters. In his March 3, 2023 rebuttal report, the State's witness, Dr. Mark Hoekstra, raised questions about this analysis. He suggested that my analysis had not accounted for the possibility that voters in the at-risk pool a.) could have been rejected for reasons unrelated to SB 1, b.) simply substituted voting in-person for voting by-mail, and c.) exhibit different voting rates from other voters for reasons that are correlated with being in the at-risk pool but have nothing to do with SB 1 compliance (See Hoekstra at Paragraph 21).
- 2. Following my review of Dr. Hoekstra's report but before my April 20, 2023 deposition, I conducted additional, informal analyses to answer questions raised by Dr. Hoekstra, such as checking whether "at-risk" voters did indeed substitute in-person voting for mail voting. During the deposition, the counsel for the State asked if I had done analysis since writing my last report. I disclosed I had done an analysis related to Dr. Hoekstra's comments, though I had not formally written up computer code nor written up my notes. At my deposition, the State's counsel asked that I share an updated analysis.
- 3. Responsive to the State's counsel's request, I went back to the database and conducted the updated analysis that I report on here. I am also providing updated programming code to accompany this addendum. In short, the updated analysis shows that voters in the "at-risk" pool who applied for a mail ballot (successfully or unsuccessfully) were significantly less likely to successfully vote (either by mail or in person) in the November 2022 election. This finding cannot be explained by substitution of in-person voting for voting by mail. The finding also cannot be explained by key demographic or geographic factors (e.g., age, county of residence). Registered voters in the at-risk population who apply for a mail ballot are more than twice as likely as other voters to have a record in the TEAM database indicating that their ballot was rejected due to SB 1. This evidence is consistent with the view that the 2.7 million Texans for whom identification numbers are incorrectly or incompletely recorded in TEAM are significantly more likely than other voters to have ballots rejected and to fail to successfully vote because of SB 1.

II. Analysis

- 4. I start the analysis with the 8,178,445 TEAM records that indicated any kind of interaction with election officials related to the November 8, 2022 election (See Paragraph 14 of Second Supplemental Report). Of these records, 422,605 have an "application status" code, which indicates that the registrant requested a mail ballot, and 390,012 have a "ballot type" code, which indicates that the registrant successfully requested a mail ballot. TEAM does show some records of individuals with an "application status" code who do not have a "ballot type" code. TEAM also shows some records of individuals who have a "ballot type" code but not an "application status" code. I perform analyses of voter turnout here separately among those who have an indicator that they requested a ballot and among those who have an indicator they were sent a mail ballot. The results are substantively the same either way.
- 5. While there are 8,178,445 records in TEAM associated with the November 2022 election, tens of thousands of individuals are listed multiple times. For instance, a person might have one record indicating she had a mail ballot rejected and then a separate record indicating that she had a mail ballot accepted. In this analysis, I create a file where each person is listed once, and I record for that person whether she has any records in TEAM at all indicating she a.) requested a ballot, b.) received a ballot, c.) voted by mail, and d.) voted at all.

¹ In the Second Supplemental analysis, I focused on individuals who successfully requested a mail ballot. These are records that have a ballot type designation as "AB" in TEAM. However, as an alternative, one can base this analysis on the application status field so as to include individuals who tried, but failed, to receive a mail ballot. The decision, one way or the other, does not affect any of the core results, as I will show here.

- Of 393,324 individuals who requested a ballot, 81.9% successfully voted by mail and 89.9% voted by any method (mail or in person).
- Of 386,478 individuals who were sent a ballot, 83.4% successfully voted by mail and 89.8% voted by any method (mail or in person).
- 6. Next, I merge this data in with the records of the 2.7 million individuals who I deem "at risk" (See Section II and Appendix A of Second Supplemental for information about how I defined the "at risk" population). These are individuals who either have no DPS ID Number listed in TEAM but do possess a DPS ID Number, have multiple DPS ID Numbers but only one of them listed in TEAM, or have typos in their DPS ID Numbers or their Social Security Numbers listed in TEAM. Among those who either requested a mail ballot or were sent a mail ballot, I measure whether the rate of a successful vote differs depending on whether someone is in the "at-risk" pool or not.

Individuals who applied for Mail Ballot

	Successful Mail Vote	Successful Vote Any Method	Observations
Not "At Risk"	82.4%	90.6%	364,267
"At Risk"	75.9%	82.2%	29,057
DIFFERENCE	6.5 pp	8.4 pp

Note: "pp" means percentage points. It is the difference between the two numbers above it.

Individuals who were sent a Mail Ballot

	Successful Mail Vote	Successful Vote Any Method	Observations
Not "At Risk"	83.8%	90.4%	358,041
"At Risk"	77.6%	81.9%	28,437
DIFFERENCE	6.2 pp	8.5 pp

Note: "pp" means percentage points. It is the difference between the two numbers above it.

- 7. As Table 1 shows, regardless of whether one measures the voting rates among those who requested ballots or were sent ballots, Texas registrants in the at-risk pool who attempted to vote by mail are over 6 percentage points less likely to successfully vote by mail and 8.5 percentage points less like to successfully vote at all, compared to those not in the at-risk pool. All the differences in this table are highly statistically significant (p < .0001). Note that the version of this analysis from my Second Supplemental Report is the 6.2 percentage point difference in mail voting among those who were sent a mail ballot (bottom left of Table 1). Table 1 here shows three additional comparisons, finding a consistent, large difference in participation rates among those in the at-risk pool and those not in the at-risk pool.
- 8. Dr. Hoekstra raised the possibility that the individuals who are in the "at-risk" pool are different from those not in the "at-risk" pool in ways that are correlated with voter turnout but have nothing to do with identification numbers. Dr. Hoekstra performed no analysis on this point, and his critique is undermined by the fact that the analysis here is conditioned on individuals requesting a ballot. However, responsive to Dr. Hoekstra's critique, I analyzed the data with two key control variables, age and county.
- 9. As noted in my February 28, 2022 report, at Paragraph 77, registrants without a DPS ID on TEAM tend to be older than other registrants. Suppose that, conditional on requesting a ballot, the at-risk pool has a higher share of older voters and that those older voters are more likely to not successfully vote. A regression analysis that controls for age is responsive to a challenge of this sort.
- 10. In a regression framework, I also control for county variation using county fixed-effects.
 Including county fixed-effects accommodates a concern that what is explaining the lower rates of successful voting in the at-risk pool is related to specific counties that have disproportionate share of the at-risk pool and disproportionate share of individuals who try, but fail, to vote after requesting an absentee ballot.

11. Table 2 shows the regression results from an ordinary least squares regression model.² The first row is comparable to the percentages in Table 1. For example, in the second column, the -.084 figure means that, controlling for age and county, those in the at-risk pool are 8.4 percentage points less likely to successfully vote (by mail or in person) conditional on applying for a mail ballot. That number, 8.4, is the same as listed in Table 1. This means that adding the control variables does not affect the relationship between "at risk" and participation. The same pattern is true across all four estimates. Note that I also ran this regression model and included gender as an additional control variable. Including gender also has no bearing on the significant relationship between being in the at-risk population and successfully voting.

	Applied for Ballot		Sent	Ballot
	Mail Vote	Any Vote	Mail Vote	Any Vote
"At Risk"	067 (.002)	084 (.002)	063 (.002)	089 (.002)
Age (in 10s)	.019 (.0004)	.018 (.0003)	.017 (.0004)	018 (.0003)
Constant	.686 (.003)	.776 (.003)	.714 (.003)	.770 (.003)
N	393,229	393,229	386,387	386,387

NOTE: Each column represents an output from an OLS regression analysis measuring the relationship between "at-risk" and voting while controlling for age and for county of residence. Standard errors are reported in parentheses.

12. Another comment offered by Dr. Hoekstra is that some individuals who did not end up voting by mail successfully may have not voted for reasons unrelated to identification issues that are concentrated in the "at-risk" pool. I observed individuals who requested a mail ballot but then asked to cancel the mail ballot ("ballot type" code "AC"). I re-ran the analysis excluding these individuals. The results are the same.

² Multivariate ordinary least squares (OLS) regression is a common way to measure the relationship between two variables while controlling for other factors. In this case, OLS allows me to measure the relationship between being in the at-risk population and voting successfully, while controlling for age and county of residence. If the relationship between being at-risk and voting successfully is significant even when the other factors are included in the model, this means that the differences in turnout rates between at-risk and non at-risk voters are not attributable to those other factors.

- 13. A final piece of evidence that confirms that identification issues are at the heart of differences between the at-risk pool and the non at-risk pool comes from the ballot codes in TEAM indicating a ballot was rejected on account of ID issues. As noted in my Second Supplemental report (Paragraph 19), over 11,000 records show a rejection code related to identification issues. Are those rejection codes concentrated in the at-risk population? Yes.
 - 2.8% of Texas registrants who were sent a ballot and are not in the at-risk pool had their ballot rejected due to SB 1 identification requirements.
 - 6.4% of Texas registrants who were sent a ballot and are in the at-risk pool had their ballot rejected due to SB 1 identification requirements.

This rate for the at-risk registrants is more than double the rate of those not in the at-risk pool, and the difference is, again, statistically significant at the p <.0001 level.

III. Conclusion

14. As requested by the State's counsel at my deposition, this addendum summarizes the additional analysis I conducted following my review of Dr. Hoekstra's March 3, 2022 report. The main new analysis I performed responded to the question of whether at-risk voters were less likely to vote at all in the November 2022 election or just less likely to vote by mail. I have found that the at-risk voters are significantly less likely than the non-at-risk voters to vote and to vote by mail. This finding is robust when controlling for age and county, and when setting aside individuals who requested their mail ballots to be cancelled. I further show that those in the at-risk pool are more than twice as likely as other voters to have ballots rejected specifically on account of SB 1 identification requirements. The findings strengthen the conclusions of my previous report that individuals for whom TEAM incorrectly or incompletely records identification numbers are significantly less likely to vote on account of identification requirements of SB 1.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States that the forgoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge.

Voting Assistance & Vote by Mail

La Unión Del Pueblo Entero et al. v. State of Texas et al.

Tammy Patrick

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS

- 1. I am a longtime election administrator and election administration advisor and instructor. I was engaged by the United States of America to provide my opinion on two aspects of Texas' new election law, SB1. First, I was asked to analyze the oath that individuals providing assistance to a voter must swear under penalty of perjury and to evaluate whether it is consistent with sound principles for election assistance and election administration. Second, I was asked to evaluate whether the provisions of SB1 requiring voters applying for a mail ballot or voting by mail to provide a number from a Texas identification document if the voter has been issued one, and a partial social security number if they have not, in order for their application or ballot to be accepted, are consistent with sound election administration principles.
- 2. With respect to the voter assistance oath under SB1, it is my opinion based on my knowledge and years of experience in election administration that the substantive limitations of the oath are not consistent with sound election assistance practices and principles. The oath does not allow for assistance that is comprehensive or responsive to voters' needs, and may prevent timely and equitable assistance for some voters. It also places a burden on election administrators to interfere with the assistance relationship between an assistor and voter, rather than to support ballot access and ensure voters receive the assistance they need.
- 3. With respect to the vote-by-mail provisions of SB1, it is my opinion that rejecting mail ballot applications or mail ballots based exclusively on a mismatch between an identification card number or partial social security number provided on ballot materials and voter records maintained by the state is not sound election administration practice, nor is it justified by any hypothetical interest in ballot security. This all-or-nothing approach to reverifying the identity of mail voters will cause ballot rejections despite officials' ability to positively identify the voter who sent the materials, and will not meaningfully make elections more secure. Evidence of the rejection rates from Texas' implementation of these provisions so far shows rejection rates far beyond what would be considered reasonable in a well-run election and demonstrates that the identification number requirement does not adequately protect access to voting.

CONTENTS

4. This Report proceeds in six sections. Section 1 describes my experience, expertise, and qualifications as they relate to the opinions expressed in this report. Sections 2 and 3 pertain to voter assistance. In Section 2, I lay out the principles of voter assistance applicable to my opinion in this case, and in Section 3, I apply those principles to the voter assistance oath provision of SB1. Sections 4 and 5 pertain to voting by mail. In Section 4, I provide background information and principles underlying sound administration of voting by mail. In Section 5, I apply those principles to the identification document number requirements of SB1. Section 6 summarizes my conclusions.

REQUIRED DISCLOSURES

5. Over the past 4 years, I have not testified as an expert at trial or deposition.

- 6. Over the past 10 years, I have authored the publications listed in Appendix A.
- 7. I am being compensated for my time at the rate of $250.00 per hour. My compensation is not dependent on my opinions and findings in this case.

SECTION 1: EXPERTISE

- 8. For almost twenty years, I have served as an election administrator and expert on election administration. I provide a comprehensive curriculum vitae at Appendix B and will draw upon specific examples that have given me experience relevant to the questions the United States has asked me to opine on throughout this Report, as well as to contextualize my election administration experience as it relates to voter assistance and voting by mail. Below, I highlight some of my most pertinent experience.
- 9. From 2003-2014, I was the Federal Compliance Officer for the Maricopa County Elections Department in Arizona. During my tenure in Maricopa County, I developed and formalized an award-winning Voter Assistance Program with comprehensive protocols establishing the proper staffing levels at the polls and ensuring the proficiency of workers to aid voters and their assistants, training of workers in proper assistance practices, and communicating with the voting community about their rights and the services available to them at the polls. When constructing the program, it was critical to create something that contemplated all of the challenges in identifying vulnerabilities in the system and establishing mitigations prior to any voters being negatively impacted or receiving subpar service. As such, I not only trained pollworkers, field trouble-shooters, and observers, but I also established a monthly meeting of a Community Network consisting of city and town clerks, tribal leaders, political party representatives, and members of the various voter advocacy communities.
- 10. In 2013, I was appointed a Commissioner on the Presidential Commission on Election Administration (PCEA) by then-President Barack Obama. This bipartisan effort spent six months holding hearings around the country to look into specific items laid out in the Executive Order establishing the Commission, including voter assistance, language access, and vote by mail administration. In public hearings, stakeholder meetings, and research and reports submitted to the Commission as testimony, we heard about the challenges that some voters were still facing in exercising their right to vote.
- 11. The Commission produced our report "The American Voting Experience" in January of 2014. The report was well received by election officials, legislators, and voter advocates as containing practical, bipartisan solutions to some of the challenges facing our elections. The report is still used authoritatively today.
- 12. From 2014 to 2017, I served as a Senior Fellow at the Bipartisan Policy Center advising their Elections Team on the implementation of the Presidential Commission on Election Administration's recommendations. We convened workshops of large jurisdictions, published reports on the "New Reality of Voting by Mail" and election day command centers, and established a voter wait time research agenda in collaboration with MIT that, for the first time in the United States, measured the impact of election administration on the voting experience. During those three years I testified in numerous state legislatures, presented at dozens of conferences, and spoke to thousands of election administrators on how to improve election administration and policy.

13. Since 2017 I have been Senior Advisor to the Election Team at the Democracy Fund, an independent, nonpartisan foundation working towards a more equitable election system. In that role, I have dedicated my time and expertise to the continued advancement of the field of election administration by conducting webinars, speaking, and teaching. I have taught at the University of Minnesota's Humphrey School of Public Policy since 2017 and have lectured at Harvard, American University, MIT, and Arizona State University. I am also a frequent speaker at the Election Sciences, Reform, and Administration (ESRA) Conferences. Due to my expertise in voter assistance, language access, and voting by mail, I have testified in the United States Senate and House of Representatives and numerous state legislatures. I often speak or hold webinars for civic engagement groups, am a frequent guest on NPR and PBS News Hour, and serve as a source for many of our largest newspapers and publications.

SECTION 2: VOTER ASSISTANCE

- 14. In this Section, I provide an overview of the principles by which election administrators ensure voters are able to receive meaningful assistance at the polls in casting a ballot. The information in this section is derived from my experience as an election administrator and my research and work supporting election administration and sound election management.
- 15. At the highest level, the assistance that voters receive from assistors of their choice is an integral part of the administration of any elections program. If that connective tissue is jeopardized, if voters are unable to get effective assistance from their person of choice, it influences the administration of the entire program.
- 16. I have lectured and advised jurisdictions across the country on the implementation of effective assistance programs. Prior to the Census Bureau's 2011 Voting Rights Act Section 203 determinations, I worked with Weld County, Colorado and Fairfax County, Virginia. I helped develop pollworker and staff training materials for Sonoma County, California when they launched their language program in 2016. And I established the voter assistance program in Maricopa County, Arizona when I was an election administrator there.

³ Bipartisan Policy Center. Improving The Voter Experience | Bipartisan Policy Center (April 27, 2018).

- 17. When I am reviewing a voter assistance program, there are a handful of primary principles that I have developed to gauge its efficacy, based on my years of experience and study. These principles have been informed by years of work with voter advocacy groups such as the National Disabilities Rights Network and the Arizona Center for Disability Law, and the hearings of the Presidential Commission on Election Administration. They are:
 - 1. Is the availability of assistance services widely disseminated to voters who may need them?
 - 2. Is the assistance unbiased/non-leading?
 - 3. Is the fulfillment of assistance requests timely and equitable?
 - 4. Is the assistance offered in a comprehensive manner for all voting options and methods?
 - 5. Is the assistance responsive to the voter's needs and does it fulfill the voter's wishes?
 - 6. Is the voter's autonomy and humanity maintained in all decision points?
 - 7. Are election officials provided with the proper tools and training commensurate with the import of the task at hand?
 - 8. Are the program's policies, materials, and procedures created in a vacuum, or are voters and the applicable community's experts engaged?
- 18. The foundation of any voter assistance program hinges upon its ability to serve the voting public, so that they are able to successfully navigate the process, and to ensure that the votes cast fully reflect the voter's wishes. For example, the first thing that I did in Maricopa County when establishing the County's voter assistance program was to create a mission statement that would be the guiding star and serve as a reminder of the importance of the job: "Maricopa County Elections Department's Assistance Program strives to ensure equal access to the electoral process for all its citizens and to provide the assistance some voters may require based on physical or mental abilities, mobility concerns, or language skill sets." Setting the proper expectation for voters of what services are available, and training staff and pollworkers to have the tools necessary to engage with the voting public—including supporting those who are assisting voters—are all part of any robust plan.
- 19. An effective assistance program provides eligible voters unencumbered access to assistance at all points of the process. As such, voters should be able to obtain assistance that is responsive to their individual needs. Physical, cognitive, and language barriers to completing the act of voting should not be determinative of voters' ability to successfully participate. Voting is not a literacy test, it is not a cognitive test, it is not a test of linguistic skills, and it is not a test of physical strength, dexterity, or acumen. Voting is the act and process of making one's voice heard in the selection of government representatives and ballot measures, and that act may not only benefit from assistance for some to participate but be reliant upon it.
- 20. There are many voters who rely on the aid of another in casting their ballot. In my experience, voters often bring someone with them when they know beforehand that they will need some help. Whether it be a family member, attendant, care-provider, or friend, voters often have those who aid them in other facets of their life assist them at the polls. These individuals commonly are very familiar with the voter's needs. Assistors provide voters with the assistance needed to effectively cast a ballot successfully reflecting each voter's intention.

- 21. Assistance from an assistor of one's choice can take on even further heightened importance in places where poll staffing is stretched thin. For decades, we have witnessed a migration of inperson voting away from precinct-based polling locations offered for a few hours on a single Election Day. In most states, voters now have options across a voting period and can choose a voting location, due to the growth of voting centers. While both of these administrative polices are recommended in order to provide voters options in where and when to vote, it can provide managerial challenges in staffing, particularly in identifying where language assistance may be necessary. This situation creates an even greater need to support voters when they bring along their own aid.
- 22. The need for voters to have access to assistors of their own choice will only increase in the coming years. According to the National Center for Education Statistics, Texas is rated in the bottom 25% of the states in adult literacy, with Texas counties filling all but two spots on the list of the Bottom 10 Counties. Literacy concerns are aggravated with the elevated language that is used in voting materials and on the ballot itself. When you add in the growing need of an aging population—the Census Bureau projects that the 65-and-older population is estimated to nearly double from 49 million in 2016 to 95 million in 20606—and the systemic underfunding of election offices, the need for voters to have access to assistance from their person of choice has the potential to only increase in the years to come. An election is the largest civic effort done on the national scale. Thousands of election administrators train tens of thousands of permanent staff as well as hundreds of thousands of temporary workers on the intricacies of the election process, as dictated by state and federal law. This is a particularly difficult task, especially given that more than a third of our election offices are part-time duties and only the very largest offices have more than a handful of full-time employees, as demonstrated by the Democracy Fund survey found at Appendix C.

SECTION 3: ANALYSIS OF THE ASSISTOR'S OATH REQUIRED BY SB1

23. Based on my review of SB1, I conclude that the changes to the assistor's oath contained in SB1 are inconsistent with the principles of sound voter assistance laid out above. The attestation that the assistor will confine their assistance to reading the ballot, directing the voter to read the ballot, marking the ballot, or directing the voter to mark the ballot appears to prevent assistors from providing meaningful and often necessary forms of assistance such as answering a voter's questions. The administration of the oath creates challenges for the management of the polling location due to the potential impact on efficient voter processing, increased demands on pollworkers when they are already difficult to obtain in sufficient numbers and are stretched thin at the polls with other responsibilities, and the enforcement of the statute is unfeasible and without guidance.

24. A thoughtful voter assistance program structure can maintain the integrity and legitimacy of the electoral process without infringing on a voter's ability to obtain assistance should they require it; without the creation of a complex system for voters, assistants, and pollworkers to navigate; without introducing the threat of criminal penalties for offering common sense aid to voters. Comparing SB1 with the principles of voter assistance laid forth above, one can see that the structures in place in Texas after the passage of SB1 violate several of those principles, most notably the fulfillment of assistance being timely and equitable as well as responsive to the voter's needs.

25. Principle 3: Is the fulfillment of assistance requests timely and equitable?

SB1 is likely to cause significant delays in providing assistance given the restrictions on assistors from answering clarifying questions. The bureaucratic hurdle of an expanded oath will impede voters with disabilities, voters with limited English proficiency, and voters who may be both, from having the same voting experience and treatment other voters receive. To my knowledge there is no research that would support the notion that the limitations in the revised oath would improve or maintain the quality of voter assistance or further secure the voting process. What we do know is that there will be demonstrable delays for it will add considerable time to the processing of voters. We know from queuing theory that the addition of even the shortest interval can accumulate and cause what is often referred to as the "elbow of death"—a point in which the line cannot be processed under existing resources in a timely manner and the wait time only continues to grow. This understanding of the implications of even the slightest change in voter-processing policy was exemplified at the 2018 Election Assistance Commission's Election Data Summit by Ms. Michelle White, General Registrar of Voters from Prince William County, Virginia.

26. Principle 5: Is the assistance responsive to the voter needs?

SB1's assistor oath creates a situation unresponsive to voters' needs due to the prevention of assistants from answering voters' questions and sets the stage for voters' needs to go unmet. Clarifying questions can take a number of forms beyond what is listed in the voting instructions.

Although those instructions may demonstrate how to mark the ballot or how many to vote for in a given race, voters often have other questions, for example around the consequences of voting for more (or fewer) candidates than allowed or what happens if they make a mistake marking the ballot or have an errant mark, among other potential questions. The answers to these questions can be determinant in the successfully casting of a ballot. If a voter asks their assistor the question "is there more to vote on the back of the ballot?" or "it says vote for no more than 3, so I can just vote for 2?" it appears an assistor answering those questions would be in violation of the oath, and it is unclear how this would be administered or who would make the judgment calls about what forms of assistance are not permitted, creating administrative problems. Enforcement also has potential voter privacy implications with an impact not only on that voter, but the entire processing flow in the polling location while pollworkers get bogged down with the process. Based on my experience there will be down-stream ramifications with impacts on call centers and hotlines due to increased calls asking for clarification, thus further delaying voter aid. The Texas Secretary of State's Handbook for Election Judges and Clerks leaves many questions around the implementation and administration of the oath as to how it is to be carried out at the polls as well as the enforcement of the new criminal penalties.9

- 27. We know from the recently published instructions from the Secretary of State that observers are not allowed to observe assistance provided by an assistor of choice who is not an election official, but they are if the voter gets assistance from the pollworkers. The voter is put into a position where they have to decide between getting assistance from someone of their choice (but who cannot answer their questions) or subject themselves to outside observation in casting their ballot, abdicate their right to privacy in voting, and have pollworkers help them. Voters may not be aware of this consequence when making their determination. Nothing in the Election Judge Manual advises pollworkers to disclose this to voters; nor is it a required posting in Section 6 on Posting Notices (pages 9-11), so the voters may not be aware of the subjection to observation in casting their ballot by someone who is not a state or county official until they are actively voting.
- 28. In my opinion the changes to the oath violate these basic principles of voting assistance in the prevention of meaningful assistance and have substantive issues with implementation and enforcement. The enforcement of this statute is untenable and complicates the provision of assistance to voters that will satisfy their needs

SECTION 4: VOTE BY MAIL ADMINISTRATION

29. In this Section, I provide background and contextual information for my evaluation of the vote-by-mail provisions of SB1.

¹⁰ Texas Secretary of State's Election Judges manual, pages 17 (section 6l) and 48 (section 4g).

- 30. Americans have been voting by mail since the Civil War. Every state has some portion of citizens who vote using this method of voting; the proportion is directly related to the onerousness of the application process in that state. Voters' ability to successfully navigate the process and submit a ballot that is ultimately counted depends on return options and acceptance protocols. For years, tens of millions of American voters have had their ballots handed to them by a United States Postal worker, not a pollworker. According to the Vote at Home Institute, with the expansion of states moving to all vote by mail elections and the number of voters on permanent early voting lists, one in three voters will have their ballots mailed out to them automatically in the 2022 midterm elections. This is in stark contrast with the handful of states that still require voters to provide an excuse to receive their ballot by mail.
- 31. As with all things related to election administration, each step in the vote-by-mail process builds upon the one preceding it. Vote by Mail can be defined in four main stages¹¹:
 - 1. Application options and requirements
 - 2. Voter identification and authentication
 - 3. Ballot return
 - 4. Processing and verification

These principles apply to every state, no matter how many voters they have voting by mail. If we look at what is most prevalent across the country and compare that to the new regime under SB1, we quickly see that the new construct is an outlier, creates unnecessary barriers, and will continue to be detrimental to eligible Texans attempting to access the franchise.

Application Options and Requirements

32. Access to the application process does not imply a lack of security of the process. States can, and must, have election policies that are both open and secure; these are not mutually exclusive. Administering an election in a global pandemic demonstrated the need for voters to know all of their options in voting and what the requirements are for their participation. We saw record engagement in the 2020 election cycle not just due to an expansion of options for voters, but in many states due to official messaging around the process that set accurate expectations for what was necessary to successfully navigate requirements. Many states have adopted voter-centric policies to govern their administration of absentee and vote by mail voting by establishing reasons to accept an application, or doing away with the application process entirely, rather than to use it as an opportunity to reject the request.

Voter Identification and Authentication of the Application

33. When processing a ballot application an election administrator must identify that the correct record is being worked and that the application is authentic. The information being used is most often simply to inform that the correct record is being reviewed. Whether a voter is requesting a ballot on an application for a specific election, or for a given calendar year, the information that they provide in its totality validates their identity. The voter validation process should be inclusive of reviewing a combination of pieces of information available to an election administrator or pollworker which may include: first/middle/last name, date of birth, mother's maiden name, county of birth, driver's license or non-operating identification number, last four of social security number, tribal identification number, handwriting sample (such as the completion of previous forms and requests)—the cumulative review of all fields on a voter registration form or ballot application informs voter identity. Not all states require a written application to be completed, or even a written request. Online and telephonic applications allow additional access points to voters and can utilize other identification elements such as personal knowledge of the voter (i.e. knowing the voter's voice) that can substantiate the voter's identity.

- 34. Signature verification is the most common method of voter authentication and is sufficient for authentication of a ballot request. A signature or identifying mark is something that voters inherently have the ability to provide without it having to be provided to them, or have a path to be assisted in providing from someone of their choice. A voter will not misstate their own signature. That is not to say that signatures are static. Forensic training tells us that signatures mature around the age of 25 and begin to degrade as a person ages, typically in their 70s or 80s. Temporary situations also arise that can cause a signature to vary: normal writing hand in a cast, so voter is using their other hand, an uneven writing surface, etc. Most signature rejections on applications and ballot affidavits are from eligible voters who either omitted their signature or had a situation arise that prevented them from signing as they usually do. A signature is the typical means for a voter to certify the accuracy of the rest of the information they put on an application or carrier envelope. By contrast, the rejection or acceptance of an application hinging on the provision of a single data point that must be obtained by a government agency and can be subject to clerical error, transcription, and misinterpretation is problematic and contrary to sound election administration principles.
- 35. Voter authentication is an important part of maintaining the integrity of an election system, but it does not outweigh the need to ensure that eligible voters are able to engage. As mentioned previously, in my experience I have seen that authentication can, and should, contemplate the totality of information from the voter—various data fields and even various forms and documents. The prerequisite of a single data point as cause for rejection is problematic if other authentication elements are present (such as the signature). It is standard protocol for election officials to augment voter applications with corrected or omitted information after reaching out to the voter. Indeed, this is as much a security measure as it is good customer service and proper use of public funds. If someone had a request for a ballot made on their behalf without their knowledge, this voter authentication process of following up with the voter is the perfect way to find that out. Clarifying information with the voter enhances the security of the system by hearing directly from the voter why the signature was missing or mismatched.

SECTION 5: VOTE BY MAIL ADMINISTRATION UNDER SB1

- 36. The creation of a single point of failure for applicants who are unable to, or who do not, provide the same number that is on the voter's registration record, is a clear construction of a barrier in the process. A December 20, 2021 news article in the Texas Tribune reported that there were 702,257 records that only had one of the necessary numbers on file and 106,911 that didn't have either of the required numbers. A voter's signature is sufficient for other facets of engagement with the government, but not for requesting, or returning, a ballot. A voter's signature is sufficient for signing candidate nomination petitions—without the additional listing of one of the sanctioned numbers required under SB1, but not to request a ballot in order to vote for that candidate. We are already seeing the results of this overly prescriptive and limited acceptance policy in the increase in application and ballot rejections. Throughout the lead-up to the 2020 Primary Election there have been news reports of substantial increases in the rejection rates of both applications for ballots as well as the voted ballots, based not on the voters' ineligibility to vote, but due to being rejected based on the single point of data required under the new requirements post-SB1 implementation.
- 37. There are sound oversight practices in vote by mail administration that are comprehensive and do not result in mass rejections of applications. Quality control of the authentication process as well as the verification of signatures is critical. Administrative supervision that includes capturing contemporaneous data on staff at each step of the process to know if there are "acceptors" (those who say every application or signature is fine) or "rejecters" (those who are overly strict in their interpretation and statistically reject a higher rate than they should), along with a tiered oversight of the process ensures that it isn't a single person's interpretation that prevents a voter from obtaining a ballot or having their ballot be rejected/accepted. Voter registration and election management systems that archive and retain clipped images of all forms and applications as well as signatures from registers, rosters, petitions, and ballot affidavits improve the reviewer's ability to identify anomalous entries and flag potential issues without denying an eligible voter their vote. These administrative policies are commonplace across the country and have kept the vote by mail process secure without locking voters out, without inordinately high rejection rates of applications and ballots based on a single point of failure.

SECTION 6: CONCLUSION

38. The American voter has diverse needs that require a comprehensive menu of solutions. There are two paths. The first path is what the best programs have done—they provide training and tools so that workers are prepared to assist voters and their aids, they cover all the service channels and educate the public on their available options, practices and policies are transparent and known. The second path does not follow these workable and protective principles. This is the path that legislation such as SB1 takes with its creation of bureaucratic hurdles and the resulting obstacles for voters.

- 39. In my opinion, the expansion of the assistor oath does not provide a security benefit to justify the resulting interference with on access to adequate assistance. Similarly, the vote by mail ballot application requirements are onerous and unnecessary to identify the qualifications of, and authenticate, an eligible voter.
- 40. It bears repeating that across both provisions, SB1 erects unnecessary barriers for Texas voters needing assistance at the polls and for those wishing to cast absentee ballots. The oath requirement preventing assistors from answering voter's questions violates basic principles of voting assistance and has substantive issues with implementation and enforcement, and the vote by mail identifying number requirement results in the rejection of applications and ballots by qualified voters.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

APPENDIX C:

2019 Democracy Fund/Reed College Survey of Local Election Officials Figure 6 highlights the important role that voter education, assistance, and services play in the hearts and minds of election officials:

APPENDIX D:

2020 Democracy Fund/Reed College Survey of Local Election Officials highlights the staffing inequities across jurisdiction sizes. Small jurisdictions, often those that are rural, are disproportionately impacted by not having any full-time staff in the majority of offices. Voters in these areas need to rely on self-identified assistance.

APPENDIX E:

2020 Democracy Fund/Reed College Survey of Local Election Officials documented the challenges that election officials were experiencing in securing bilingual pollworkers, a situation that only further highlights the impact restrictions on voter-chosen assistants can have on their ability to participate.

Texas Primary Supplement to Report Voting Assistance & Vote by Mail

La Union del Pueblo Entero et al. v. State of Texas et al. Tammy Patrick

1. On February 28, 2022, I submitted a report entitled "Voting Assistance & Vote By Mail" in connection with the case La Unión del Pueblo Entero et al. v. State of Texas et al., which I will refer to here as the "Original Report." This report supplements and extends the Original Report based on facts and data related to voting by mail from Texas' March 1, 2022, primary election, the first statewide election conducted under the provisions of SB1.¹

Introduction & Summary of Conclusions

- 2. The implementation of SB1 has caused rejection rates of both applications for ballots by mail as well as ballot carrier envelopes to exceed normal rejection rates. This supplement applies data and individual accounts from the March 2022 primary election in Texas to the analysis of my Original Report. What I have observed tends to support the claim that SB1 creates unnecessary barriers to eligible Texas voters to participate in the franchise.
- 3. Issues anticipated in the Original Report with voters being able to comply with the new requirements under SB1 in applying for an absentee ballot and completing a ballot carrier envelope manifested in rejection numbers exceeding both the national trends as well as Texas' historical trends. News outlets have chronicled these issues since early this year. During the March 17, 2022, United States House of Representatives Committee on House Administration Subcommittee on Elections hearing "Voting in America: Ensuring Free and Fair Access to the Ballot in Texas," Travis County Judge Andy Brown testified that the numeric match requirement "created the largest ballot related challenges that Travis County faced in preparation for the March 1st primary".
- 4. Counties across Texas appear to have faced similar challenges in implementing SB1 and in educating their voters of the new requirements.

Analysis

5. Mail voting rates in the 2022 primaries were lower than in Texas' 2018 primary election, a comparable midterm election, as well as the more recent 2020 primary election as demonstrated by Figure 1 and Figure 2 from Professor Charles Stewart and the MIT Election Data and Science Lab:³

6. SB1 has caused Texas rejection rates to substantially exceed the national average in the first election after it was enacted. Data from the United States Election Assistance Commission demonstrates that national rejection rates tend to hover around 1% of the ballots returned as demonstrated in Figure 3:4

Absentee/mail-in ballot figures, 2016-2020
Year	Overall turnout	Ballots returned	Ballots rejected	Rejection rate ^[2]
2020	161,303,109	70,550,699	560,177	0.8%
2018	120,314,461	30,377,407	430,190	1.4%
2016	140,114,503	33,378,450	318,728	1.0%

The higher rejection rate in Texas appears to be directly attributable to the implementation of SB1. In the most recent elections prior to SB1's implementation, Texas' mail-in ballot rejection rates were less than 1% in the 2020 general and less than 2% in the 2018 midterm.⁵ With SB1 implemented, the rejection rates have increased to more than 12%, based on data from the Secretary of State's office.⁶ I have not seen any other intervening changes in the law or in administrative practice between the 2018 election and the March 1, 2022 primaries that have been suggested as the reason for this increase in rejections other than SB1. Election officials at both the state and local level attributed the increase to the new requirements under SB1.⁷ For example, Travis County Judge Andy Brown said, "Travis County received 11,600 mail-in ballots in the 2022 primaries that we just had. Despite significant effort by our county team, we saw a 600 percent increase in the number of rejected ballots because of the criteria in SB1."⁸

7. Counties throughout Texas experienced a significant rise in the rejection of voters' ballots. As mentioned, according to the Election Assistance Commission data, in 2018 less than 2% of ballots were rejected statewide in Texas and that number was even lower in 2020 when it was less than 1%. That was not the case in the 2022 primary. "The rate of rejections is unprecedented in our county and, from what I'm hearing from my colleagues, in other counties as well." Chris Davis, Williamson County elections administrator. Indeed, Mr. Davis' statement is supported by the information in Figure 4, below, which shows statistics collected by the Texas Civil Rights Project for use in their Congressional testimony during the March 17th subcommittee hearing referenced in Paragraph 3 of this supplemental report. The statistics in that testimony are largely based on an Associated Press survey of the 254 Texas counties, of which 187 counties responded, and supported by the sources I cite below: 11 foreseeable implementation issues, and it appears those issues may not be solvable for all voters. In particular, thousands of Texans do not have the newly required ID numbers in their records and did not have adequate time to remedy that conflict: "More than 700,000 voters lacked one of those ID numbers on their voter records as of December 20 and another 106,911 didn't have either number."22 It is easy to see why "county election officials blamed high rejection rates in the primary on confusion over new identification requirements for absentee voting and rushed implementation."²³ I have read the report prepared by Dr. Eitan Hersh in connection with this lawsuit, and based on that report, it appears many voters will continue to have problems in future elections due to the omissions and errors in the database that continue to exist, of which many voters who attempt to vote by mail in the future will not be aware until they attempt to vote, and would result in their ballots being reject even if they provide accurate information. I also am not aware of any new or revised forms of any type or educational materials prepared for Texas' May 7th municipal elections or May 24th runoff elections, ²⁴ no press releases regarding the lessons learned or plans for improvement prior to the May elections²⁵, no publicly available new webinars²⁶, or any news advisories²⁷ that attempt to remedy the issues seen in the March primary. Given the prevalence of issues laid out by Dr. Hersh in his report, and the number of voters he identifies with insufficient records, it is unreasonable to believe that election officials will be able to expeditiously remedy those insufficiencies and mitigate the negative impact of SB1. Many eligible voters will be unable to vote in future elections despite their best efforts.

- 9. Like the Texas electorate itself, the profile of the voters who experienced the rejection of their ballots is diverse. The MIT Election Data and Science Lab used the most populated counties' websites to analyze the impact of SB1 on the party primaries. Reporting at the county level varies, with some counties separating each party election as a separate entity, while other county data combines the parties into a single statistic for the primary election.²⁸
- 10. The final numbers from the Texas Secretary of State reflect that of the 24,636 rejected mail ballots there were 14,281 belonging to voters attempting to vote in the Democratic primary (12.9% rejection rate in that election) and 10,355 were voters in the Republican primary (for an 11.8% rate in that primary). However, there are numerous examples of counties across the state where that overall impact trended the opposite direction from the statewide result or varied depending on the focus of overall numbers versus percentage of rejections in the specific party primary. One such example is from Smith County, where a higher percentage of the Republican ballots were rejected—9.6% compared to 8.4% of ballots rejected in the Democratic primary although the numbers were higher in that primary with 63 rejections compared to the 62 ballots rejected in the Republican primary.³⁰

- 11. Implementation of SB1 prevented Texans from successfully participating in both the Republican and Democratic Primaries. In the data reported to the Associated Press it appeared as though the "rejection rate was higher in counties that lean Democratic (15.1%) than Republican (9.1%).³¹ Yet, looking at the data by the top five counties won by each of the former 2020 candidates, "in the five counties won by Trump that had the most mail-in votes, a combined 4,216 mailed ballots were rejected or still pending after the day of the election, a rate of 21% of the total. In the counties won by Biden with the most mail-in voters, which include most of Texas' biggest cities, a combined 11,190 votes were similarly rejected or pending, which amounted to 13%."³² Thirteen percent was the state average, but it varied widely across the state. "For perspective: in a smaller, more conservative county, Potter, home to Amarillo, more than 16%--roughly one out of every six voters—had their ballot rejected" and "in Austin it was a little better at 8%".³³
- 12. Although some voters were able to remedy the issues with their rejected ballots, the rejection rates were unreasonable and still exceeded established state and national norms. to 8%³⁴--after hiring additional staff and making more than 1200 phone calls, the voters that they were able to reach and engage with the curing process were all found to be eligible voters. There were 948 voters they were either unable to reach or who did not correct the error or omission on their paperwork and their ballots were rejected.³⁵ It is important to note that in the similarly situated 2018 primary Travis County rejected only 156 ballots, or a rate of only 1.79%.³⁶ Williamson County election administrator Chris Davis said that he and his staff were able to aid many voters in rectifying their issues, but some just didn't have enough time and others "didn't have a chance, either because there wasn't enough time or because they had given up," he said. "We encountered some folks who had given up and said, 'Forget it, I have too many other things going on in my life.'"³⁷

Supplemental Conclusion

13. The first election conducted under SB1, the March 2022 primary, showed that SB1 led to substantial increases in the rate of rejection of mail ballot materials without any apparent connection or support for the underlying purpose for the law. It is purported that these requirements are necessary to secure the elections process, yet I am not aware of any news reporting, nor any indication from an election official of the new requirements identifying ballots cast by voters who were confirmed to be not eligible to vote. Restated, the rise in rejection rates for applications as well as the carrier envelopes are not reflective of any real or perceived rate of ineligible voters attempting to vote or attempting fraud. In fact, I have been unable to find any evidence of the new requirements identifying a ballot cast by a voter who was not eligible to vote. Nowhere in the public record has there been documentation that these new barriers made it "harder to cheat"—just harder for eligible voter to vote successfully.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

Texas 2022 General Election Supplement to Report Voting Assistance & Vote by Mail La Union del Pueblo Entero et al. v. State of Texas et al. Tammy Patrick

- 1. On February 28, 2022, I submitted a report entitled "Voting Assistance & Vote By Mail" in connection with the case La Unión del Pueblo Entero et al. v. State of Texas et al., which I will refer to here as the "Original Report."
- 2. On April 29, 2022, I submitted a supplemental report extending the Original Report based on facts and data related to voting by mail from Texas's March 1, 2022, primary election, the first statewide election conducted under the provisions of SB1, which I will refer to as the "First Supplemental Report."
- 3. This report supplements and extends the Original Report and the First Supplemental Report based on facts and data related to voting by mail from Texas's November 8, 2022, general election.
- 4. This report also supplements Section One of the Original Report regarding my employment and election experience. As of December 1, 2022, I serve as the Chief Executive Officer of Programs for the National Association of Election Officials, commonly referred to as the Election Center. The Election Center was established as the first national training and certification organization of election professionals in 1992.¹

Introduction & Summary of Conclusions

5. Since implementation of SB1, rejection rates of both the applications for ballots by mail (ABBMs) as well as ballot carrier envelopes have continued to exceed the rejection rates historically seen in Texas and nationwide. This supplemental report documents that although rejection rates have diminished from the increase experienced in the initial elections of 2022, Texas reports that it is still rejecting mail ballots at a rate of 2.7%²—almost three times the national average (1%³)—and more than the state's average prior to SB1 passage.⁴ What I have observed supports the conclusion that SB1 creates unnecessary barriers to eligible Texas voters to participate in the franchise.

- 6. Issues anticipated in the Original Report and in the First Supplemental Report with voters being able to comply with the new requirements under SB1 in applying for an absentee ballot and completing a ballot carrier envelope manifested in the general election, with rejection numbers exceeding both the national trends as well as Texas's historical trends.
- 7. Following the rise of rejection rates in the primary election, local election officials went to great lengths to reduce the rejection rates, often at a substantial cost in time and resources—they hired additional staff dedicated to answering voter calls and questions around the requirements,⁵ printed and mailed additional voter instructions,⁶ and experienced what will be an ongoing expense given that new Texas voters become eligible to vote by mail every day. Given the combined fact of an aging population resulting in Texas voters who will encounter these new requirements for the first time in every election cycle moving forward and the historic under-funding of election offices,⁷ this level of effort is untenable.
- 8. Midterm voters are traditionally high-efficacy voters,⁸ those with the propensity to have voting experience and understanding of policies and procedures necessary to successfully engage with the franchise as compared with presidential general election voters. Even within this voting cohort the impact of SB1 was substantial.

Analysis

Overall Rejection Rates

9. Texas reported that the State rejected mail ballots at a rate of 2.7%—almost three times the national average (1%), and more than the state's average prior to SB1 passage (1.7% in the comparable midterm election of 2018). Because the national average rejection rate of vote by mail ballots hovers around 1%, when a state or jurisdiction's rate exceeds that it can spur additional review and analysis. Even rejection rates below the national average can sometimes lead to performance audits of ballot rejections. The Washington State Legislature mandated a performance audit of ballot rejection rates even though they historically fall below the 1% rejection threshold. Description of the performance audit of ballot rejection rates even though they historically fall below the 1% rejection threshold.

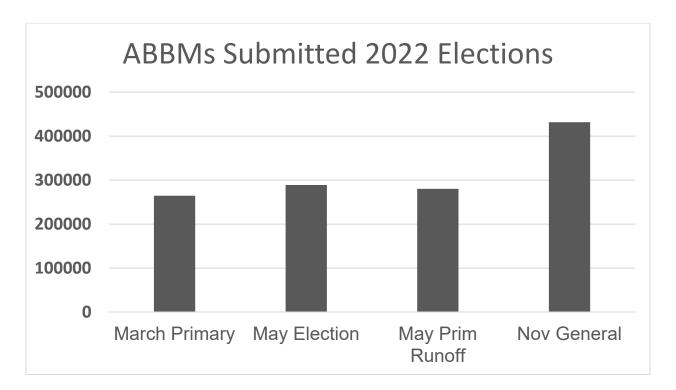

Curing and Use of the Ballot Tracking Portal

10. In the State Defendants' Supplemental Interrogatory Responses, it is stated that hundreds of thousands of Texas voters submitted ABBMs since the new requirements. The numbers of submittals in each of the statewide elections in 2022 is as follows:¹¹

11.Texas offers a "Ballot by Mail Tracker" (referred to after this as the "Tracker") on the Texas Secretary of State's "My Voter Portal" at votetexas.gov¹² in an attempt allow voters the opportunity to remedy issues with their ABBM. Some voters whose ABBMs were at first rejected were successful in either having their ABBM accepted, or they had it cancelled so that they could then go and vote in person.¹³ Unfortunately, the data I have seen does not distinguish how many voters fall into each of the two categories of voters—there isn't a distinction made, so we cannot know how many voters were able to successfully fulfill their requests and vote by mail as they originally intended or how many had to cancel their ABBM and vote in their secondary choice for mode of voting, in person. This lack of clarity limits the ability to determine the portal's success rate of allowing originally rejected voters to obtain a mail ballot.

- 12. What we do know from the data is that there were hundreds of voters who used the Tracker during the 2022 election cycle and were unsuccessful in navigating the new requirements. 267 voters, more than 1 in 4 voters (28% of the 946 voters who used the Tracker in all 2022 elections through the November general), were unsuccessful in remedying the issues with their ABBM.¹⁴
- 13. The overall use of the tracker for rejected ABBMs was relatively low. Even if ABBM rejection in the November General Election only matched the 2.7% reported ballot rejection rate¹⁵ then fewer than one

¹⁵ This is a conservative estimate because voters must successfully navigate SB 1 requirements for an ABBM first before they receive a ballot.

in twenty voters who had an ABBM rejected used the tracker. Fewer than one in twenty-five voters used the tracker successfully to cure or cancel an ABBM.¹⁶

14. Across the elections conducted in 2022, almost a thousand voters—963—who used¹⁷ the Tracker in an attempt to cure their ballot deficiencies were unable to do so.¹⁸ Beyond that, it was widely reported that more than 10,000 ballots were rejected in the midterm alone.¹⁹ To date, I have not seen any analysis as to why those voters did not attempt to cure their ballots through the use of the Tracker or other methods (for instance, an analysis of the number of page hits on the tracker, number of login attempts, number of successful logins but then incomplete or abandoned efforts, etc.), or why the number of voters who attempted to use the tracker (6,247²⁰) was considerably less than the overall number of rejected ballots.

Election Officials' Education Efforts

15. Elevated rejection rates lingered because voters in Texas had continued challenges with satisfying the requirements of SB1 in the submission of their absentee ballots despite substantial reported efforts by county election officials. Measures taken by these election officials resulted in the somewhat decreased rejection rates. Some hired additional staff. According to Leah Shah with the Harris County Election Administrator's Office, they increased their "mail ballot team by 20 people dedicated to only reaching out to voters who are voting by mail, that are needing assistance, that have questions about the process," Shah said. "And of course, reaching back out to the voters if they require corrections." 21 Some counties, such as Bexar County, included special inserts to explain the new process,²² as did Travis County.²³ Dallas County invested money in publicity campaigns that they attribute as a key factor in the reduction in rejections: "The Dallas County Commissioners Court spent north of $42 million in the last five years to ramp up staffing, equipment and advertising for elections. Daniel and Noble said this was money well spent, because the rejection rate of mail-in ballots was lower—something they attribute to public campaigns on the issue."24 The price tag that comes with implementation of new laws and educating the electorate can be large, 25 yet election officials are rarely provided sufficient funding to adequately complete the task.²⁶ It was reported that the Legislature actually reduced the voter education budget from $4 million previously to $3.5 million for the current two-year budget cycle.²⁷ Additional funding is necessary to cover the additional activities required by SB1 to properly serve Texas voters.

¹⁶ Ibid Page 12.

Supplemental Conclusion on the General Election

- 16. Although the rates of rejection have declined, due to substantial efforts by county election officials—there are still thousands of eligible Texas voters who are unable to successfully submit ABBMs and/or have their voted ballots accepted for counting.
- 17. Texas rejection rates are still some of the highest in the nation, exceeding the traditional benchmark of 1% and their pre-SB1 midterm rate of 1.7%.²⁸
- 18. These findings and concerns are echoed by election officials in other states who are seeing the introduction of bills in their states similar to SB1.²⁹

1	Q. And below it is an email from Kristi Hart to
2	yourself and Mr. Bitter from earlier that same day; is

4	A.	Agreed.
5	Q.	Who is Ms. Hart?
6	A.	She is our team team manager.

17	A.	Before we did the HB 2512 matching process.
18	Q.	All right. And then, just for the record,
19	describe what that process involves?
20	A.	The HB 2512 process allows us to get
21	infor	nation from the driver's license record to
22	suppl	ement voter registration records and use it for
23	voter	registration purposes.
24	Q.	All right. And so once this is done, for
25	exam	ole, on the top one and we are talking about

You can 14 get to it from there and you can get to it from SOS 15 website, but it's hosted actually by our third party vendor who does TEAM for us. 16 BY MR. STEWART: 17 18 Understood. be corrected in the tracker.

- Q. Is there anything else that can be corrected in the tracker?
- A. If they left off the information but TEAM has it, they can do that in the tracker as well.
 - O. How can a voter cancel ABBM?
- A. So cancellation is not one of those things
 I want to talk about off the top of my head. Do you want me to go up election code and talk about the different ways of cancelling?
- Q. If you could tell me where in the election code it is.
 - A. Chapter 84.
 - Q. The law I guess -- withdraw that.
- What is in chapter 84 details all of the ways by which an ABBM canceled?
- A. That's correct. You know, generally a voter can do it by surrendering their mail ballot in person at the polling place and voting in person or go to voting clerk office and fill out a cancellation form and then go vote in person.
- Q. Would you say those are the two most common ways it's done?
- A. That's generally what it is and there is other permeations of those two that get very

- Would advice be correct, to the best of 0. your knowledge?
- Well, it kind of depends what issue they Α. were telling her that she needed to correct. If she needed to correct the number in the voter registration record obviously she could do that with a voter registration application and she doesn't need to come in person. If she's trying to fix the problem with the application for ballot by mail then probably she needs to show up in person or fill out a new application with the transposed digits.
- I see. So if the problem were with the Ο. ABBM, would she be able to correct that in the portal?
- If the problem was that the original number Α. was transposed, the only way to fix it in the portal was to create the transposed numbers are correct.
- The portal can't be used to change what's Ο. in TEAM, it only be used to change what's on the ABBM?
 - Α. That's correct.
- So how would she fix the issue -- if it is Ο. correct that the issue in TEAM, what ways could she be

Keith Ingram March 28, 2023

A. I think the only way you can fix that to fill out a new voter registration application with the correct number.

Q. So if TEAM then is the source of transposition, it would be correct from Tarrant that she would need to go into the office to correct that?

MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.

BY THE WITNESS:

A. You don't need to fill out a voter registration application in person.

BY MR. STEWART:

- Q. That's something she also could have done remotely, correct?
 - A. That's correct.
- Q. If it's correct in fact that the numbers are transposed in TEAM, she would not be able to enter the portal entering the correct number, right?
- A. That's correct. She would have to enter the transposed number and agree it's the correct number for her mail bound application to be accepted.
- Q. Got it. I want to turn to -- I think last year when we spoke we discussed the HB2512 process; do you recall?
 - A. I do.

Keith Ingram March 28, 2023

1 That's the process for present purposes by 0. which driver's license, ID number or SSN data is 2. imported from DPS database into team, correct? 3 4 Α. That's correct. 5 Was the HB2512 process run at any point in 0. 2022 following the primary election? 6 7 No. Α. Was it --8 Ο. 9 It was in December. Α. In December following the general election? 10 Q. 11 Α. Not before the general. 12 Q. Not before the general, but in 2022 13 following -- let me withdraw that. It was not run 14 between the primary and the general, correct? 15 Α. That's correct. 16 It was run following the general before the 0. 17 end of the year? 18 I agree. Α. 19 Has it been run again since then? Ο. 20 No, sir. Α. 21 Is that a regular annual process is that 0. 22 why it was run in December? 23 Α. It has historically been run in December, not every December, but obviously the last two. 24

I'm going to hand you what will be SOS 5. I

That's the same HB2512 process we were just 15 discussing? 16 Α. That's correct. 17 Q. So the initial numbers, would they reflect 18 the state of the database following the 2021 process? 19 Plus whatever changes were made in the Α. 20 course of the 2022. 21 So they wouldn't reflect any changes from a 0. 22 systemic process, but they could represent -- reflect 23 what I will call ad hoc changes to individual records? 24 MS. Q. That number moved by less than 2,000, correct?

- A. It looks like about 1,300 maybe.
- Q. Why do you think the movement in that was smaller than in the other categories?
- A. Because it's the hardest category to do anything with.
- Q. Have you discussed any way to capture more, improve the HP2512 process for that category of voters in the future?
 - A. No.
- Q. Just a couple quick questions. After the HP2512 process is run, how are those changes filtered out to off-line counties?
- A. They are supposed to sync their data with ours on a monthly basis.
 - Q. That occurs monthly?
 - A. It does or it's supposed to.
- Q. Is that a two-way sync? So, for example, if something gets changed in the county's off-line database more recently than the information in TEAM, should that be then filtering into TEAM as well?
- A. So there is two different things that you might be confusing here. Any changes in voter registration record that the county gets from the voter is supposed to be reported nightly. So that's what we call our batch process. That's not the same as syncing the data. Syncing the data means we want to make sure everything we have got in our system is captured in off-line system so the databases are identical, right. So the goal is to have zero differences in the sync This kind of change in the SOS file is what we file. are trying to sync to the voters. Then of course there are other kinds of changes the county makes with regard to pre-syncing in particular that aren't reflected in an individual voter change that we would get in a batch process. We want to sync those up as well. So those are the two things that we are syncing is making sure that everything from our database is in theirs and making sure all of their precinct lines they may have re-drawn are in ours.

- Q. Taking those two processes separately because I assume -- do those processes run at the same time?
 - A. Yes.

- Q. They do?
- A. The sync is simultaneous.
- Q. So the sync is referring to information from TEAM filtering down to the counties?

1 Α. That's right. 2. Q. That occurs monthly? It's supposed to occur monthly. We have to 3 Α. 4 do it much less often. With this change in law it 5 became expedient to do it more often. All new registrations are entered by the 6 0. 7 county into their databases, correct? That's right, many changes to registration 8 Α. 9 is entered. 10 Ο. Those changes are coming upward to TEAM 11 daily? 12 Α. That's right. 13 Then new information from HP2512 is going 0. 14 from TEAM to the counties monthly? Well, we sync the database monthly. 15 Α. new information from 2512 is obviously an annual thing. 16 17 Q. I see. It would be part of that monthly 18 sync process? 19 It would. Α. 20 Information entered into the texas.gov O. 21 portal that gets pulled over, where does that go first? 22 Α. To TEAM.

A. That's right.

That will to the counties as part of the 1 If there is any difference in the county Ο. 2. and state databases, would those likely be due to a lag in time between basically the monthly process 3 4 occurring? MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. BY THE WITNESS: 6 7 That's right, or they haven't resolved Α. everything that was a difference in the last sync file. 8 BY MR. STEWART: 9 10 What does it mean to resolve it? Ο. To choose one or the other. 11 Α. 12 Q. When something comes down from the sync 13 file from TEAM to the county, the county needs to 14 resolve each of those in their own database? 15 Α. That's correct. 16 If there is an import from Texas.gov, those 0. 17 cannot be used by the county in the cure process until 18 the next sync occurs; is that correct? 19 No, they can use TEAM. They are -- all Α. 20 have access to TEAM and we told them to use tell. 21 They wouldn't be reflected in the county, 0. 22 but the instruction from the SOS is to also look in the TEAM database? 23

Do you know if all counties follow that trouble with the residence address.

- Q. Any other issues?
- A. No. There were some off-line counties in the primary that said they weren't getting the ballot tracker updates which is why we were sending a separate spreadsheet so they were getting it through the system as well as from the spreadsheet from us.
- Q. There were off-line counties that reported that ballot tracker updates were not coming from the monthly sync process?
- A. No. Nightly batch process. So if the voter uses the ballot tracker to confirm their numbers, there should be report of that that shows up on the off-line county's dashboard. They were saying they weren't getting them so we sent them manually as well through the system.
 - Q. Those were in Excel spreadsheets?
- A. I don't know. CSV file, something like that.
- Q. Just something that the county could use to manually look up that information outside of the database?
- A. Well, to manually update the voter to accept it.
 - Q. So the purpose of that was to update their

1 database or just to evaluate the ABBM in front of them? 2. Α. Well, they have evaluated the ABBM. 3 this case the carrier envelope found it to be detective 4 because of missing or incorrect number. The voter has 5 corrected that through the ballot tracker. We were sending that correction information both through TEAM 6 7 as well as manually. So those corrections would not change TEAM, 8 Ο. 9 they would only change consideration of ABBM? 10 Α. That's correct. Would changing the residence address issue, 11 Ο. 12 as you have described it, require legislative action? 13 Yes. Α. 14 0. Any other changes or potential changes to 15 the ballot tracker that you testified on in the past 16 two months? 17 Α. No. 18 I'm going to hand you SOS 7. Ο. 19 (WHEREUPON, a certain document was 20 marked Deposition Exhibit No. 7, for identification, as of 3/28/23.) 21 22 BY MR. STEWART: 23 Just for the record I will say this is Ο. 24 document State 118032. 25 Α. Okay.

Q. Fair enough. But you know it's tough to see the way it's printed, but you can see, "Welcome Jason Hole," then whatever information, current address. This does appear to be the logged in version of the tracker, correct?

- A. I agree with that.
- Q. If the voter has an active mail ballot, would you expect to see information about that mail ballot in the tracker?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. Who is responsible for entering information about the rejected ballot into the tracker?
 - A. Tarrant County in this case.
- Q. How do they enter information into the tracker as in is there a portal on their end through TEAM? How does that information flow into the tracker?
- A. There is a couple ways they should be able to enter the information into their off-line system or they should be able to enter it directly into TEAM.
- Q. Looking at the most recent email on the chain. Those are the ones back on the page that ends in 32 on the Bates stamp. That appears to be a response from the Secretary of State's Office, correct?
 - A. Agreed.

1 because you have logged in successfully in the tracker, you don't see anything to fix. So that's Tarrant

3 | County's problem.

BY MR. STEWART:

- Q. So in the instance where let's say tracker information is not appearing or populating for a known mail ballot, the county should be entering that information?
 - A. Absolutely.
- 10 Q. A voter with an issue should be contacting 11 the county?
 - A. Yes.
 - Q. Are there circumstances where a voter should be contacting the Secretary of State for ballot tracker issues?
 - A. They will call us if they are having trouble accessing it.
 - Q. So is it correct to say then the Secretary of State's Office manages the access portion of the ballot tracker and the county is manage the individual ballot information portion?
 - A. The substance of information --
- MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.
- 24 BY THE WITNESS:
 - A. -- within the tracker is contributed by the

1	counties.
2	BY MR. STEWART:
3	Q. But the counties don't have any control
4	over the access portion, correct?
5	A. That's correct.
6	Q. To your knowledge, did any other voters
7	identify a similar issue such as this where they are
8	able to access the tracker but information wasn't
9	populating in the tracker?
10	A. Not in the general.
11	Q. Not in the general. Did that happen in the 12	primary?
13	A. In the primary, yes.
14	Q. Did you identify the route cause of that
15	issue in the primary?
16	A. It's because the VOTEC system wasn't
17	mapping to the TEAM system properly. The general is 18	just because the county didn't enter the information.
19	Q. Let's look at SOS 8.
20	(WHEREUPON, a certain document was
21	marked Deposition Exhibit No. 8,
22	for identification, as of 3/28/23.)
23	BY MR. STEWART:
24	Q. We're back in Tarrant County. Would you
25	agree this chain appears to reflect a communication

BY THE WITNESS:

A. I mean we don't know. I mean some voters can drive it in as easily as they can mail it, but there is a reason why people vote by mail. Generally it's because they are not as mobile. So to increase the odds of them curing we need to have a mail back form.

BY MS. PERALES:

- Q. Texas vote by mail eligibility involves being for the most part either over age 65 or physically disabled, is that correct -- or disabled in some way?
 - A. Agreed.
- Q. So you had listed basically four things, the 2026 effective date provision, and then the three things you just talked to me about now. Have you had any discussions with members of the legislator or legislative staff about amending any of the provisions in SB 1 that are the subject of this lawsuit?
 - A. No.
- Q. So then I won't have to ask it for each individual provision.

Let's look at --

A. Oh, we did talk to one senator's office about possible changes to poll watchers.

particular budget line item. So, yeah, I couldn't -- I couldn't break it down because it is all part of the content development line item of the budget.

- Q. And so looking at the different forms of content starting with TV.
 - A. Uh-huh.
- Q. Were there -- TV, I assume they were commercials?
 - A. Yes.

- Q. Were there commercials that focused specifically only on the mail ballot ID requirement?
- A. The commercials encompassed both ID requirements, both the in-person and the mail ballot voter ID requirements.
- Q. Were those separate commercials or one commercial that encompassed it?
- A. It would be one commercial. It was a 30-second TV commercial, one in English and one in Spanish. And both of those commercials addressed both the in-person voter ID requirement that there were seven forms of ID that you could use and there were alternates -- alternative options if you didn't possess and couldn't reasonably obtain one. And then if you're eligible to vote by mail, that you need to provide a number. And it gave the four -- essentially four different types of ID numbers, and it showed pictures of them, where you need to write one of those numbers on your application and your carrier envelope.

And those four different types of ID numbers were your Texas driver's license number, your state ID number, your election identification certificate number, or the last four digits of your Social Security number. And the -- the commercial visually showed those four different types of ID numbers so that the voters who were eligible to vote by mail and were considering voting by mail knew that they had to provide a number to identify themselves with voting by mail.

- Q. Were there any specific geographic media markets that were the focus of the TV campaign?
- A. There wasn't any specific geographic markets that were focused on the -- we placed TV advertisements in all Texas markets and as well as radio advertisements as well. So it's a state-wide campaign. We can't pick and choose favorites. We have to -- we have to make sure that all TV markets in the state of Texas were covered.
- Q. Do you know whether the spending was about the same across geographic media markets?

MS. HUNKER: Objection. Form.

Q. So just to be clear, is there any specifically directed toward counties?

- A. No. That 3.5 million is -- is all appropriated to our office.
- Q. Did any counties get in touch with you about their own voter education efforts?
 - A. Did they proactively reach out to me?

A. No. We heard about, you know, through news articles or through media or word of mouth that counties were doing their own versions of education campaigns to varying degrees. But I didn't really have a knowledge of what counties were doing at the local level, certainly not earlier in the year. Later, we did make available those -- in those printout pamphlets, educational pamphlets in English and Spanish, we made those available for free for counties so that they -- as part of the collateral, which is part of the budget, of this voter education campaign.

They print out physical materials to send to these community events across the state. We call it the state-wide Texas grassroots tour. And it would be at community events, county fairs, senior expos, concerts, cultural events, you know, farmers market, flea markets, all these kinds of different events across the state. And we needed, you know, physical handouts to hand out to people, one of which was a front and back English and Spanish guide on the in-person voter ID requirements. And then another one was both an English and Spanish pamphlet on the vote by mail ID requirements, including all the information needed to know about which ID numbers to provide on those -- on those materials as well as where they can go track their ballot and drove them to votetexas.gov to -- to get more information.

But as part of that collateral development and actually printing those materials, I made sure and I asked our vendor specifically, please order an extra stock so that if counties would like some additional educational materials for them to give to their voters or to have handy if voters have questions, that we can give those materials, physical materials, to county election offices to the extent that they request them. And we -- I remember sending, or at least asking our elections division, which they did, to send an e-mail out to all county election officials saying, hey, we got these materials available, please let us know if you want any. And a lot of the counties took us up on this. A lot of the counties ordered those pamphlets for vote by mail in English and Spanish, and we sent them in bulk free copies of those so that they could distribute those to voters who had questions or just make them available at any community events or voter registration drives or other kinds of events that they were doing.

So that was a way to sort of supplement the grassroots activities that we were doing on our campaign. But making those available to the local county officials was one way that we worked with them. But as far as their money that was appropriated for their own appropriations campaigns, I don't know anything about what the counties did. I just know what we made available to them.

- Q. Besides the printouts and materials that you just described, were there any other materials that the SOS, you know, provided or made available to the counties?
 - A. As far as educational materials?
 - Q. Educational materials, correct.
- A. I think -- I think those were the only ones that we made available to them. Of course, the digital materials, we -- we had digital versions of all these pamphlets, and, you know, made those available to them to put on their websites. Those were the only physical materials that we made available to them. But, of course, we also -- similar mass e-mail out to counties

BROUGHTON: Kenneth Broughton, the firm of 5 Reed Smith, for the -- all plaintiffs. 6 7 MS. BEELER: Christina Beeler for the Harris County Attorney's Office for defendant Isabel Longoria. MR. FOMBONNE: Jonathan Fombonne, Harris County 10 Attorney's Office, also for Ms. Longoria. MR. THOMSON: Will Thompson, Texas Attorney 11 12 General's Office representing the State defendants. 13 Isabel Longoria, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows: 14 15 DIRECT EXAMINATION 16 BY MR. BROUGHTON: 17 Ms. Longoria, as I've said, my name is Kenneth 18 Broughton, and I represent -- and I'll tell you exactly who: 19 here on behalf, really, I think of all of the various plaintiffs in these various lawsuits. My specific clients are Houston 20 Justice, Houston Area Urban League, Delta Sigma Theta Sorority 21 Inc., The Arc of Texas, and Jeffrey Lamar Clements. Okay? 2.2 23 So again, you know, anytime anybody needs a break, if you'll just say so. You've done a great job earlier today about 24 25 asking for rewording or repeating a question. So don't hesitate.

information is hidden under that flap. Voters don't see that there's a space under the flap, don't know to include the information under the flap, think that because they've included that information on their application, they don't need to do it on the carrier envelope, and so you have missing ID numbers for that purpose. And then that could be sent -- either sent back to you if you get a mail ballot back. Voters have expressed frustrations at having to correct their mail ballots and having to go through that process and some have not returned their mail ballots because of that.

Let's keep moving forward. So you've gone through all of that process, again, assuming that the information in your voter file is correct and matched up to your card, it requires more time from our early voting ballot board and more resources from our voter registration and mail ballot teams to research someone's voter file to match those numbers; and then for the early vote ballot board, to make those determinations if the numbers match and then if the signatures match; further complicated by the fact that if you are lacking a signature but have an ID number that is correct, you by law can presume that that mail ballot can be accepted, but even then it's a bit ambiguous for the early voting ballot board, as I understand, on when and how that should be applied.

Then assuming you don't match numbers, you have six days in the cure period to then come in person or return by mail your mail ballot. But if you can't come in person and if you can't return it by mail to cure your mail ballot, then you are effectively kind of out of options to cure your mail ballot even though you have the correct number, even though you could cure it. So ultimately leading to about 20 percent of mail ballots in Harris County that were rejected by the early voting ballot board

I'm happy to repeat any of that for the reporter.

A. I know that was quite a lengthy -- because of lack of ID or ID curing issue.

- Q. I have a question back to people being able to go online and cure and things like that. Has your office experienced very many people who for whatever reason don't have a computer or are not computer literate or that sort of thing?
 - A. Yes.
- O. Tell us about that.
- A. It tends to be older voters or voters without means who more likely than not don't have access to a printer. So they might have access to the internet on their phone or get access to internet through a community center or other means or may even request that we print and send to them a mail ballot application. But if you don't have a printer, then your option is to, you know, call us or hope that another application has gotten to you in some form.

And then postage, individuals may not be aware or be

- 1 able to go out and purchase postage to send back their
- applications or mail ballots to our office. I will say there's a
- caveat that any election mail received by our office without 3
- postage must be accepted by the U.S. Postal Service, but not all
- voters are aware that they can send election mail in the post and
- that it'll get to our office.
- I wouldn't have known that either, just like the 0.
- buzzer. (Laughs.) Let's see here.
- Oh, and I believe -- sorry. I misspoke earlier. In
- 10 the cure process, yeah, I said in person or by mail. Yeah, those
- 11 are the items -- options for curing.
- 12 How does a voter know if their vote-by-mail application 0.
- has been accepted? 13
- Either, one, you receive a mail ballot -- so you can 14 Α.
- 15 presume that your mail ballot application has been accepted --
- 16 you can call our office, mail ballot department, to check on the
- 17 status of your mail ballot application, you can visit the Harris
- 18 County website or the Texas Secretary of State website if you're
- 19 able to access either of those websites to see the status of your
- 20 application, or you'll receive a letter, phone call, or email
- 21 from us if there for any reason is a reason -- if your
- 2.2 application was not accepted.
- 23 What are the reasons a vote-by-mail application might
- be denied? 24
- 25 Oh, boy. A vote-by-mail application can be denied for Α.

- Q. And what is the system that y'all use?
- A. VOTEC.
- Q. Okay. And so when you receive a application for ballot by mail or a ballot, you mentioned that you check to see whether or not the number is in the voter record, correct?
- A. Correct.
- Q. And so you were looking at VOTEC -- what was it again?
 - A. VOTEC.
- Q. VOTEC. You were looking at VOTEC system to check the voter record; is that correct?
 - A. Correct.
- Q. When you were making that check like when you were looking at the record, were you noticing that fewer voters did not have a -- either a driver's license ID number or social security number?

- MS. HOLMES: Objection to form.

May location election; is that correct?

A. I can't agree to that one. I don't know that percentage rate.

- Q. Okay. And would you agree that Harris County made significant progress in reducing the mail ballot rejection rate between the primary and the November 2022 general election?
 - MS. HOLMES: Objection; form.
 - MS. PAIKOWSKY: Objection; form.
 - MS. HUNKER: You can --

 - A. We inserted -- when we mailed out application requests that voters called in -- request that application, we sent out a flyer with it making sure they knew they needed to include the new law requirements for the ID. We also did the same with the ballot.
 - Q. And did you notice that if your efforts resonated with voters?
- MS. HOLMES: Objection to form.
- MS. HUNKER: Let me rephrase.

Page 41

Q. (BY MS. HUNKER) Did you observe whether your efforts at informing voters about the ID requirement clarified any confusion that the voters may have had about the requirement?

MS. PAIKOWSKY: Objection to form.

- A. I believe it did.
- Q. (BY MS. HUNKER) And you can put this aside. Going to introduce Exhibit No. 13.

(Exhibit No. 13 was marked.)

- Q. (BY MS. HUNKER) Do you have the exhibit in front of you?

Did I read that correctly?

- A. Yes.
- Q. And so this is the insert that you put into your balloting materials to inform voter of the ID requirement; is that correct?

- Q. And did you get any feedback from voters about the change?
 - A. No.
- Q. And if you turn the page over, you'll notice that it is in a different language, correct?
 - A. Correct.
- Q. And I believe you included inserts in -- you had inserts for four different languages; is that right?
 - A. Correct.
- Q. And that would have been English, Spanish, Vietnamese, and Chinese; is that right?

Q. And so I had asked a couple of questions regarding accommodation for disabilities with the last witness, but she had mentioned she thought you would be a better person with respect to the vote by mail. And so I'm going to ask these questions. If you do not know the answer, just state so.

You are aware --

- A. Oh --
- Q. -- voters with disabilities have the option of requesting an accommodation or change to normal voting procedures, correct?
 - A. Correct.
- Q. To your knowledge, did your office receive any requests for accommodation regarding the requirement that mail-in voters put their social security number or ID number on the application for ballot by mail?
- A. We did have some voters that couldn't come into the building. So we would take a clipboard and go out to them.

- Q. Good afternoon, Ms. Colvin.
- A. Hello.
- Q. My name is Dana Paikowsky. I am with the Department of Justice, and I'm going to pick up on the thread of asking you some questioning about mail voting during the November 2022 general election. So to begin, during the last deposition, the person who testified on behalf of the Harris County election officials -- or Election Administrator's Office testified that voters had difficulty with SB1's mail ballot identification requirement.

Was that still true during the November 2022 general election?

MS. HUNKER: Objection; form. Lack of foundation.

- A. Voters still did have issues as far as providing the ID. They would forget to put it on there, or they didn't feel comfortable providing it even though it was covered.
- Q. (BY MS. PAIKOWSKY) Did any voters -- strike that.
- Were any voters confused -- sorry. Strike that.
 - Do you have any reason to believe that voters were confused by SB1's mail ballot identification provision during the November '21 -- November 2002 general election period?

- Q. And what gave you that impression?
- A. Because they would not realize that they need to put it on there. They feel like, if they put it on their application, they didn't need to include it on the ballot or vice versa. They didn't feel like they needed to include it on both.
- Q. Did any voters have difficulty during the November 2022 general election with which ID they needed to provide on either their ABBM or carrier envelope?
 - A. Can you clarify your question?
- Q. Yes. So did any voters have difficulty either -- I'm sorry. Scratch that. Withdrawn.

So during the November 2022 general election, did any voters have difficulty complying with the identif- -- mail ballot identification requirement because they put down the wrong ID number?

- A. We did have voters put down the wrong -they -- what do you mean by wrong ID? Let me clarify that first.
 - Q. What do you mean by wrong ID?
 - A. Okay. Wrong ID to me means they gave us the them by the type of app because we have different campaign apps that come in and the reason that they've voting by mail so they can all be together.

- And what do you do next? Q.
- We get them in. We barcode them. Then we image them. And we put them in batches of 25 for the processors to process.
 - And so what happens after that?
- We look them up in the voter management system Α. to see if they qualify. We compare the IDs. sure the person -- if you can with read the signature -the signature is the person that actually is on the app. And then we enter them to receive a ballot if they're good.
- And how do you -- so -- so the first step you mentioned was you look them up in the...

- The voter management system. And so how do you 0. look up the voter in the voter management system?
- Depending on the app. Some apps come with a Α. barcode that's directly linked to the voter. If not, we look them up first name, last name, date of birth, whatever information that we need to find them in the system.

Q. And after that, you look to see whether the identification numbers match?

- A. Yes, in the voter file.
- Q. Has the process by which your office does this intake changed -- has it changed since the March primary?
 - A. No.
- Q. So along the same lines, can you take me through how your office -- and this is a question again about the mechanical processing. I know you talked a little before about how EVBB's SV --
 - A. C.
- Q. -- Cs process ballots when they come in. At what point in the process do either the SVBs [sic] or the EVBBs look up a voter in the system?
- A. When they start verifying signatures, they'll go into the ballot board module, and they can see the voter's profile -- well, on the system itself, it shows the voters -- each. It's a list of 25 -- well, now we're up to 100 voters per batch. But it will list their ID and -- any ID that's linked to them in the system will be on their profile.
- Q. So taking a step back, how do you match a ballot to a voter in the system?

Α. We image it. And it's linked through a barcode.

- Through a barcode. So the barcode identifies Ο. which voter the ballot belongs to and pulls up that voter's --
- The carrier envelope to be clear. Not the Α. actual ballot.
 - Correct. 0.
 - Α. Yeah.

- So there's a barcode that corresponds Ο. between the carrier envelope and the voter itself, and that automatically pulls up the voter's file, and that allows you to compares the IDs?
- Well, that links the image to the voter's file. And then when the ballot board goes in to view them, that's where they compare the IDs.
- Does your office use the driver's license and Q. SSN for any purpose beyond determining whether the mail ballot can be accepted in light of Senate Bill 1?
 - Α. No.
- Does your office use the driver's license or social security number for any purpose beyond determining whether an absentee ballot by mail request form can be accepted in light of Senate Bill 1?
 - Α. As far as ballot by mail, no.

- Q. And what would those be?
- A. I -- I -- can't speak on that right off the top of my head. It would have to be something we would implement amongst our team.
- Q. Do you have any plans to take any additional steps beyond those we've already discussed?
 - A. Not at this point.
- Q. So you mentioned earlier that your office uses the form provided by the secretary of state's office as the ABBM form that you provide to voters. Does that form ask voters to provide either an ID number or a social security for?
 - A. It asks for them to provide the number, yes.
- Q. In the November 2022 general election, were there voters who had an issue with their ballot, an ID issue with their ballot, who did not provide a phone number or an e-mail address?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. How did you contact those voters to let them know of the issue?
 - A. Via mail.
- Q. Were there some voters you were not able to get in touch with?

Not that I'm aware of. Everybody received a letter whether they got a phone call or an e-mail.

- (BY MS. PAIKOWSKY) In the November 2022 Ο. general election, were there voters who did not pick up the phone when they were called, again, to deliver notice that there was a ballot defect because of an ID issue?

In the November 2022 general election, were there voters in your county whose mail ballot rejection notice could not be mailed until it was too late to cure an ID issue?

MS. HUNKER: Objection; form.

- Α. No.
- (BY MS. PAIKOWSKY) You mentioned earlier that Ο. there had been delay issues because of USPS during that 2022 general election. Did that have any impact on the time period that voters have to receive notice and cure ABBM and ballot defects?
- I can answer from my own opinion, but I can't Α. speak -- I mean -- the local post office told us it could take approximately ten days to deliver a local piece of mail.
 - And what impact would that have on your ability Q.

2.

Q. Okay. And that states that the caller was upset due to a -- "due to carrier envelope defect letter. And she stated she put her TDL and last four of SSN on it and don't understand why it was rejected for a third time. Transferred to Desiree with VBM department for answers."

Did I read that correctly?

- A. Yes.
- Q. Were you aware of any voters who had their ballots rejected -- their ballot by mail rejected multiple times due to ID issues?
 - A. I'm aware --

MS. HUNKER: Objection; form.

- A. I'm aware of instances where we -- at the -- we would mail the ballot back to the voter because they didn't include their ID, and they would mail it back without the ID again. And that's when they would be switched to an E-7 status which allowed them the six days to cure. But we would call them and e-mail them and mail them another letter stating you still didn't provide your ID or they provide mixmatch ID. They provided one, and we didn't have it in our system.
- Q. (BY MS. HOLMES) So sometimes the rejection would happen more than once and you have to send it back the November 2022 election and prior elections?

- A. SB1 law changes for the ID requirements.
- Q. In the process of enforcing SB1's ID requirements in the November 2022 election, did your office identify any instances of voter fraud?

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the record at 3:24 p.m. Sorry.

Q. (BY MS. HOLMES) All right. Ms. Colvin, I just have two more questions for you.

With respect to voters whose ABB -- ABBMs contained missing or mismatched ID numbers, is it accurate to say that your office attempted to provide every opportunity to cure if possible?

- A. Yes.
- Q. And with -- with respect to voters whose

Page 92

MS. PAIKOWSKY: Do we have anybody on the 6 7 line who wants to ask any additional questions? 8 Hearing nothing --9 MS. HUNKER: Okay. 10 MS. PAIKOWSKY: Should we go off the record 11 briefly and then back on? 12 MS. HUNKER: We can to that. 13 MS. PAIKOWSKY: Yeah. Can we go off the 14 record just for one minute? 15 THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We are going off the 16 record at 3:25 p.m. 17 (Recess from 3:25 p.m. to 3:27 p.m.) 18 THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We are back on the 19 record at 3:27 p.m. 20 FURTHER EXAMINATION 21 BY MS. HUNKER: 22 All right. Ms. Colvin, I shouldn't take too 23 long, but I wanted to touch base with you on a couple of 24 questions the other counsel asked as well as the 25 document that was issued during our lunch break.

A. No.

- Q. And do you know if there's -- if there's a policy or procedure that perhaps your tech division has with respect to updating?
 - A. I don't know.
- Q. Okay. If the county database only has one number but the TEAM's database has two numbers and the number the voter put is the one that was in the TEAM's database but not the one in the county's database, you would accept that ballot; is that correct?
 - A. Correct.
- Q. There's an option for voters with disabilities as well as voters over 65 to submit an application for ballot by mail for the entire year, correct?
 - A. Correct. Annual.
- Q. And you've already started receiving annual applications for the 2023?
 - A. That's correct.
- Q. And did you notice fewer rejections for the applications that were submitted this year due to the ID mismatch or lack of ID as compared to previous elections in 2022?
 - A. I haven't analyzed that data, but we're criminal investigations that you're asking. I mean, you're asking whether we're investigating ballot issues that are subject to potential criminal investigations. So I would just instruct her not to answer.

- Q. (BY MS. HUNKER) Are you going to take the advice of your counsel?
 - A. Yes.

2.

- Q. Okay. And then the other question, do you know when this segment of this postelection report would be updated? And when I say this section, I mean specifically the ballot paper supply issue.
 - A. No.
 - Q. Okay. Then we can put these aside.

And so the last thing I want to talk to you about is actually going to be in Exhibit 4. It'll be voter education.

- A. You said Exhibit 4?
- Q. Yeah. And so based on my reading on Exhibit 4, it sounded as if Harris County engaged in a robust public -- public awareness campaign for the November 2022 general election. Is that fair to say?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. And as part of your public information campaign, did you also communicate the ID requirements for ballots by mail?

- Q. And how did you go about informing voters of these requirements?
- A. We produced videos and publications that were shared through social media, radio, television, and distribution through community groups.
- Q. And did you engage in -- did you -- like engagement events or community engagement events?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. And were discussions about the ID requirements held at these community engagement events?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. And these were held throughout Harris County, correct?
 - A. Correct.
- Q. So I see a list of organizations on pages 4, 5, and partly 6. Are these a list of organizations where you had community engagement events?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. Is this a complete list or this just a sort of sampling?
 - A. I believe this is complete list.
- Q. And did you get any feedback from voters about your outreach program?
 - A. I am not aware.

- And do you know if voters -- if your outreach -- let me -- let me rephrase the question.

Are you aware if voters -- strike that.

Based on any feedback you received from your public information campaign, did you find that it helped voters alleviate their confusion regarding their ID requirements?

MS. HOLMES: Objection to form.

- Α. Some.
- (BY MS. HUNKER) Can you elaborate at all? O.
- We still received ballots that are incorrectly Α. submitted without sufficient information -- the ballot by mail. So they're either not seeing the campaign or the campaign didn't address them specifically in a way that was successful.

Rachelle Obakozuwa March 21, 2023

Q. You described some voter education efforts that your office engaged in around Senate Bill 1's identification provision. Why did you undertake those efforts?

A. There were voter questions and confusion about why their ballots weren't being counted -- or why their ballots were being rejected. I apologize. And -- and the -- there were changes that SB1 had that we knew would affect every voter who was voting by mail.

- Q. And do you anticipate needing to continue to do -- maintain these efforts in future elections?
 - A. Yes.

Q. Earlier you testified that SB1 necessitated an increase in temporary and full-time staff. Why is that?

A. There are a lot of implications for SB1. With the rejection of mail ballots, there has to be more communication to voters. So it takes more bodies to create that communication to send items to the voters, and there's a higher rate of transaction. So it requires more workers.

Additionally, SB1 affected some of our staffing for election workers. And so that was one of the reasons recruitment efforts had to increase. So we had to have more staff for that. And there are more procedural-type questions and calls that we get. So our call center and help line had to increase staff as well.

Q. Were there increased needs in -- for resources dedicated to voter outreach and education related to implementing Senate Bill 1's identification provision?

- A. And are we specifically speaking about the period for November or prior to March?
 - Q. Let's talk about just November for the moment.
- A. We increased the quantity of voter outreach persons to go to it -- these community events to communicate about these -- the changes to SB1. Yes, for both elections.
- Q. And do you believe those increased needs are going to continue on in future elections as well?
 - A. Yes.

2.

- Q. Why is that?
- A. There's still confusion and there's still -there are still issues with person's ballots, mail ballots being rejected.
- Q. Did you ever have any communications with the secretary of state's office about what kind of voter education efforts your county should undertake related to SB1's identification provision?
- A. Our communications team reached out to secretary of state's office about how to engage with voters without it appearing as soliciting which would be

I can't think of any. For voter education, it's very broad. So I don't know that the little we've discussed is the whole realm of that. But if you're looping all voter education in one, then I cannot think of anything else.

- In the Exhibit 4, there's reference to an Α. organization -- I think it's called KGB that we worked with to do a lot of outreach for us. And that was -that outreach was very broad. It touched every type of communication method that we know of. So that would be the only thing that I would add that there are many things that they did for us to communicate.
- Q. Could you provide a list of examples of the kinds of communications that they engaged in? doesn't have to be exhaustive but just anything we haven't discussed.

- A. We would reject the application.
- Q. Did you let the voter know that the application had been rejected?
- A. Yes. We would send them a new -- a new application, and then we would include the Secretary of State's form to notify the voter that they had been rejected.
- Q. Did you provide anything else in that rejection to assist the voter in filling out the form correctly?
- 11 A. No.

- Q. What forms of communication did you have with voters regarding the rejection?
 - A. We sent them something in the mail. So we communicated by mail and over the phone if we had their contact information on the application.
 - Q. You would call them on the phone?
 - A. Yes, if they provided their phone number.
- Q. Let's look at page 35, which is Section 503 on this page. Are you familiar with this provision?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. Does this provision have to do with what is required to be on the application form for an early ballot by mail?
- 25 A. Yes.

- 1 information? I understand other counties testified
- 2 | that they put a flyer in that rejection. Did Travis
- 3 | County include any additional information?
- A. Not initially. We have now but not
- 5 | initially.
- 6 Q. At what point did Travis County start
- 7 | putting in additional information?
- 8 A. Just recently.
 - Q. When you say "recently," do you mean --
- 10 A. In the last month, I believe, we got
- 11 | approval from the Secretary of State to include an
- 12 | insert.

- Q. Was that before the March 2022 primary?
- 14 A. No.
- 15 | 0. It was for the May 7th election?
- 16 A. Yes. It was our understanding we could not
- 17 | include anything additional.
- 18 Q. Who was it that advised you you could not
- 19 | include anything additional?
- 20 A. It was our understanding through the
- 21 advisories that the SOS issued.
- 22 | Q. And what was the process by which you
- 23 received approval from the Secretary of State to
- 24 | include additional information in the correspondence?
- 25 A. We sent -- I sent an -- an e-mail to the

- 1 director -- the legal director at the SOS and got 2 approval.
- Q. And did they provide that approval in writing?
- 5 A. Yes.
- 6 Q. Was that in the form of an e-mail?
- 7 A. Yes.
- Q. In the May 7th election, how many rejections -- well, you may not be prepared to testify on this; so if this is a question for someone else, let me know. But in the May 7th election, how many rejections were provided the additional information that was approved by the Secretary of State's Office?
- 14 A. For the application or for the ballot?
- Q. For the application.
- 16 A. Right about 11 -- approximately 11 percent.
- Q. And do you know the percentage for the ballots?
- 19 A. It's around 3 percent.
- Q. How would the voter know that their application to vote by mail was rejected?
- A. We would contact the voter via phone or hard copy mail or e-mail if they provided that address.
- Q. Let's look at page 38, which I think is the page you're probably already on --

- 1 A. Uh-huh.
- Q. -- Section 507. What is your understanding of Section 507?
- A. If the information doesn't match, we reject the application. If the information that the voter provides -- either their driver's license or the last four of their social -- if it doesn't match what's in
- 9 Q. Did Travis County develop policies on how to 10 implement this section of SB 1?
- 11 A. Travis County didn't, but the Secretary of 12 State did.
- Q. And Travis County implemented those policies?

the database, we reject the application.

15 A. Yes.

19 20 21

22

24

- Q. Did Travis County have to implement any new procedures or policies as a result of 5.07?
 - A. Travis County specifically, yes.
 - Q. And what were those policies that were implemented?
 - A. The workflow having to keep track of the rejections -- the rejected applications and the accepted applications and the ballots accepted and rejected as well.
 - O. So tell me a little bit about that workflow

- 1 in terms of what was the process for a ballot that 2 came in that did not have the matching number?
- A. So if we had contact information for the voter, we would reach out and contact them via phone or e-mail. If they did not, then we would send them a letter in the mail.
 - Q. And do you know how often the voter would contact you as a result of the letter or phone call?
 - A. There were several voters that contacted us.
 - Q. Is it fair to say that not every voter you communicated with by mail or phone you were able to reach?
- MS. HUNKER: Objection. Form.
- MR. POPE: Objection. Form.
- 15 A. That's correct.
 - Q. For those voters, was the result that they did not vote?
- 18 A. Some, yes.

10

12

16

- MS. HUNKER: Objection. Form.
- Q. So let's talk about the voters that you did get in touch with. When you had that contact, what was the next step in terms of the information you provided to the voter?
- A. We would tell them -- we would inform them that we did not have the matching number in our

- database, and we would instruct them on how to go about and cure or fix the problem.
- Q. Did voters ever have problems curing their ballots?
- 5 MR. POPE: Objection. Form.
- MS. HUNKER: Objection. Form.
- 7 A. Yes.

13

17

18

20

- Q. What were some of the problems that they had 9 in curing their ballots?
 - A. Some of them were not computer -- were not proficient in their computer skills. Some of them didn't understand the process or what was required of them to -- to do on their end to cure their ballot.
- Q. You mentioned that some were not computer literate. Was there an option for them to cure their ballot in person?
 - A. They could cancel their application or -- or go into a polling location and vote provisionally.
 - Q. And that would require them being able to access the polling place, either through transportation or a ride through some other --
- 22 A. Yes.
- Q. Do you know if there were voters who didn't have access to a computer or transportation to be able to cure their ballot?

- Q. What happened with those voters?
- A. Some of those voters just didn't vote.
- Q. You also mentioned that there were voters that didn't understand the process. Can you explain to me a little bit more about the difficulties they had in understanding the process?
 - A. They -- they didn't understand why they had to do it. We explained to them there was a new law that required this, and they just could not -- or comprehend as to why this was in effect.
 - Q. Were some of those voters not unable to cure their ballots?
 - A. Some of them were.
 - Q. Let's look at Section 508, which is on the next page, page 39. Can you tell me what this section has to do with? What does this section do?
 - A. It says that the carrier envelope has to have a plastic that covers the -- the PII or the personal identification, the driver's license, or the last four of the social. Then it says that they have to sign that they have not received a number if they haven't gotten one by DPS or Social Security.
- Q. Do you know anything about the font size of the information on the carrier envelope?

- A. That the voter has an opportunity to correct their defect (audio distortion) their ballot.
- THE COURT REPORTER: I'm sorry. Could you repeat that? You cut out a little bit on me.
 - A. That the voter has the opportunity to correct their defect.

THE COURT REPORTER: Thank you.

- Q. What was the process by which Travis County implemented the defect correction portion?
- A. So we would reach out to the voter and -- and make contact with them and give them -- you know, help them along in the process and tell them they had to take this action in order for their ballot to count.
- Q. Can you tell me about some of the specific voters that your office spoke with who had issues correcting their ballots?

MS. HUNKER: Objection. Form.

- A. There were some. I don't -- I was not specifically on the phone with the voters, but it was told to me by my staff that, you know, elderly voters didn't -- did not want to cure or did not understand as to why they had to provide their socials or their driver's licenses.
 - Q. So is it fair to say that people had

- read it out loud: The early voting clerk is authorized to remove the secrecy flap on a return carrier envelope to facilitate the processing and review of voted mail ballots.
- 5 Did I read that correctly?
- 6 A. Yes.
- 7 Q. So does your office follow that procedure?
- 8 A. We do.
- 9 Q. And did you follow this procedure for the 10 March 1st primary?
- 11 A. Yes.
- Q. And did you follow it for the May 7th election?
- 14 A. Yes.
- Q. And are you intending to follow this procedure for the upcoming election?
- 17 A. Yes.
- Q. And then do you see where it says:
- 19 Returning the carrier envelope to the voter?
- 20 A. Yes.

Q. The paragraph reads: If the early voting clerk discovers that the carrier envelope is missing the voter's signature, has an incomplete signature, has missing or incomplete witness or assist information, or has missing or incorrect personal

- 1 identification information, the early voting clerk may 2 deliver the carrier envelope in person or by mail to 3 the voter so that the voter may correct the defect.
 - Did I read that correctly?

15

16

- Q. My question for you is: How does Travis County contact the voter?
- 8 A. So if there's contact -- if we have contact 9 information, we will send them an e-mail or call them 10 on the phone or send them a form in the mail.
- Q. Okay. Now, if you notice it says the early voting clerk may deliver the carrier envelope in person then. Has Travis County done that?
- 14 A. No.
 - Q. And let's move on to the next paragraph where the sentence begins with "upon receipt." It's in the middle of the paragraph.
- 18 A. Okay.
- Q. It says: Upon the receipt of the carrier envelope, the voter may correct the defect immediately and surrender the carrier envelope to the early voting clerk personnel.
- 23 Did I read that correctly?
- 24 A. Yes.
- 25 Q. And if I remember -- understand correctly,

 - A. Check their name and date of birth, locate a voter ID number, and verify that they were an active voter in Travis County.
- Q. And before SB 1, did Travis County have any problems identifying who was requesting a mail-in ballot?

- Q. And so is it fair to say that if an application to vote by mail had lacked information, it was more likely to be rejected; is that correct?
- 22 A. That's correct.
- Q. And you said that you would then review that they are a registered voter, and then the next step would be what?

Q. I'm Dana Paikowsky for the United States this morning. Thank you for taking the time to testify. I similarly just want to take a couple minutes to get a sense of whether or not you have knowledge about some things or whether someone else would be the right person. So are you involved in voter education efforts related to mail voting at all?

- A. I am.
- Q. Can you describe to me what kinds of voter education efforts your office made during the November 2022 general election?
- A. As mentioned before, we did social media posts, we provided notices -- I don't want to say "notices," that's a legal term -- but those high-viz -- neon paint, neon yellow, orange, whatever -- pieces of paper highlighting the requirements for ballot-by-mail. Also, we do post on where voting locations are, times, things like that.
- Q. So I'm specifically interested in voter education around the ID provision in mail voting.
 - A. Uh-huh.
- Q. Were there any efforts that you made to educate voters around that provision specifically?

1 A. Yes.

- Q. And are those efforts the same as you previously described?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. In those outreach and education efforts during the November 2022 general election, did your office advise voters to provide both an ID number and an SSN four on their ABBMs or carrier envelopes?
- A. Yes.
- 10 Q. Why did you advise voters to provide both 11 the -- excuse me. Withdrawn.
- Why did you advise voters to provide both when the language in the statute and also of the ABBM carrier envelopes directs voters to put one or the other?
- 16 A. Would you repeat that? I had a hard time 17 hearing.
- 18 | 0. Yeah.
- 19 A. Okay.
 - Q. Why did you advise voters to put both numbers down?
 - A. Okay. Under the guidance of the SOS and the recommendation of the SOS so that voters -- it was deemed that it was completely acceptable to have both numbers, because a voter may not know which of those

- 1 | numbers is associated with their voter record; so to
- 2 | cover all bases, so to speak, we advised our voters
- 3 | who submitted an ABBM or ballot-by-mail carrier to put
- 4 | both numbers.
- Q. Do the forms that you use for an ABBM or carrier envelope also ask voters to provide both
- 7 | numbers or just one?
 - A. Which forms are you referring to?
 - Q. The ABBMs and the carrier envelopes.
- A. Okay. No, they do not -- they do not say
- 11 | both, as far as I remember.
- 12 Q. As part of your voter education efforts, did
- 13 your office include an insert with their absentee
- 14 ballot-by-mail applications explaining the ID
- 15 requirement and asking for voters to provide both
- 16 | numbers?
- 17 A. If I remember correctly, yes.
- Q. And has your office produced that insert to
- 19 | us?

9

- 20 | A. I do not...
- 21 MR. NELSON: Again, I believe so. But
- 22 | if we haven't, we can supplement that.
- MS. PAIKOWSKY: Yeah, I wasn't able to
- 24 | find ballot inserts, but we'll connect with you and
- 25 check that out on the back end.

Dan Hayes March 29, 2023

that we could provide inserts, and they verified that we could notify voters that they could put both numbers, and it would be perfectly okay; so that's the feedback.

- Q. And this also is -- if you don't know this or if another designee would be better to testify about it: To your knowledge, did the Secretary of State's office recommend you develop these ballot inserts as a best practice for implementation for Senate Bill 1?
 - A. I don't remember that specifically.
- Q. Based on your experience in the 2022 general election, do you foresee a need to continue to engage in these affirmative voter education efforts related to the ID provision -- the mail ballot ID provision in future elections?
 - A. Yes.

- Q. Why is that?
- A. Travis County, it's very important to our office to educate our voters so that their ballots may be accepted -- counted -- as appropriate. We have -- we believe in voter education and helping people vote.
- Q. Does your county have any plans to -- I'm sorry, withdrawn.

Would your ability to continue these efforts depend on your budget in future years?

A. It does cost money, and money is always a consideration. So I -- dependent? Let's just say it's a consideration.

- Q. In the November 2022 general election, did your office hire employees or contractors in order to facilitate, support, or assist with mail voting or the implementation of the SB-1's identification requirements? And I'm also including voter education efforts in this question.
- 11 A. Would you state again the types -- the first 12 part of your question for me?
 - Q. Yeah. And I also am cognizant that there's another designee who's testifying.
 - A. Sure.

- Q. The question is: During the November 2022 election, did your office hire employees or contractors to facilitate the mail voting process and specifically implement SB-1'S identification requirements? And as part of that, I'm asking also about affirmative voter education efforts?
 - A. Yes --

going to say before you answer: If, again, as was pointed out, if it's a question that's regarding an

I was hoping you could just give me, like, a broad breakdown of how that works.

Sure. As ballots come back in, we -- what 3 Α. 4 our office, as the early voting clerk typically does, 5 is rip a slip. If you're familiar with that, there's a slip that conceals the ID of the voter. Rip those 6 7 and they are sorted by staff between ballots that have an ID of some sort and those that do not. Those that 8 do not are placed into a separate batch for expediency's sake; so when they do go to the signature 10 verification committee, they can be rejected 11 12 immediately, and we can start that cure process. 13 Others are batched with the assumption that the ID is 14 correct, and those will then be reviewed by the 15 signature verification committee as well. And they're 16 the ones that actually do the comparison between the 17 ID that's on the ballot envelope and what the voter 18 registration system has on record. If a ballot 19 envelope or ballot is rejected, we go through our --2.0 the typical steps of sending a notice by mail to the 21 voter. Every voter will get one by mail. If they 22 provide an email, we will also send a copy of that to 23 that voter. If they have a -- if they provided a 24 phone number, we will then have staff reach out by 25 phone and attempt to resolve the defect that way, either through pointing them through or even walking them through the state tracker if it's curable with that method or indicating to them the steps that would need to be taken in order to cure those defects. And any other defects that might be found by the early voting ballot board, it's the same exact process.

- Q. Okay. And so you mentioned that you would -- depending on whether you had the information, you would mail a notice for everyone, email if possible, and phone if possible; is that right?
 - A. That's correct.

- Q. And just to clarify something you said at the beginning where the EDC is taking the flap and checking to see if there is or is not a number and separating those out for expediency's sake if there is not a number, the EDC would always pass those to the SBC rather than the EDC taking action at that point, is that correct?
 - A. That is correct, yes.
 - Q. Okay.
- A. We want the signature verification clerk making that determination that those are, in fact, defective.
 - Q. Okay.
 - A. And typically that is sent to them first so

Page 16

1 they can take care of that quickly and we can get 2 moving on with our reaching out.

- Q. The notices of rejection that you would send to voters, did you use the Secretary of State's forms for that?

- Q. Okay. Was there any sort of cutoff in time after which you no longer attempted to provide notice and an opportunity to cure?
- A. We will provide notice up until the final date that the ballot can't be received.
- Q. And so would you agree that Travis County made every reasonable effort to provide notice and an opportunity to cure for voters whose ABBMs were flagged for rejection due to SB-1's ID matching requirements?
 - A. So you're referring to ABBM as the application.
 - O. Yes.
- A. So we're moving from the ballot to the application?
- Q. I'm sorry. Let's just stick with the ballots for now.
 - A. Okay.
 - Q. Would you agree that Travis County made every reasonable effort to provide notice and an opportunity to cure for voters whose mail ballots were flagged for rejection due to SB-1's ID matching requirements?

- Q. And despite these efforts, hundreds of mail ballots were ultimately rejected due to SB-1's ID matching requirements?
 - A. Over the course of 2022, yes.
 - Q. In the November '22 general election, sorry.
- A. In the November '22 election, I'm sure I provided those numbers. I don't have them on the top of my head, but if it is in the hundreds, then that sounds correct.
- Q. We'll go back over that and confirm that shortly. I guess, then, can we sort of walk through the same broad overview of the cure efforts for the ABBMs that were flagged for rejection due to the ID matching requirements?
- A. The applications, we typically get those and if it is rejected, we will send a rejection notice. We were not making phone calls with respect to the ABBMs, but they do get the state form by mail or email, if email is available. Typically, we're not calling. The time frame between the date you can apply for a ballot by mail is typically longer, and we typically also do not have the staff because the signature verification could be making those phone calls to cure on the ballot side. It's not something we are currently doing for the application side.

- Q. So when the signature verification committee is meeting, you have a substantially larger number of people available to make those phone calls, and that's why you do it then?
- 10 | A. Yes.

- Q. Okay. That all makes sense. So switching topics a little bit and going to the -- well, let's start with this: Travis County -- if I say that Travis County is an offline county, do you know what I mean by that?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. Can you tell me what you understand an offline county to be?
- A. An offline county is a county that does not use the state's voter registration system team. We use our own local program, which does have an interface with Team. That's not our main program that we use to manage our voter registration and ballots by mail. Those types of things.
 - Q. So I'm going to ask you later a few can then be approved -- the application can be approved, the one that was previously filed.

- Q. And so, in that instance, when you first checked and sent the rejection notice, it didn't have a number, then you get notification that they followed through with that, and then you check again and it does have a number. You've seen that happen; is that true?

2.2

- Q. Okay. Do you know if a voter can add an identification number to their voter file through votetexas.gov?
 - A. Once again, that would be a question posed to voter registration.
 - Q. Okay. What about through corrective action forms that are supplied with notices of ballot rejections?
 - A. The corrective action form that is filed with the early voting clerk does not include a pathway to update a voter registration, if I remember.
- Q. And so that form would only successfully cure in the event that there was one -- let's break it down.
- It would only successfully cure first if a voter had mistakenly not included the number in the first place; is that correct?

- A. On the ballot?
- Q. On the carrier envelope.
- A. Yes.

2.2

- Q. And could it also cure a defect if there was an input or typographical error in the way the voter had input their number on the carrier envelope and then they could fix that?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. But it would not be able to cure a defect where the voter file had a different number, even if the -- let's just say hypothetically the voter had their driver's license that's current in front of them and they are inputting it perfectly onto the carrier but it doesn't match what's in the database, the correction action form could not fix that?
 - A. That's correct.
- Q. Okay. And would everything we just said about what the corrective action form can fix be the same for the -- okay. This will be too confusing. One of the things it says on the rejection form is that you can also take corrective action through rewriting the number on the carrier envelope itself, and/or, I presume, if the carrier envelope did not have the number, you could put it in and then resend

1 it back without using the corrective action form. Is 2. that accurate to your knowledge?

- That is. In the event that the ballot is Α. returned to the voter.
- Okay. And in that case, if the voter were to do that, it would be able to correct the same issues as a corrective action form but not change their number in the voter file; is that correct?
 - Α. Correct.

- Thank you. And do you have any idea Ο. Okay. if a voter could add a number to their local voter file through the state's online mail ballot tracker?
 - That's a question for voter registration. Α.
- Ο. Okay. And then how would Travis County verify the accuracy of an added identification number, like, through some sort of; live check process or anything like that?
 - Certainly a question for voter registration.
- And I have all the same questions about Ο. changing or updating a number versus adding a number. Would those also be questions for the voter registrar?
 - Α. Yes.
- Okay. But with respect to what you did tell me about the use of the corrective action forms or rewriting the number on the carrier envelope for voters to whom the carrier envelope was returned, that sort of corrective action would, to your knowledge,

3 not be able to update the voter file in addition to 4 | not being able to add a number; is that correct?

- A. Correct. You can not alter voter registration files based off of those documents.
- Q. Okay. Thank you. So I'm going to hand you something that we'll mark as Exhibit Number 3. So do you recognize this document?
- 10 | A. I do.

- Q. And you'll see at the bottom right that there is what's called a Bates number that says 064.128584; do you see that?
- 14 A. Yes.
- Q. And that means that this was a document that was produced by Travis County in this litigation. Do you understand that?
- 18 | A. Yes.
- Q. Okay. And so I'm just going to read what's at the top. It says, "Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail;" is that correct?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. And then in the upper top left corner, just for the record, this says 6-4 prescribed by the Secretary of State, correct?

- Q. And this is an example of one of the rejection forms that Travis County would use when mailing out a notice of rejection of an ABBM, correct?
 - A. Correct.
- Q. And so this particular form is specifically for where the voter registration record does not have an identification number associated with it; is that correct?
- A. That's correct.
 - Q. And so that means that there's no number in the voter's file; is that correct? Not one of the numbers that is required by SB-1, is not in the voter's file?
 - A. Correct.
 - Q. And so there are two forms of cure that are set out on this notice. One is to submit an updated voter registration application. That's the first option; is that correct?
 - A. That's correct.
 - Q. And the second is to update your voter registration record online at texas.gov; is that correct?
- A. That is correct.
 - Q. And both of these would be for adding a

- Q. And at the bottom of the form in the -- I guess it's the third to last -- no, second to last paragraph, it says in bold letters, "Note: You cannot add the required personal identification numbers to your voter registration record by submitting a new application." Is that correct?
- A. That is correct.
- 10 Q. And is that your understanding of the rules 11 in the law?
 - A. Yes, that is.
 - Q. Okay. And so if somebody did submit a new -- a number on their application, but your voter file shows that there was no number associated with them, you would not add that number to their voter file; is that correct?
 - A. That is correct.
 - Q. And just as an aside, you would be able to associate the applicant with their voter file in your system even in the absence of one of these numbers; is that correct?
 - A. That is correct.
- Q. Because you would have to look up their file to see if they had a number in the first place; is | that correct?

2.0

- A. Yes.
- Q. Okay. And so I'm going to hand you something that's marked as Exhibit Number -- I'm going to mark as Exhibit Number 4, and I'll just give you a second to look over that.
 - A. Okay.
- Q. And so I'm just going to read this as Section 84.014, "Action by Early Voting Clerk on Certain Applications;" is that correct?
 - A. That is correct.
- Q. And so this is a section of the Texas

 Election Code that I have just read out, and I'm just going to read -- it's very short, so I'm just going to read what it says. "If an applicant provides a date of birth, driver's license number, or social security number on the applicant's application for an early voting ballot to be voted by mail that is different from or in addition to the information maintained by the voter registrar in accordance with Title II of the election code, the early voting clerk shall notify the voter registrar. The voter registrar shall update the voter's record with the information provided by the applicant." Was that a correct reading?
 - A. That's what it says.

A. I do not know the specific mechanisms of how voter registration pulls those numbers in. All I know is they pull up a file and those numbers appear on the voter files for us to then compare against the application or ballot.

- Q. Okay. And just to retread what you said earlier and clarify: When checking the local database versus Team, is the procedure always to check the local database first and if there is a match, you stop there?
- 11 A. Correct.

- 14 A. Correct.
- Q. Okay. And then I've got one more exhibit here. I will mark this Exhibit Number 5. So I will just give you a second to look over that. Have you seen this before?
- 19 A. Yes, I have.
 - Q. And I'll just read the title, "Defendant Dyana Limon-Mercado's Objections and Responses to OCA Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories;" is that correct?
 - A. That is correct.
 - Q. And so -- let me see here. I'm just going requirement, did any voters indicate confusion with the process?

2.

2.2

- A. We had several phone calls. People seeking clarification on how that process would work, yes.
- Q. So I'm going to turn a little bit to the sort of mechanics of the processing of ABBMs and mail ballots. When your office receives an ABBM, how does your office look up that voter's voter file?
- A. Depends on the information that they give us. If they provide a VUID, which is the state ID, we typically look it up that way. If not, then we'll do a name and date of birth match to find the voter that matches the information on the rest of the application.
- Q. The same question for carrier envelopes. How does your office pull up a voter's file once you've received a carrier envelope?
- A. Well, the carrier envelope includes a unique identification number that is tied specifically to that voter. So it is a much, much simpler process.

 Once that is received, it can be scanned and tied immediately to that voter that it has been received before it goes onto signature verification to continue verifying all the information on it.
 - Q. And that's a bar code that's on the carrier

1 envelope that you provide to the voter and to send 2 back to you?

A. That's correct.

- Q. Does your office use the driver's license or social security number for any purpose beyond determining whether an ABBM or mail ballot can be accepted in light of Senate Bill 1?
- A. Other than as an additional piece of information to help research the voter to find out who the application might be for -- but it would be very rare -- no.
- Q. Is there ever an instance where -- withdrawn.

Can you think of an instance where you were unable to look up a voter based on name, birth date, and other identification -- other information on their ballot aside from a driver's license or social security number?

- A. That does happen occasionally.
- Q. Previous to Senate Bill 1, were you ever unable to look up a voter's file with the information provided on an ABBM or carrier envelope?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. Would you be able to look up -- does your county send out notices of final rejection? This is

Page 51

- 1 | workflow. What is a situation where you have a
- 2 | voter's full name, date of birth, and address you
- 3 | would need to use a driver's license or SSN to look
- 4 | them up?
- A. I wouldn't see a reason to use one of those
- 6 to look them up.
- 7 Q. So -- let's actually -- let's make this
- 8 | Exhibit 7. And this is the document that says at the
- 9 top, "Don't forget your ID numbers." Do you recognize
- 10 | this document?
- 11 A. I do.
- 12 Q. And there's two pages if you want to take a
- 13 | moment to review. So the flyer on the first page,
- 14 | would you mind telling us what that is?
- 15 A. On the first page is the insert that we
- 16 | would include and a request for an application for
- 17 | ballot by mail. It is just included in the envelope
- 18 | along with the application itself as a reminder to
- 19 | include one or the other or both IDs when returning
- 20 | the application back to our office.
- Q. And it says at the bottom, "We recommend
- 22 | providing both." Is that correct?
- 23 A. That's correct.

24

- Q. And why is it you recommend providing both?
- A. Secretary of State's office has indicated

Page 52

1 that is the best practice -- to include both -- just 2 in case if the voter registration system is missing
3 one or the other. We have both in which to verify.

- Q. So the second page says, "Don't forget your ID numbers," as well. What is this document?
- A. Very similar. It is included in the ballot package that we send out along with all of the other prescribed documents, including the ballots, to remind our voters to include their IDs on their carrier envelope. One or the other or both as we recommend.
- Q. And were you involved in the development of these documents?

- Q. Why did your office decide to develop these inserts?
 - A. We decided in the spring of 2022 we wanted to take an extra measure to educate our voters to include those numbers in an effort to reduce our rejection rate.
- 20 Q. Do you feel you were effective in lowering 21 the rejection rate?
 - A. I do.
 - Q. What is your basis for that belief?
- A. Well, it's speculation based off of gut feeling. But the rejection rates did decline, to my

Page 74

1 together because they sort of are a pair. Exhibit 8
2 reads, "Notice of Carrier Defect, Carrier Envelope
3 Returns to the Voter by mail;" is that right?

A. Yes.

2.0

- Q. And at the top left, it says, "Prescribed by the Secretary of State," and then, in parenthesis, 8-23, correct? And was this the form that Travis County used to mail notices of rejected mail ballots when time permitted the return of the carrier envelope to the voter?
 - A. That would be our form, yes.
- Q. Okay. And Exhibit 8 [sic] is a very similar form. The title is "Notice of Carrier Defect, Voter Notified of Carrier Envelope Defect by Phone or Email." In the top left, it says, "Prescribed by Secretary of State," and in parenthesis, 8-24; is that correct?
 - A. Yes, it's Exhibit 9.
- Q. Yes, Exhibit 9. And in this case, it does have a Bates number in the bottom left, 064.128072, indicating that it was produced in discovery. I just did not see an equivalent on Exhibit 8. But these are both the forms that you would use to notify a voter that their mail-in ballot had been rejected for identification number reasons, correct?

Q. And Number 9 would be by phone or email because, based on best guesses with the speed of the U.S. Postal Service, you didn't think there was time to return the carrier envelope and get it back; is that right?

- A. That is correct.
- Q. Okay. And so if we look at Exhibit 8 and go to "Defect Correction Process by Number" in the middle and "Defect Number 4." If you want to just read that to yourself quickly.
 - A. Yes.
- Q. And then also correcting Defect Number 4 using the ballot-by-mail tracker under that.
 - A. Yes. Gotcha.
 - Q. And so these are the ways that a voter is instructed to correct an error with their ID numbers; is that correct?
 - A. That is correct.
- Q. And on this form, Exhibit 8, there are three ways to do that. You can do that through the mail ballot tracker online, you can do that through the collective action form, and you can do it on the carrier envelope itself because that had been returned to the voter, correct?

MR. NELSON: I'm going to instruct, don't speculate. I mean, if you know or have an answer, then you can answer. But don't speculate.

- I am not qualified philosophically to answer that question.
- So next I want to turn to the voter Ο. lookup function for carrier envelopes. Is an SSN or ID that's provided on the envelope ever necessary to match the voter file to the carrier envelope?
- Very rarely because of the bar code that I mentioned earlier. That is typically what we use to link the carrier envelope to the voter profile.
- What would be a circumstance where you would Q. need to use an SSN or ID to match a voter file to the carrier envelope?
- It's a possibility for an FBC voter -- it's a Texas term for the -- you call the voters for the folks that are get their ballot electronically. They will mail them using their own envelope. possible, assuming that their SSN is available for us to see without having to open it up. Then we might

1	A. I don't know what you're asking. Are you
2	asking if we had any trouble that people we have got the
3	wrong number for them, no evidence of that. The problem
4	we had was people didn't supply numbers.
5	Q. Did your office assess, after the fact, whether
6	voters supplied the numbers that you brought in on
7	December 20th on ABBM?
8	A. No. We haven't compared those, no. But the 9	problem that voters had was not wrong numbers. The
10	problem was no number on the carrier envelopes.
11	Q. Sitting here today, do you know if the
12	December 20th process reduced ABBM rejections, did you
13	assess that at all?
14	A. How would we?
15	Q. By looking at whether the voters subject to
16	that match then submitted ABBMs and voted by mail?
17	A. We haven't done that, no.
18	Q. If we could mark this as Exhibit 7.
19	(Exhibit No. 7 marked.)
20	Q. (By Mr. Freeman) I will represent to you that
21	this is an excerpt of the Chapter 84 of the Texas
22	Election Code. I would like to ask you a couple of
23	questions about Section 84.014. What is the effect of
24	this provision?
25	A. I don't know what you mean.
- 1

1	Q.	What does this provision require when an
2	applicant provides a date of birth, driver's license
3	numb	er or social security number on an application for
4	an ea	rly voting ballot that is different from what it
5	or in a	addition to what is in TEAM?
6		MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. Calls for a
7	legal o	conclusion. Compound.
8	A.	This is it requires the voter's reg
9	start-	up date, the voter's record with the updated
10	inforı	mation that was provided on the ABBM.
11	Q.	Have you provided any guidance regarding this
12	provis	sion?
13	A.	We have.
14	Q.	Is it in the Early Voting Ballot Board and
15	Signa	ture Verification Committee Handbook?
16	A.	Well, I you know, probably. The place where
17	it wo	uld be also is in the advisory.
18	Q.	Which advisory?
19	A.	The advisory that we have done on this new
20	proce	ess. I think we have got a couple of them.
21	Q.	Were those issued in 2017, 2018?
22	A.	No. No. Since SB 1.
23	Q.	Regarding 84.014?
24	A.	Sure.
25	Q.	Okay. How does this provision interact with

- A. Well, that -- that's something that we had to -- we had to decide, how does this interact, because if a voter can just put any number and it becomes the de facto number of their -- then SB 1 is gone. So we had to say that, if the first time you have got a number is on an application for ballot by mail, you can't use 84.014 to update the voter's record by itself. If you get something else, if you get a copy of the driver's license with the ABBM, if you get an updated voter registration application that comes with the ABBM that also has the number on it, then you can. But you can just take the number on the ABBM and update the voter's record and issue one without the ABBM, that would be comparing A to A and tautology.
 - Q. Is that additional requirement of a copy of a driver's license or something akin to that in the statute itself?

A. It is not.

MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.

A. It is something we had to say, part of our job in the Secretary of State's Office with regard to statutes is to harmonize them to make them both make sense. That's the way we harmonized this one. Because this, obviously, predates SB 1. SB 1 is the more

1	track	er.
2	Q.	Q. Am I correct that this is the only way to
3	correct an ABBM online?
4		MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.
5	A.	Well
6		MS. HUNKER: Misstates testimony.
7	A.	No.
8	Q.	How else can a voter correct and
9	A.	So if they don't have the number in their voter
10	regist	tration record
11	Q.	Uh-huh.
12	A.	A they can fix that by going to Texas.gov
13	which is not the ballot by mail tracker.
14	Q.	What fields are required to access the ballot
15	tracker?
16	A.	The ones with asterisks by them.
17	Q.	Does that include social security number and
18	driver	's license number?
19	A.	It does. Last four of social.
20	Q.	Is this required by statute or by your policy?
21	A.	Statute.
22	Q.	And do these fields need to match what's on
23	TEAM	?
24	A.	They do.
25	Q.	And so if a voter doesn't have both, an SSN-4

1	and a DPS number on TEAM, are they able to use the
2	ballot tracker?
3	A. Not directly. They have to go to Texas.gov to
4	supply the missing number first.
5	Q. Okay. And if a voter has never been issued a
6	Texas driver's license number, can the voter use the
7	ballot tracker to correct online?
8	A. If they have a personal ID number, election
9	identification certificate number, yes.
10	Q. If the voter has never been issued a driver's
11	license number, personal identification number, or an
12	election identification certificate number can that
13	voter use the ballot tracker to correct online?
14	A. They cannot.
15	Q. If a voter's Texas driver's license number or a
16	partial security number has a typo in TEAM, can the
17	voter access the ballot tracker without knowing the
18	erroneous number in TEAM?
19	A. They would have to know the erroneous number in
20	TEAM.
21	Q. Are there any other categories of voter who
22	cannot use the ballot tracker?
23	MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.
24	A. People who don't have a computer or internet
25	access.

2.

- Q. Did you speak with anyone else about your deposition today outside of your immediate family?
- A. I did. I talked to Christina Adkins in our office, I talked to Kristi Hart, and I talked to Donna Davidson at the Republican Party of Texas.
 - Q. What did you discuss with Ms. Davidson?
- A. The same thing that I talked to Christina about. There was an incident with regard to a poll watcher in Northern Hidalgo County. For the life of me I can't remember any details, neither could Christina, and neither could Donna.
 - Q. Anything else?
 - A. That's it.
- Q. Okay. So since we last spoke in April of 2022 has your role in the office of the Texas Secretary of State changed?
 - A. It has.
 - O. What's your current title?
- A. I'm not sure what the title is. I think it's project manager or special projects. I have been designated to work on one project.
 - Q. What's that project?
- A. The project is potentially replacing the ERIC system that we have that we're currently using to use to compare voter registrations across state lines.

- Q. What was the impetus for your change in role?
- A. We had an organizational hearing at the Texas house for the House Elections Committee on March 10 or March 9, and then the Secretary was not pleased. She thought that my exchange with Representative Swanson was indicator that maybe it would be good for her and for me to change roles.
- Q. What was the impetus for the creation of the role that you are now in?
- A. Well, we have been discussing -- there is legislation that would require us to leave the ERIC system, Electronic Registration Information Center, and if any of that passes then we still have a law, legal obligation to compare voter roles across state lines. So we have a need to figure out what comes next if ERIC -- if we have to withdraw from ERIC.
- Q. In your new role do you report to the acting director of the elections division?
 - A. Yes.
 - Q. That's Ms. Adkins?
- 23 | A. It is.

Q. In your new role will you have any role in the implementation of SB 1's mail voting requirements

1 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. 2 BY THE WITNESS: 3 Yes, that's true. That's the goal of the Α. 4 form. BY MR. FREEMAN: 5 Since the May 2022 runoff, did the Office 6 Ο. 7 of the Secretary of State make any changes to the absentee ballot by mail application? 8 9 Α. We changed several forms. I'm pretty sure 10 the application if it's got an oath of assistance on it 11 it changed, yes. MR. FREEMAN: Mark this as Exhibit 2. 12 13 (WHEREUPON, a certain document was 14 marked Deposition Exhibit No. 2, 15 for identification, as of 3/28/23.) 16 BY MR. FREEMAN: 17 Mr. Ingram, is this the current absentee Q. 18 ballot by mail form? I will represent to you this 19 form, I don't believe the date is on it, but it's the 20 form that's currently on your website and it's dated 21 December 9, 2021. 22 Α. Yes. I mean it looks like it, yes. 23 Okay. This form is still in effect, the Ο. form that's on the website? 24 25 Α. It is.

1 Any current plans to alter the form? Ο. 2. Α. No. Has your office considered altering the 3 0. 4 form since it was issued? 5 No, not this form. Α. Why not? 6 0. There is not a need to. Α. Is there a statutory reason this form could 8 Ο. 9 not inform voters that they may provide both a Texas 10 driver's license number and a partial Social Security 11 number? MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. 12 13 BY THE WITNESS: 14 Α. It's not what the law says. The form 15 outlines the law. BY MR. FREEMAN: 16 17 Q. Okay. And so if the form outlines the law, 18 is it not allowed for the form to inform voters that 19 they may provide both numbers? 20 Not on the form. It's not the law. Α. 21 Understood. O. 22 Has your office suggested any kind of 23 amendments to SB 1 that would permit including that 24 information on this form? 25 There is plenty of outside channels Α. No.

1 Α. The carrier envelope does. 2. O. Is this a reason why this form doesn't have a red box around the SB 1 identification number 3 4 requirements? 5 It's not needed. Α. Why is it not needed? 6 Q. 7 Because the application can just be redone Α. It's a much less formal document. It's not 8 any time. 9 the vote. Can it be redone if it's rejected -- strike 10 0. 11 that. Can it be redone if the voter does not 12 13 become aware of the rejection until after the ballot 14 application deadline? MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. 15 BY THE WITNESS: 16 17 Α. It can't. But the voter can vote in person 18 at that point. They have still complete ability to 19 vote. 2.0 BY MR. FREEMAN: 21 Just to confirm. During the 2022 general Ο. 22 election, did your office continue to advise election 23 administrators not to apply a hierarchy between DPS numbers and Social Security numbers when determining whether this form meets SB 1 requirements and identify

1 the correct voter?
2 A. I lost your thread there.

- Q. Just confirming. During the 2022 general, did your office continue to tell local election administrators, county clerks they didn't need to apply a hierarchy between the DPS number and the SSN when they were determining whether an ABBM adequately identifies a voter for SB 1 purposes?
 - A. Absolutely.
- Q. From an election administration perspective, during the 2022 general election did the language on this form directing voters to give their SSN for quote, if you do not have a Texas driver's license, Texas personal identification number or a Texas election identification certificate number, serve a purpose?

1 0. Is this the up-to-date version of the 2. carrier envelope? It looks like it. 3 Α. 4 Q. What changes were made during the general 5 election period? Α. We put a red box around the numbers and we 6 7 changed the oath of office. Did your staff consider any further changes 8 0. 9 to the mail ballot carrier envelope during the general 10 election period? We did not. 11 Α. 12 Q. Why not? 13 There wasn't a need. Α. 14 O. Did your office have any concerns about the 15 red box being fully accessible to voters with any kinds 16 of disabilities? 17 Α. No. 18 Is there an issue with the red type and Ο. voters with disabilities? 19 20 I understand that to be the case, yes. Α. 21 What's the issue? O. 22 There's some people with some kinds of Α. 23 visual impairments don't see it. 24 Would it be helpful to Texas voters if the mail ballot carrier envelope itself informed voters

Ο.

1 that they may provide both a Texas driver's number and 2. Social Security number? 3 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. 4 BY THE WITNESS: 5 That's not the law. Α. BY MR. FREEMAN: 6 7 Would it be helpful if it did? Q. Doesn't matter if it's helpful or not. 8 Α. 9 MS. HUNKER: Objection. 10 BY THE WITNESS: 11 Α. It's not the law. We can't suggest to 12 voters that both numbers are required. We can suggest 13 to voters that they go ahead and voluntarily use both 14 numbers, and that they increase their chances of 15 success if they do, and we can hound that message big, but we can't make any suggestion on the official form 16 17 that both numbers are required. 18 BY MR. FREEMAN: 19 Just so I understand it. Why can you not 0. 20 say it's optional on the form? Because that's not the law. 21 Α. 22 Okay. Are there any current plans to alter Q. 23 the carrier envelope? 24 If the law changes we will change the carrier envelope.

how they should look up the voter registration status of an applicant?

A. No.

- Q. Do you have an understanding of how they typically go about doing that?
- A. They either use TEAM or they use their local system. And some off-line counties use TEAM for this.
- Q. What information do they plug in when they are trying to pull up the registration status like name?
- A. Well, I mean if you're using TEAM you can search by voter name. That's probably the way they do it. They are limited to their county.
- Q. If we turn to page 32. What are the matters set out here?
 - A. This talks about the new law.
- Q. This is talking about looking up identification numbers; is that correct?
 - A. That's correct.
 - Q. That is separate from looking up registration status?
 - A. It's part of the registration status.
- 24 Q. But it's --
 - A. That's what it says at the last sentence you talk to the voter registrar to confirm the voter registration and status.

- Q. But am I correct that the numbers provided here, driver's license, Social Security number, they are not used to look up the voter, they are used to confirm the voter; is that correct?
- A. They are used to make sure the voter has properly identified themself on the application, yes.
- Q. Those numbers are not used to find the voter in TEAM as part of the ABBM processing, correct?
- A. No, sir. I mean not usually. I guess they could look it up by DL number if they wanted to.
- Q. Do you have any understanding as to whether -- strike that.

Do you instruct local officials to do that?

MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.

BY THE WITNESS:

A. We don't tell them how they use TEAM. All of the fields are available to look up anything they want to look up.

registration record. I don't know.

BY MR. FREEMAN:

2.

Q. Is there any information here about using the number to look up the voter in the first instance as opposed to using the record that has already been pulled up with other information to confirm that the Texas driver's license number and Social Security number line up?

- A. Again, how they look up a voter is how they look up a voter. We don't get into that.
- Q. I have to ask you a few questions about the ballot tracker. When we last met last year we discussed the log-in requirements of the mail ballot tracker. We talked a little bit about it here today as well. Have there been any changes thus far to the log-in requirements for the ballot tracker since we met in April of last year?
 - A. There have not.
- Q. Does The Office of Secretary of State have the ability to change these log-in requirements absent changes to the election code?
 - A. We do not.
- Q. Do you know if the ballot tracker log-in page provides information as to how to add information to a voter TEAM record if the voter doesn't have a TDL

When do those exceptions occur? 6 0. 7 I don't know. When they occur that's what Α. 8 makes it an exception. 9 I'm just trying to understand, you know, if O. 10 you have a typical practice, but there are exceptions. Is there a set of circumstances when you typically view 11 12 or experience those exceptions? 13 Our goal, our practice, our policy is to Α. 14 respond to email and phone calls within 24 hours. 15 0. Okay. Do you know how many exceptions occurred in the November 2022 general? 16 17 Α. I do not. 18 Do you know if this voter was Ο. 19 disenfranchised by SB 1? 20 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. Did you ever discuss with your colleagues updating this form to inform voters that they can mail in a copy of their Texas driver's license with their ABBM to update?

- A. No. We got that question as a county who received a copy of DL and what do we do with this, so we answered that question. It was never going to be us telling a voter that they have to mail in a copy of their DL.
- Q. The form only directs voters to go to Texas.gov generally, not to a specific page on that website; is that correct?

 - Q. Do you know when that will be complete?
- A. Soon. If I had my way it would have been two weeks ago.
- Q. To be clear, if a voter has been issued multiple DPS numbers and provides a DPS ID number different from the one listed in TEAM on an ABBM and does not also provide a Social Security number, that ABBM will be rejected, correct?
- A. If they don't provide a number that's in their voter registration record they will be rejected, yes, at least temporarily.
 - Q. Same thing on mail ballot?
 - A. Same thing on mail ballot.
- Q. Would you agree a duly registered voter whose ballot was rejected under these circumstances was not at fault?
- MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.

- 1 A. Consulted with, you know, my -- the attorneys
- 2 that are here.
- 3 Q. Approximately, how much time did you spend
- 4 preparing?
- 5 A. In total, maybe about six hours.
- 6 Q. So other than the folks here in this room, did
- 7 you meet with anyone else?
- 8 A. No.
- 9 Q. And when did these meetings take place?
- 10 A. Over the course of the last few weeks.
- 11 Q. Did you review any documents in the course of
- 12 your preparation?
- 13 A. Minimally.
- 14 Q. What did you review?
- 15 A. I think I glanced at a couple of the advisories
- 16 that we issued.

19

- 17 Q. Did you bring any documents with you?
- 18 A. I did not.
 - Q. So I'll start with some background questions.
- 20 Where do you work?
- 21 A. I work for the Texas Secretary of State.
- 22 Q. And what is your current job title?
- 23 A. I am currently the Legal Director for the
- 24 Elections Division.
- Q. Could you explain what that position entails?

- Page 11
 A. Sure. As Legal Director, I oversee the legal
- 2 staff, which consists of attorneys that provide advice
- 3 and assistance to election officials. And one of our
- 4 newer sections is our election security trainers that
- 5 provide training and assistance to Counsel on policies
- 6 and procedure as it relates to elections and security
- 7 issues related to elections.
 - Q. And who do you report to?
- A. Keith Ingram, the Director of Elections.
- 10 Q. And what kind of decisions require approval or
 - discussions with Mr. Ingram?
- 12 A. What do you mean by approval?
- Q. What do you need to run by Mr. Ingram in order to do a task?
- 15 MRS. HUNKER: Objection, form, vague.
- 16 A. When I work with Mr. Ingram, it's very
- 17 collaboratively. I'm not sure that there's things I
- 18 have to run by him in so much as we work together to
- heta come up with like a policy or an answer, you know, that
- 20 our office is going to give on certain items.
- 21 Q. (By Mrs. Yun) How long have you been in your
- 22 current position?
- 23 A. I've been the legal director since December of
- 24 2017.

Q. And were you in the Elections Division before you

Page 12

- 1 became the legal director?
- 2 A. I was, uh-huh.
- 3 Q. How long were you in the Elections Division?
- 4 A. I think about six years. Since June of 2012, I
- 5 was an attorney and ran the certification program for
- 6 voting systems.
- 7 Q. So between 2012 and 2017, you were doing the
- 8 certification -- you were in charge --
- 9 A. Oh, that was part of it, yeah, and an attorney
- 10 that provided assistance and advice to election
- 11 officials regarding election laws in Texas.
- 12 Q. What did you do before you joined the Elections
- 13 Division?
- 14 A. I worked for the Texas Workforce Commission.
- 15 O. And before that?
- 16 A. A little bit of, like, contract work. I was
- 17 right out of law school after that.
- 18 Q. Understood. Thank you. So you briefly went over
- 19 some of your team's responsibilities. Could you explain
- 20 what your team does? And we can start with the team of
- 21 attorneys that you mentioned. What are their chief
- 22 responsibilities?
- 23 A. As I indicated before, one of the primary things
- 24 that my team does is we provide advice and assistance to
- 25 election officials, candidates, members of the public

- Page 13
- regarding the laws around elections in Texas. We do
- $2\,$ that in a number of ways. We talk to people on the
- 3 phone, we respond to e-mail inquiries, we produce
- 4 guidance on different subjects. We issue election law
- 5 advisories, we have handbooks and resources, we speak at
- 6 conferences. You know, just general support to the - election community in Texas.
- 8 Q. And could you briefly describe the
- 9 responsibilities of the elections security trainers?
- 10 A. Sure. It's a new -- a new section that we just
- 11 started. We brought some folks on board that have very
- 12 practical experience in the election arena. Almost all
- 13 of them are former election officials, so they have the
- 14 practical side to compliment the legal side. And their
- 15 primary obligation is to provide training to counties on
- 16 specific policies and procedures and -- with a general
- 17 focus on security issues, yeah.
- 18 Q. Understood. You mentioned election advisories.
- 19 What is your role specifically in terms of drafting or
- 20 revising or approving election advisories?
- A. It depends on the advisory itself. You know, we have some advisories that we issue that are routine for
- 23 every election. And generally, for those I will help
 - assign those out to the attorneys and give them guidance on what they need to cover or give them instructions on

Page 42

1 information in the registration record. For example, if

- 2 they provided the same registration address, if they --
- 3 if the person opted to put their date of birth and
- 4 provided their date of birth, you know, if those all
- 5 match, then you can be reasonably sure it's the same
- 6 person.
- 7 Q. (By Mrs. Yun) Even though their last name is now
- 8 different?
- 9 A. That's correct.
- 10 Q. Okay. So according to your office, is -- do you
- 11 provide any guidance as to how an EV clerk might be able
- 12 to confirm that the individual is a registered voter of
- 13 that same political subdivision?
- 14 MRS. HUNKER: Objection, form, outside
- 15 personal knowledge, vague. You can answer.
- 16 A. I think that we -- I would tell them exactly what
- 17 I just told you, is that you would look to see the other
- 18 items that they listed on the application, whether they
- 9 match the voter registration record.
- 20 Q. (By Mrs. Yun) And if, say, an EV clerk, you know,
- 21 called the voter to see if they changed their last name
- 22 or something like that, would that be okay according to
- 23 your office?
- 24 MRS. HUNKER: Objection, form, improper
- 25 hypothetical.

Page 44

- 1 Q. Any plans to change it in the future?
- 2 A. Not unless there's a law change that tells us to.
- 3 Q. Got it, thank you.
- 4 A. Sure.
- 5 (Exhibit Number 5 was marked.)
- 6 Q. (By Mrs. Yun) I'm going to hand you what's been
- 7 marked as Exhibit 5. It's Bates 31647. Do you
- 8 recognize this document?
- 9 A. I do.
- 10 Q. And what is it?
- 11 A. It looks like it is a document or an official
- 12 form that we prescribed for Ballot by Mail materials.
- 13 The title is, Information About Returning Your Carrier
- 14 Envelope. We commonly refer to this as the carrier
- 15 insert because it's an insert that goes with your
- 16 carrier envelope when you're mailing it to the voter.
- 17 Q. Got it, thank you. So below, how do I return by
- 18 marked ballot to the Early Voting Clerk, it says you may
- 19 hand deliver it on Election Day in person. Is that
- 20 right?
- 21 A. That's correct.
- 22 Q. And it says, When you're hand delivering your own
- 23 ballot, it says, and I quote, you will be asked to
- 24 present an acceptable form of photo ID, end quote.
- 25 Correct?

A. I don't know if we've had that specific question

Page 43

- 2 before. I probably need to know a little bit more
- 3 about, you know, why they wanted to call them, you know,
- 4 if they couldn't validate that information from the
- 5 application in the record itself.
- 6 O. (By Mrs. Yun) So am I understanding correctly
- 7 that as long as the EV clerk can identify this voter as
- a registered voter in the same political subdivision,
- 9 the ABBM is not rejected even though the information on
- 10 $\,$ the ABBM does not perfectly match the registration
- 11 record. Is that right?
- 12 MRS. HUNKER: Objection, form, calls for
- 13 legal conclusion, vague, ambiguous, misstates witness's
- 14 testimony.
- 15 A. Again, I would say generally I'd have to have a
- 16 little bit more information, you know, to know what the
- 17 county's looking at when they're process that ABBM or
- 18 the election official, but this is one of those examples
- 19 that comes up because people change their name. They
- 20 get married, they get divorced, you know, name changes
- 21 happen. That, in and of itself, is not an eligibility
- 22 requirement for voting by mail.
- 23 Q. (By Mrs. Yun) Has this guidance changed since
- 24 this webinar was given?
- 25 A. No.

Page 45 A. That's correct. That phrase is there.

- Q. Okay. So the voter's ID will be checked when the
- 3 voter is returning the ballot in person. Is that right?
 - A. That's correct. It's required by law.
- Q. And that hand-delivered ballot could still be
- 6 rejected if the carrier envelope included an ID number
- that did not match the voter's registration record?
- 8 A. That's correct.
- 9 Q. Okay.

10

- (Exhibit Number 6 was marked.)
- 11 Q. (By Mrs. Yun) I'm marking -- or I'm handing you
- what's been marked as Exhibit 6. Do you recognize this
- 13 document?
- 14 A. It looks like an e-mail that was sent by one of 15 our attorneys to Walker County, Texas.
- Q. And you were blind copied. Is that right?
- 17 A. Yes.
 - Q. And this is an e-mail from December 2021?
- 19 A. It appears to be, yes.
 - O. Let's turn to Page 2, the bottom of Page 2. And
- 21 so this is e-mail from Walker County to Elections
- 22 Internet. Actually, what is the Elections Internet
- 23 e-mail address?
- 24 A. Elections@SOS.texas.gov.
- Q. And what is the purpose of that e-mail address?

1 Okay. And you said that you met with your attorneys. 0 Which attorneys did you meet with? 2 Kathleen Hunker. 3 Α 4 Q And no one else? 5 And he was there --Α THE WITNESS: I don't remember your name. 6 I'm 7 sorry. MR. SZUMANSKI: Ethan. 8 9 BY MS. YUN (resuming): 10 0 And ---- and our two other counsel, Adam Bitter. 11 Α 12 Okay. And no one else was there? Q 13 That's correct. Α 14 And when was that? 0 15 Α It was last Wednesday. 16 And there was only one session? Q 17 Uh-huh, yes. Α Did you review any documents in the course of your 18 Q preparation? 19 20 Α No. 21 Did you bring any documents with you? 22 I bought the Texas Election Code because I take Α No. 23 that everywhere with me. 24 Okay. Great. So since we last spoke in July 2022, 25 has your role in the Texas secretary of state's office changed?

1 Α It has. 0 And what is your current title? 3 My current title is acting director of elections. Α 4 And could you describe what that role currently Q 5 entails? Α So for the acting director of elections, I oversee the 6 entire elections division. 7 And so, previously, you were the legal director; 8 Q 9 correct? 10 Α That's correct. 11 And does someone else have that job now? Q 12 No. Α So do you have to do both of those jobs? 13 Q 14 Α To the best of my knowledge, yes --15 Q Okay. 16 -- for the time being. Α 17 Okay. Is someone going to be filling your old Q position -- or your previous position? 18 I'm not aware of any other changes that our current 19 Α 2.0 secretary is looking to make at this time. You know, this is an acting position, so it's -- it's temporary. 21 2.2 Okay. And what -- so who do you report to in your new Q 23 role?

Secretary of State, Joe Esparza, and then beyond that, the

1 secretary of state's office? 2 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. 3 BY THE WITNESS (resuming): So there are two different types of data groups that Α 4 5 -- that are transferred to us: Those where the individual indicates they want to update their registration. That comes to 6 us and is passed through to the counties so that they can update a registration; and then in addition to that, we get some other 8 data from DPS on a daily basis, other types of updates are sent 10 our way, and as far as, like, the details on what those updates -- all the data that's contained in them, that information I 11 don't have. That would be a question for Kristi Hart.

Q Got it. Does your office have any plans -- so it is my understanding, and correct me if I'm wrong, that the TEAM layout does not include -- has only one field for state ID number, so it cannot hold multiple ID numbers for a single voter. Does your office have any plans to update that layout so that a voter registration record can hold multiple ID numbers?

A I don't believe so.

Q Okay. And if any new state ID number is not reflected in TEAM, that would not be transferred -- that number -- new number would not be transferred to the counties; is that right?

MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.

- Q Okay. Could you tell me what this document is?
- A This appears to be an E-mail that was sent to our office regarding a ballot-by-mail application issue and it also contains a response from our managing attorney.
- Q Could you -- so let's go to the first paragraph of Ms. Catherine Martin's E-mail, which is towards the bottom of the first page. Could you describe the problem that Ms. Martin's daughter appears to have experienced during the general election in 2022?
- A It appears as though Ms. Martin's daughter was applying for a ballot by mail. On the application form, she listed her driver's license number but did not list her Social Security number, and the county -- Comal County indicated that they did not have her driver's license number, so her application for ballot by mail would be rejected on the grounds it was missing that -- that number -- the personal identification number.
- Q And it appears that Ms. Martin described the instruction on the ABBM application -- or the ABBM as very misleading. Do you see that?
 - A I see that.
- Q Do you agree that it's misleading?
- MS. HUNKER: Objection to form.

Page 26

- 2 A I think that the instruction on the form state what -- 3 states what the law requires that it state.
 - Q So do you agree that it's misleading or do you not agree that it's misleading?
- A I think that it states what the law requires. That's 7 -- that's all I can put on the form.
- Q Did your office consider any changes to these instructions during the general election period?
- 10 A No, because there have been no subsequent legislative 11 sessions that would have given us the ability to change the 12 language.
- Q Understood. Thank you. And for the carrier envelope
 -- well, I'll mark this and make sure it's in English. Exhibit Number 5 is being handed over here. Can you tell me what this document is?
 - A This appears to be a printed copy of the text of a ballot-by-mail envelope, what we refer to as the carrier envelope.
- Q And what version is this as far as you can tell from the first page?
- 22 A This is the one that was revised and issued in July 23 2022.
- Q So what changes were made during that iteration of this form?

Page 35

A During the primary election, yes. You know, as we were working with counties for implementation of kind of these components, you know, there was a lot of discussion on -- on, again, best practices or recommendations, and so there were a number of counties that reached out to us with this idea or having us take a look at some of their sample forms. I don't recall a lot of questions like that leading up to the November election. At that point, if counties found something that worked for them or worked for neighboring counties, oftentimes they made those connections on their own.

11 | Q Okay.

10

12

13

14

15

17

- A Texas is very decentralized. You know, elections are run by the counties, not the state, so...
- Q And there is an official form from your office that -I'm not sure if you would describe it as an insert, but a piece of paper that is included with mail ballot -- with the mail -with the carrier envelope; is that right?
- 18 A Yes. We call it the carrier insert.
- 19 Q Oh, okay.
- 20 A Yes.
- 21 Q So you do call it an insert.
- 22 A It -- it has a much longer title, but --
- 23 Q Right.
- 24 A -- we really refer to it as the carrier insert.
 - Q Yes. I don't want to mischaracterize, but thank you.

- 1 Okay. I will mark that. One second. I'm handing you what's
- been marked as Exhibit 7. And is this the carrier insert that
- 3 you were referring to just now?
- Yes, this appears to be the carrier insert. 4 Α
- 5 Okay. So it's Form Number 6-17; is that right? 0
- That's correct. 6 Α
- 7 And so based on the date that's up at the top, is this 0 the most up-to-date version of this document? 8
- 9 Α The date on here indicates this was issued in January 10 of 2022. I can't recall if we did an updated one for any reason 11 in June -- or July when we updated the carrier envelope.
- 12 Q Okay. So you do not recall if there was -- if there is another version of this. 13
- 14 Α I just can't remember at this time.
- 15 0 Okay.
- 16 Yeah. If we had updated it, it would have been Α 17 updated around the same time the carrier envelope was updated, but I don't remember if this necessitated any changes. 18
- Okay. Do you mind checking during our break whether 19 0 there is another version of this? 20
- 21 Α Sure.
- 2.2 And then we can come back to it. Q
- 23 Α Sure.
- 24 So this form, if you look at Number 1 under the first 0 25 paragraph, Required Information Under Section 86.002 of the

1 election code, this form -- that paragraph does not or anywhere else does not suggest that the voter must -- or sorry. Scratch all of that. So this form does not suggest to voters that they 3 may or it is recommended that they put down both their driver's 5 license number and the last four digits of their Social; 6 correct? 7 That's correct. Α Does the statute prescribe what must be in the carrier 8 0 insert? 10 Α It does. Everything that's on this form is required 11 by law. 12 And therefore -- well, so I'm going to ask why does it Q -- why does the form not suggest the recommendation? 13 14 Α The form does not contain that recommendation because 15 the -- the -- all of the items contained on this document are 16 items that are required by statute, and the specific provision 17 dealing with personal identification numbers is very clear on what it's -- on what it's asking the voter for, and so we can't 18 modify or waive or change the requirements of law with respect 19 20 to those instructions. Would your office be allowed to, say, put a red box 21 around Paragraph Number 1 under the election code? 22 23 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.

I think we can put a box on the form.

BY THE WITNESS (resuming):

Sure.

Α

Page 38

Q Okay. But your testimony is that you cannot change any of the text.

A The language outlines the legal requirements that are prescribed by law, and we can't modify those legal requirements.

Q Is this form going to -- well, we can circle back to it if there's another more up-to-date form, but whatever the up-to-date form that was being used during the November election, is that form going -- do you have any plans to change that form?

A Any changes to any out of our balloting materials are going to be contingent on the legislative session.

- Q And absent any legislative changes, you do not have any plans to update it.
 - A At this time, no.
- Q And I think we can do another small section before we take a break, if that's okay with you.
 - A Of course.

- 18 Q Okay. I'm going to hand you what's been marked as 19 Exhibit 8.
 - A (Reviewing.) Okay.
 - Q What is this document?
 - A This appears to be some E-mail correspondence between myself and two individuals in the Denton County Elections Office regarding potential changes to the carrier envelope, and then it looks like they inquired about some other forms as well.

Page 39

Q So Ms. Brandy Grimes is from Denton County; is that right?

A That's correct.

Q And do you recall this exchange?

A I do.

Q And I would like to direct your attention to the third E-mail from the top, starting at the bottom of Page 1. So what was Ms. Grimes' proposal for the ABBM rejection notice in that E-mail -- in that third E-mail?

A She was -- so we -- initially, we're talking about the carrier envelope and then we pivoted to a different form, the rejection notice, and we were at that time looking at modifying the rejection notice so that we could identify -- give the voter more details about what the rejection was for with respect to the ID number, and so we were looking at different design options there and she was writing back -- I think giving her suggestion on the form -- on the potential change.

Q And she says -- and I'm reading from the bottom of Page 1: We both know that they can't remember how they filled out the defective application once it's sent. Do you agree with that comment?

A Do I agree with -- that a voter may not remember what's on a defective application form?

Q Once it's been sent.

A I think that's possible.

1 So would you agree that not remembering how -- or which number they put down once the ABBM has been sent would make cure difficult? 3 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. 4 5 BY THE WITNESS (resuming): It depends on the reason for rejection, it depends on, 6 7 you know, where were we are in the process. I -- I think there's a lot of variables there that would impact whether it's 8 difficult to remedy the situation. 10 Okay. So if the -- if the situation is that they put one number down that is not associated with their voter 11 12 registration record, not remembering which number and hearing back from the county that, Your number is not associated with 13 14 the record, but we don't remember which one you put down, that would make the cure difficult; would it not? 15 16 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. 17 BY THE WITNESS (resuming): I -- again, I think it's possible. It also depends on 18 19 the mechanism used for remedying the cure. If they're logging 20 into the ballot-by-mail tracker to initiate the cure, then it doesn't matter what number they put down originally because 21 they're able to validate both of their identification numbers 22 23 with the tracker, so I think in that sense it's not very hard. 24 If they're filling out a new application form, it just depends on what information was provided to them by the county and whether or not the voter opted to fill in both boxes.

Q And so as of -- at this time and as of now, these -- the rejection form does not provide any information on which number was originally sent in; correct?

 - A That's correct.
 - Q And what happened to this proposal from Ms. Grimes?
- A A lot of counties objected to the proposal. They didn't like it. They said that they believed it was going to be more confusing to voters, that they might misread the form, and so we didn't move forward with it at that time.
- Q Do you know if any counties have any practice to let the voter know which number was associated with -- is associated with their registration record?
- A I have heard that some counties will highlight the missing information on a new -- if we're talking about an application for ballot-by-mail form, they would highlight the missing information on the new form to give the voter the chance to fill in the required boxes or they would put in some additional information indicating what it is they needed.
- Q So that's a county-by-county practice.
 - A Correct.
 - Q So is the reason for not adopting this revision of processed with that updated information. So regardless of what they pick at the top, if they provide a new number in Box 9, that'll get updated in the system.

Q Okay. But they must check one -- right? -- because it says it must be completed before proceeding.

A It says the questions must be completed before proceeding, but I -- I don't think that you would -- if the voter doesn't select that but -- but they otherwise complete the form with all of the substantive information, it going to be processed.

Q Okay. And I'm marking another exhibit, 12. What is this document?

A This appears to be an E-mail that was sent to our office via VoteTexas.gov, which is an SOS website, and a response providing information on how to update -- or -- or check information related to a person's ballot -- voted ballot.

Q So it says in the second paragraph of the top E-mail that you must deliver the corrected -- the completed corrective action form in person to the early-voting clerk's office by the end of business today, Monday, November 14th, 2022; correct?

A Uh-huh.

- Q And it was sent at 5:54 p.m. on November 14th.
- 23 A That's correct.
 - Q So would you agree that for some voters would not be able to cure in time and have their ballots counted due to when

Page 57

1 they are notified of their ballot defect and/or when they find out how to cure their ID requirement defect? 3 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. BY THE WITNESS (resuming): 4 5 Could you repeat the question? Sure. Would you agree that for some voters that would 6 0 7 not -- whose mail ballot has been rejected because of the ID requirements under SB1 would not be able to cure in time due to 8 the timing of when they're notified or when they find out how to 10 cure their ballot? 11 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. 12 BY THE WITNESS (resuming): 13 Α Sure. 14 So we spoke briefly about changing the forms and 0 15 legislative changes. I know we keep coming back to it. So you said that there were things that you could do that the law does 16 17 allow your office to do without any substantive law changes. is it your testimony that your office cannot change the form to 18 reflect the guidance that they are allowed to or recommended to 19 20 put both ID numbers down in any of the forms that your office 21 promulgates? 22 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form; compound and calls 23 for a legal conclusion. 24 BY THE WITNESS (resuming):

I think that our office has to be very careful about not doing anything that would be consider waiving, modifying or suspending state law, and so when it comes to instructions to a voter, we have to follow the statute to the T. So we have to be very careful about that.

Q So informal recommendations given by your office when someone E-mails them can say, You are allowed to put both numbers down; is that right?

10

12

13

14

15

16

17

18 19 20 21

22

23

Q But that same guidance cannot be reflected in any of the forms; is that correct?

A I think with our current forms, we're tracking the statute as much as we can with -- with actual text relating to the statute because that's what we have to do, but because the instructions to the early-voting clerk or the ballot board are different than what the instructions are to the voter, I think that we can tell voters, You can add both numbers, since we're talking about ID requirements, because the ballot board instructions on what they do with that information is different.

Q So just to bring it all together, absent any substantive legal changes, the forms from your office are not going to in the future reflect the guidance that is recommended or permissible to put both numbers down. Is that fair?

MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.

BY THE WITNESS (resuming):

A I would say at this point we're always going to be

Page 59

1 careful in making sure that the actual forms are based on the law themselves, but we may always provide some supplemental instructions as the, you know, instructions are different, you 3 4 know, for the ballot board and the early-voting clerk so when 5 we're communicating with voters about the forms -- and I think more specifically when the counties are communicating with 6 7 voters about those forms, they may provide some context, additional information. 8 But it is not in your office's plan to change any 9 10 forms that your office officially authorizes to reflect that 11 quidance; is that right? 12 Α At this time --13 MS. HUNKER: Objection to form; asked and 14 answered. 15 BY THE WITNESS (resuming): 16 Α At this time, no. 17 Are you aware of any mail-voting form-related changes being discussed by the legislature at this time -- being 18 considered by the legislature? 19 2.0 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form. BY THE WITNESS (resuming): 21 2.2 Α There -- I believe there are a couple of those that 23 could potentially modify some of the mail balloting --24 ballot-by-mail materials. 25 Okay. Could you tell me about those? Q

1 to the best of your knowledge, it was completed in -- for the

2 | election cycle ending in 2022, which was -- the data was due in

3 | March of 2023; is that right?

4 MS. HUNKER: Objection, form.

5 BY THE WITNESS (resuming):

A I -- I believe we did submit the data for the state.

Q Okay. And were you already the acting director or were you not? If you remember.

A I have no idea.

10 Q Okay. But you were not personally involved in the 11 certification.

12 A No, ma'am.

MS. YUN: Okay. I believe we are very close to 14 being done. I think I'm just going to look over my notes.

15 Actually, this is a good time to take a break, and then I may 16 have a few more questions after the break or I may not, but I

17 believe other folks on Zoom probably do have questions.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

19 MS. YUN: So we'll take a 10-minute break.

20 (A recess was taken from 11:18 a.m. to 21 | 11:34 a.m.)

22 BY MS. YUN (resuming):

Q Okay, Ms. Adkins. So before we -- maybe two breaks ago, I asked you whether the carrier insert form that I showed you that was State 31647, whether that was the most up-to-date version of the form, and you -- did you have a chance to check whether it was?

A I did check, and it does appear as that -- that that is the most recent version.

MS. YUN: Okay. Great. Thank you. I have no further questions, and I will pass the witness. And I believe some folks on the Zoom call would like to ask questions.

MS. HUNKER: Are there any other attorneys from the plaintiffs who would like to ask questions of the witness?

MS. PERALES: (Inaudible.)

MS. HUNKER: Nina, you are muted.

MS. PERALES: Thank you. I was trying to figure out how to put in the chat that I think you had muted me, and for once at least, it wasn't my fault. I only wanted to say that this is Ms. Nina Perales or the LUPE plaintiffs, and I have no questions for the witness.

- A. I don't know.
- Q. And did you have any confusion or questions when you filled out the mail in ballots? And when I say you, I mean you or your wife.
 - A. No, we didn't have any problems.
 - Q. Okay. And did you -- you promptly mail in those mail in ballots after you filled them out?
- 9 A. Yes.
- Q. About how long would that time interval be between when you filled them out and when you mailed them in October of 2022?
- 13 A. Same day or the next day.
- Q. Okay. And when you prepared your mail in ballot, did you provide some identification information on the ballot and/or the envelope?
- $17 \mid A.$ Yes, we did.
- Q. And what information did you personally provide related to your mail in ballot in October 2022?
- A. The voter ID number that you get with your registration card, the driver's license number, and the last four numbers of my social security card.
- Q. Okay. And how long, approximately, had you had that driver's license?
 - A. For the last -- we moved here in '93, '94. So almost going on 30 years. 29 years.

Q. Had you ever had any other Texas driver's licenses other than the one that you were using and provided on your ballot or envelope in October 2022?

- A. No, that's the only license that I've ever had.
- Q. Prior to casting your mail in ballot, did you contact, either directly or online, anybody connected with the election process in Travis County?
 - A. No, I did not.
- Q. When you cast your ballot, at least the first time, did you feel that you understood the requirements and had complied with them?
- 13 | A. Yes.

- Q. All right. What's the next thing that you heard after you and your wife mailed in your ballots relating to those ballots?
- A. I'm not sure how long it was, maybe two weeks later I received a notice in the mail that my ballot was rejected because the driver's license number did not match what they had on file and what my actual license number is did not match. So I requested a second ballot.
- Q. When you received that notice, did you have or try to have any conversations with anyone at Travis County related to the election process?

A. No, because I thought at my age and everything, it would be very simple for me to write maybe a three instead of an eight or a five. So I thought I probably did something wrong, especially kind of stressed out and stuff. So I figured I must have wrote the wrong number, so I'll just try again.

- Q. Okay. And how did you request an additional ballot?
- 9 A. I'm not sure if I went online again or if I 10 called. I can't remember.
 - Q. This mail notice related to the mail in ballot that you received in October or November of 2022, did that relate only to your ballot, or did your wife also receive a notice related to her ballot?
 - A. Only myself. My wife had no problems at all.
 - Q. And after you made a request for a second -strike that. When you received a notice relating to your initial mail in ballot, did it provide any information to you as to how to cure any problem that might have existed?
 - A. Not that I'm aware of. Just a very simple -just a checkmark that something didn't match, you know, like this didn't match that, so -- according to their records. So that was pretty simple.
 - Q. Okay. I understand it provided the information

- Q. Approximately when was that?
- A. Two months ago. Maybe two months ago, three, I don't know.
- Q. And what other conversation did you have with Dana at that time?
- A. I just told her I was not aware that there had been problems. I knew that I had voted twice, but I didn't know that, you know, there was other problems.
- Q. Okay. All right. You mentioned that you learned something about whether the initial rejection was because of an error in your writing down one of your numbers, or an error in the state database that contained those numbers; is that correct?
 - A. That's correct.
 - Q. When did you learn of that problem?
 - A. About three or four days ago.
 - Q. Okay. And what did you learn at that time?
- A. I called the voter's office, and the lady said that their records show that my driver's license number ends in a five, and my actual driver's license number ends in a four.
 - Q. Did you have any conversation with the election

- Q. (By Mr. Bryant) Thank you. Mr. Benavides, what was your wife's name?
 - A. Christine Ann, A-N-N, Benavides.
 - O. And what was the date of her death?
- 8 A. October 16th, 2022.
- 9 Q. If I understood your testimony earlier, when 10 you had a conversation with someone with the Travis
- 11 | County election authorities, they verified to you that
- 12 the social -- your social security numbers were
- 13 correctly recorded in those records, and they -- the
- 14 numbers you put on your ballots, your mail in ballots in
- 15 | 2022 match the social security numbers that Travis
- 16 | County had for you.
- 17 | A. Yes.
- Q. Did anybody with the Travis County election authorities tell you whether your 2022 general election
- 20 | ballot had been counted or not?
- 21 A. Yes. It had -- they told me it was not
- 22 | counted, because by the time they received it, which was
- 23 October the 28th, it was too late, they were only taking
- 24 | in person delivery.

25

Q. Is it correct then that your second mail in ballot was not counted only because it arrived past the date when mail in ballots received by mail could be counted?

A. That's the way I understood it.

4

- Q. Okay. And so is it your understanding that your mail in ballot for the November 2022 general election was not rejected or not counted because of the difference between the driver's license number on your driver's license and the driver's license number in the election records?
- A. The lady at the voter's office said she's going to mail me a form to make sure that any future elections, the correct number -- the number is correct.

 But no -- I didn't know that my ballot had not been counted, so I didn't know.
- Q. Okay. Today you have been told by the attorney for the United States that your ballot has not been counted, or wasn't counted; is that right?
- MS. WARMS: Objection, privilege. Don't answer.
- Q. (By Mr. Bryant) Is -- you referred to her earlier as Dana, who's with us here today. Is she your attorney?
- THE WITNESS: Are you?
- MS. PAIKOWSKY: No.

- Q. Do you have any plans to vote either by mail in ballot or in person in future elections?
- MS. WARMS: Objection, form. You can

- 5 A. I don't know. It all depends how I -- my
- 6 health. I'm almost 76 years old, so.
- 7 Q. (By Mr. Bryant) In connection with the
- 8 | November 2022 general election -- you may have testified
- 9 to this, I just don't remember the answer. What is
- 10 the -- what's your best recollection of the date when
- 11 | you mailed the second mail in ballot?
- 12 A. Must have been like the middle of October
- 13 | sometime, but I don't remember the exact date.
- 14 Q. Okay. How did you mail it?
- 15 A. Just the local neighborhood mailbox. We have
- 16 one of those big, you know, cluster boxes, and --
- 17 Q. You put it in that neighborhood mailbox?
- 18 | A. Yes.
- 19 Q. So as far as you know, was it properly

- 21 A. Yes.

25

- 22 Q. And can you say that you mailed that second

- 24 A. I don't remember.
 - Q. Is it possible that you mailed it a little bit

1 Α No. 2 Have you reviewed any documents in this case such as the filing -- such as the plaintiffs' second-amended complaints? 3 4 Α No. 5 Have you reviewed Senate Bill 1 prior to this deposition? 6 7 Α No. All right. Now, Ms. Maloney, just kind of some 8 0 background information about you. We're going to switch to that 10 What is your current home address? My current home address is 10517 Grand Oak Circle, 11 Α 12 Austin, Texas 78750. 13 What county is that in? 0 14 Α Travis. How long have you lived there? 15 0 16 Oh, three years. Α 17 Three years, you said? Q 18 Α Yes. 19 Does anybody else live there with you? 0 20 Yes. Α 21 Who is that? 0 22 Marge (ph) Waley. Α How do you spell that? 23 Q 24 W-a-1-e-y. Α 25 And what is your relation to them? Q

Bernadette Maloney April 20, 2023

1 Α A friend. 2 Friend. How long has -- it's -- it's Wally; right? 3 Is that how you say it? 4 Waley. Α 5 Waley. How long has Waley lived there with you? Well, she's lived there longer than me. She's lived 6 Α 7 there, I would say, close to 20 years. Does Waley own the --8 0 9 Α Yes. 10 -- residence there? 0 11 Α Yes. 12 Miss -- Ms. Maloney, when were you born? Q 13 September 22nd, 1957. Α 14 I know they usually tell you don't ever ask a --0 15 someone's age, but fortunately in depositions, I'm able to do 16 that, so thank you. Now, where were you born, Ms. Maloney? 17 Brooklyn, New York. Α So how long did you live in Brooklyn, New York? 18 Q 19 Α Four years. 20 After living in Brooklyn, New York, where did you 21 travel to after that? 22 Queens, New York. Α 23 And after that? Q 24 Mullaghbawn (ph), County Cavan, Ireland. Α

Oh, wow. How long did you live in Ireland?

Bernadette Maloney April 20, 2023

1 0 Pennsylvania? Uh-huh. Α 3 How long were you in Pennsylvania? 0 4 Α Six years. 5 Is there any particular reason why you went to Pennsylvania? 6 7 Well, to work, to go to school. Α Okay. After Pennsylvania, where did you move to after 8 0 9 that? 10 Α Austin, Texas. 11 Austin, Texas. Have you lived in Austin, Texas, ever 0 12 since? 13 Α Yes. 14 So, Ms. Maloney, do you have a Texas driver's license 0 15 by chance? 16 Α I do. 17 How long have you had that? Q Since -- I got my Texas driver's license in 1985. 18 Α 19 Do you also have a Texas identification card? 0 20 Α No. 21 Is there any particular reason why you don't? Q 22 Because I have a driver's license. Α 23 Understandable. Ms. Maloney, are you registered to 0 24 vote in Texas? 25 Α Yes, I am.

1 0 I'm assuming you're registered to vote in Travis County. 3 Α Yes. How long have you been registered to vote there? 4 Q 5 Since 1985. Α Are you familiar with where your polling location 6 7 typically is? MR. CAMPBELL-HARRIS: Objection to form. 8 9 Dayton Campbell-Harris. 10 BY MR. SZUMANKSI (resuming): 11 Ms. Maloney, you can answer. 0 12 I -- I really can't recall. Okay. Is there a particular reason? 13 0 14 Α Why I can't recall it? Because it's -- it's -- it's 15 been a while since I -- I -- usually when I'm -- usually I do early voting, and I would go from work, so whatever early-voting 16 17 place was open, I would go. Understood. Thank you, Ms. Maloney. Ms. Maloney --18 0 and since you have a Texas driver's license, just kind of 19 20 following up on that, I'm assuming you're currently able to 21 drive. 22 Α Yes. 23 Are you currently employed? Q 24 Α Yes. 25 Where do you work? Q

Bernadette Maloney April 20, 2023

1 Α I work for Carnegie. It's a continuing-education company. 3 How long have you worked there? 0 Two years. 4 Α 5 What got you into the continuing-education field? Q I've been a nurse 45 years, and they do continuing 6 7 education for doctors and for nurses, social workers, pharmacists -- you know, a lot of healthcare workers. 8 9 Ms. Maloney, you mentioned that you're a nurse for 45 0 10 years, so what type of education and training did you have past high school? 11 12 Α I have an associate's degree in nursing from Queensboro Community College, I have a bachelor's of nursing 13 14 from Gwynedd-Mercy College and I have a master's in nursing from the University of Texas at Austin. 15 16 And, Ms. Maloney, moving kind of a little bit away 17 from education and employment and that kind of thing, I want to -- I want to little -- learn a little bit more -- excuse me --18 about your family. Do you have any family? 19 20 I do. My mother is alive and is going to be 89 years 21 old next month. 2.2 Well, congratulations to your mother. Q 23 Yeah. Α

Do you take care of any of your family members?

My mom.

1 And where does your mom live now? 0 Α She lives in Bayside, Queens. She's still in Oueens, New York? 3 0 Yes. 4 Α How often do you take care of your mom? 5 Q Well, I share it with my sister, so it depends on 6 7 who's most available. Usually it falls on me. So every once in a while, my sister gives me a break. 8 So because, as you said, it all falls on you, can you 9 10 give me kind of a frequency of how many days out of the week or 11 how many weeks out of a month you typically take care of your 12 mom? I would say it -- it falls on me for probably two to 13 Α 14 three months at a time and then I get a break, get to go back to 15 Austin, and then my -- my sister has to leave my mom; I come back to New York. 16 17 And when you come back to Austin for those breaks, how Q long does that break usually last? 18 Sometimes I've been -- been there for a month, six 19 Α 20 weeks; sometimes I've been there for two weeks. It all depends. 21 So would it be fair to say that you spend most of your 0 time in New York taking care of your mom? 22 23 MR. CAMPBELL-HARRIS: Objection to form.

I would say that I would spend probably -- if I looked

Α

1 back since COVID has happened, I would say anywhere from five to 2 six months total.

- Q And so then that means your sister takes care of your mom during the other five or six months that --
 - A Right, right, we -- yeah.
- O Understood.
- A Yes, yeah.
- 8 O So --

- 9 A We try to make it as fair as possible.
- 10 Q Understood. Understood. Ms. Maloney, are you a part of any nonprofit organizations?
- 12 | A No.
- Q Have you done any type of events or attended any type of events for nonprofit organizations?
- A No. I really -- I haven't been attending very many events at all since COVID, so...
- Q Before COVID, did you attend any events with nonprofit organizations in Texas?
- 19 A A few.
- 20 Q What type of events were those?
- A I've done, like, walks for different nonprofits, you know, to support them. I did one event for the Texas League of Women Voters for their 100th anniversary.
- Q Okay. So in addition to the Texas League of Women Voters nonprofit organization, would you mind telling me the

BY MR. SZUMANSKI (resuming):

2 All right, Ms. Maloney. We just got back from break
3 and now we're back on the record. I just kind of wanted to do
4 some follow-up questions. We've made a lot of progress, so 5 hopefully we'll be done here soon and you can go back to your 6 daily life. So just a few follow-up questions, though. I want 7 to get more of an understanding about kind of some of the 8 problems you were having with the ballot tracker. So you said
9 that the second time you went on the ballot tracker -- and it 10 said that you were not registered to vote; right?

11 A Right.

1

- Q Okay. At any point in time did you receive a notice of defect of your mail-in ballot --
- 14 A Yes.
- 15 Q -- for the 2022 general election? Understood. When 16 did you receive that?
- 17 | A Late October.
- Q And did it explain what the defect was in your mail-in ballot?
- 20 | A I can't remember.
- 21 Q Do you remember if it was because it was late?
- 22 A No.

- Q Do you remember if it was because of the ID numbers you put on there?
 - A Can you explain which ID numbers you're talking about?

Q Sure. So you understand that when you submit a mail-in ballot and carrier envelope, you have to put one of your ID numbers on the carrier envelope; right?

8

- Q Did you put -- what number did you put? You don't have to tell me the numbers. Just -- did you put your Social Security number or your driver's license number?
- A I -- I did not.
 - Q Did not put which one?
- 10 A Either.
- 11 Q Either. What did -- what number did you put down?
- 12 A I put my voter's registration number.
- Q Understood. Why did you put your voter's registration number instead of your ID number or partial -- partial Social Security number?
 - A I didn't see on the envelope where it required the driver's license number or the Social Security number.
- Q So I'm assuming because you didn't see it, you did not put it the first time you submitted your mail-in ballot.
 - A Correct.
- Q Okay. After you had learned that there was a problem with your mail-in ballot the first time -- I believe you said in October -- did you see it after that or around that time?
 - A Did I see what?
 - Q So did you -- after you learned that there was a 1 defect with your mail-in ballot, did you then become aware at that time that you had to put an ID number or partial Social 3 Security number on the carrier envelope? 4 MR. CAMPBELL-HARRIS: Object to form. 5 BY MR. SZUMANSKI (resuming): You may answer, Ms. Maloney. 6 0 7 Yes. Α So I'm assuming after you learned of this defect, you 8 0 9 submitted a new -- a second mail-in ballot. 10 Α No. 11 No. Any particular reason why? 0 12 Because I entered the missing information on the ballot tracker. 13 14 0 And by missing information, you mean one of those ID 15 numbers; correct? 16 Α Correct. 17 And then after that, I'm assuming, is when you checked Q it again the second time and then learned that it said you were 18 -- it said that you were not registered to vote; right? Is that 19 the timeframe of events? 20 21 Α Yes. 2.2 So after you learned that the ballot tracker had said 23 you were not registered to vote, you then went to check your 24 voter-registration status in Texas; correct?

Yes.

Bernadette Maloney April 20, 2023 Page 45

1 And what did you learn when you checked back? 0

- That I was registered to vote.
- 3 And after you learned that you were registered to 0 4 vote, about how long after that did you start seeking help to 5 fix your mail-in ballot?
- Α I can't remember --6
- 7 Understood. 0
- -- exactly. 8 Α
- 9 Understood. Do you know if it was weeks or days? 0
- 10 Α Days.
- 11 Do you know if it was more than a week or less than a 0 12 week?
- Less than a week. 13 Α
- 14 When you received that notice of defect in October, do 0 15 you -- did it come with a voter-registration application?
- I don't recall. 16 Α
- 17 After learning that the ballot tracker had said you were not registered to vote, did you try to submit new 18 voter-registration --
- 20 Α No.

- 21 -- information? So you didn't update -- or added your 22 voter registration at all?
- No, I -- I didn't need to. 23 Α
- 24 And why do you think you didn't need to? 0
- 25 Α Because, as I said earlier, I went to the voter-registration site and saw that I was registered to vote.

- Q Understood, understood. So, Ms. Maloney, have you become -- would you say that you are more aware of the voting process because of your experience in the 2022 general election and primary election?
- 6 MR. CAMPBELL-HARRIS: Objection to form.
- 7 BY THE WITNESS (resuming):

- A Could you rephrase that question, please?
- 9 Q Sure. So now that you've been through the process of 10 voting by mail under SB1, since the Senate Bill 1 was passed, 11 would you agree with me that you have more knowledge about how
- 12 to vote by mail in future elections in Texas?
- 13 MR. CAMPBELL-HARRIS: Objection to form.
- 14 BY THE WITNESS (resuming):
- 15 A I don't know how to answer that question.
- Q Okay. Why do you not -- well, I want to make sure I'm helping you to -- to make sure we're both on the same page. So
- 18 | what can I do to help you understand this question -- or is
- 19 there a particular reason why you don't understand how to answer
- 20 | this question?
- 21 A It doesn't make sense to me, the question.
- Q So maybe I can rephrase it a little bit. We'll go bit
- 23 by bit maybe a little bit more. Maybe that will --
- 24 A Okay.

Q -- help you out. So in the 2022 general election, you

DECLARATION OF BERNADETTE MALONEY

My name is Bernadette Maloney. I am over the age of 18 and capable of making this declaration. The facts stated herein are within my personal knowledge:

- 1. I am a resident of Austin, Texas, where I am an eligible voter.
- 2. I am registered to vote in Travis County, where Austin is located.
- 3. I turned 65 on September 22, 2022.
- 4. I first registered to vote in Texas in 1985. Since registering, I have voted for both Republican and Democratic candidates.
- 5. I have voted in nearly every Texas election for which I was eligible.
- 6. I have voted by mail consistently since 2020. I vote by mail because I am often outside my county, and because I am 65.
- 7. In October 2022, I requested a mail-in ballot sent to New York State, where I was taking care of my 89-year-old mother. I routinely look after my mother in New York for approximately five to six months out of the year.
- 8. When I received my mail-in ballot, I filled out all the provisions that I saw. I did not see that the carrier envelope required me to put my driver's license number or Social Security number under the flap. I inadvertently did not include that information as a result.
- 9. I received a notice from the Travis County Clerk on or about October 28, 2022 informing me that I left the required identification number off the ballot envelope.
 The notice is attached to this declaration as Exhibit A.

- 10. I reached out to my friend Mary Cullinane, who is a member of the League of Women Voters of Texas, and I asked her for advice about what to do when my ballot was rejected. Mary told me that I could correct the problem with my ballot online through the State's mail-in ballot tracker.
- 11. On or about October 29, 2023, I input my driver's license number into the mail-in ballot tracker.
- 12. About a week later, I used the mail-in ballot tracker to try to check the status of my ballot and the tracker reported that I was not registered to vote. As a result, I was unable to check the status of my ballot.
- 13. I confirmed through the Texas Secretary of State's website, ¹ that I was registered to vote in Travis County. I then called the Secretary of State's Office to see whether I could receive an update on my mail-in ballot's status. A Secretary of State representative told me that their office could not help me and that I had to contact Travis County.
- 14. When I called the Travis County office, I was informed that my ballot could not be counted because I had called two days after the deadline.
- 15. My experience with the absentee voting system in Texas left me feeling like I cannot successfully vote by mail in the future. The mail-in ballot tracker did not cure the problem with my ballot or correctly identify me as a registered voter. I worry whether my mail-in ballot will count in future elections. Voting in-person is not an option for me while I care for my mother out-of-state.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

Executed on May 24, 2023.

DECLARATION OF YI LU ZHAO

My name is Yi Lu Zhao. I am over the age of 18 and capable of making this declaration. The facts stated herein are within my personal knowledge.

- I am a resident of Travis County, Texas and eligible to vote in Travis County, Texas.
- 2. I am 93 years old and have regularly voted since I was 62 years old.
- 3. I immigrated to the United States in January 1991.
- 4. In 1996 I became a citizen and that same year I registered to vote in Texas.
- 5. I am hard of hearing, and I have limited English skills.
- 6. I have regularly voted by mail for the last two decades.
- 7. I do not have a Texas Driver's License. I have a Texas ID and a voter registration card.

- 8. In early January 2022 I applied by mail for a vote by mail ballot for the March 2022 primary. I filled in the last four digits of my social security number on the application form. I never had to do that before.
- 9. For the first time in my life, I received rejection notices in connection with voting by mail.
- 10. The rejection of my application to vote in the March 2022 primary by mail was deeply upsetting. At my age it is not always easy to remember which identification numbers I used when I registered to vote over two decades ago.
- 11. I submitted my application three times, received three rejections, and was not permitted to vote by mail for the March 2022 primary election.
- 12. I received the first rejection on February 17, 2022, one day before the end of the application deadline on February 18, 2022, and over a month from my application. The instructions stated I needed to update my voter registration record with "both the Driver's License or Personal Identification Card number and the last 4 digits of your Social Security number."
- 13. On February 17, 2022, the same day that I received my first rejection, I sent another application for a vote by mail ballot, by mail, and this time I included both my Texas Personal Identification Card number and the last four digits of my social security number.
- 14. On February 18, my daughter e-mailed a third application for me to make sure that the county would receive it on time, and mailed a hard copy post-marked on January 18, consistent with the county's instructions that, "the new Application for a Ballot by Mail must be received no later than 2/18/2022. If the new

- application is faxed or emailed on or near the deadline to apply for a Ballot by Mail, the original hardcopy must be received by the Early Voting Clerk within four business days of the receipt of your fax or email and meet all legally required deadlines for receipt of the application."
- 15. I received the second and third rejections after the application deadline, in letters from the Travis County Election Division, post-marked Feb 23, 2022.
- 20. One notice of rejection stated that I "did not indicate a party preference" and that the application "did not contain your Texas Driver's License Number, Texas Personal Identification Card Number, Texas Election Identification Certificate Number or the last 4 digits of your Social Security Number or the number provided did not match your voter registration record." The other notice of rejection stated, "We have received your application after the 2/18/2022 deadline to apply for an absentee ballot in the Primary Election."
- 21. I was very upset that my application was rejected three times. I wanted to vote by mail but could not do so even after successfully voting by mail for two decades.
- 22. I had not gone outside in public since March 2020 due to fears of contracting COVID.
- 23. Because I could no longer vote by mail for the 2022 Primary election the only way I could vote was to vote in person on election day. I went to the polling place with my daughter.
- 24. I had to stand in a long line outside in the cold for fifteen minutes. I found it difficult to stand up and to walk. I was shaking.
- 25. Eventually, a poll worker told me I could wait in the car and do curbside voting.

- 26. I did not vote in person during the 2022 general election. I voted by mail because the second and third applications I mailed were sufficient only for the 2022 general election, but not the 2022 primary election.
- 27. I do not intend to vote in person again because it is too difficult for me at my age.
- 28. I intend to try to vote by absentee ballot again in the future, but SB1 requires that I must reapply each year. I am very worried that my application to vote by mail will be rejected each year. The County took over four weeks from my first application to respond. Their rejection arrived the day before the application deadline. Once I corrected the errors my application was deemed too late, even though I followed their email and hardcopy instructions.
- 29. I had my daughter help me navigate this demoralizing process but there are seniors who also are limited English speaking like me and who live alone and don't have someone to help them. I believe they wouldn't be able to apply to vote by mail or vote at all without a daughter or son who knows this process and can help them.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746 with the translation assistance of my daughter, Ming Fei Yi. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on May 23, 2023.

DECLARATION OF MING FEI YI

My name is Ming Fei Yi. I am over the age of 18 and capable of making this declaration. The facts stated herein are within my personal knowledge.

- I am a resident of Travis County, Texas and eligible to vote in Travis County, Texas.
- 2. I have regularly voted for 30 years since I was 35 years old.
- 3. I am 65 years old.
- 4. I immigrated to the United States in January 1981.
- 5. I became a citizen in 1990.
- 6. I registered to vote in Texas when I became a citizen.
- 7. I speak English and Chinese.
- 8. I have provided voter assistance to my father who is limited English proficient for over 20 years.

- 9. I am also my father's caretaker, and he lives in my house.
- 10. My father is engaged, well-informed, and speaks and reads limited English, but the ballot and election process are complicated and too difficult for him to understand.
- 11. I must explain the voting process to my father in Chinese.
- 12. I assist him at home with completing his absentee ballot. I do not tell him who to vote for.
- 13. The ballot, election information, and mail in ballot application is not translated into Chinese in Travis so I must provide an interpretation of the ballot language.
- 14. This year for the first time I had to provide assistance with the application for the absentee ballot, something they've automatically received for decades.
- 15. Despite three timely applications to vote by mail, my father's application was rejected, and he was not permitted to vote by mail for the first time in over 20 years.
- 16. I am concerned about senior citizens who don't have an engaged daughter or son to help them. I don't know how they could have handled the difficult absentee ballot application process on their own. I believe they would end up not voting.
- 17. My father was determined to vote and had not been outside of the house since January of 2020 to avoid being exposed to COVID. At grave risk, he decided to go in person to the polling place.

- 18. It was very cold outside on election day and there were no seats in the long line at the polling place for elderly voters to sit on. I was worried about my father's health.

19. I am concerned about SB1's criminal liability for offering voter assistance with mail in ballots.

20. Before SB1 I provided assistance for seniors, as well as for my father.

21. Now I only assist my father and I do not offer help to other seniors who need assistance on their absentee application or ballot because of SB1's criminal liability.

22. I am afraid that even my assistance for my father could violate SB1. Who would take care of my father if I go to jail?

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on May 23, 2022.

DECLARATION OF RIAZUDDIN AHMED

My name is Riazuddin Ahmed. I am over the age of 18 and capable of making this declaration. The facts stated herein are within my personal knowledge.

- I am a resident of Fort Bend County, Texas and eligible to vote in Fort Bend County, Texas.
- 2. I have regularly voted since I was 66 years old.
- 3. I am 85 years old.
- 4. I immigrated to the United States in December of 1972.
- 5. I became a citizen in 1978.
- 6. I registered to vote in Texas when I became a citizen.
- 7. I use a wheelchair.
- I began voting by mail in Fort Bend County when I turned 65.. I am also eligible to vote by mail due to disability because in 2014 I suffered a stroke and must now use a wheel chair.

- I have voted by mail-in ballot for 20 years and have reapplied each year without issue until 2022.
- 10. After 20 years of voting by mail, in 2022, I received the first rejection of my application for voting by mail for the March 2022 primary election.
- 11. I received a phone call from the county elections department saying that my ballot was rejected and that I needed to include my social security number on the outside envelope. That I would have to come to the county elections headquarters and complete the ballot process inside the building and that I would not have access to such help while sitting in my car as I am wheelchair bound.
- 12. I did not feel comfortable putting my social security number on an envelope because of identity theft.
- 13. Fort Bend County told me that I had to come into the central office to cure my vote by mail application.
- 14. Fort Bend County did not offer me a curbside option to cure my application.
- 15. The rejection of my application upset me. I particularly wanted to vote by mail because of my mobility disability, and because of my age and COVID vulnerability.
- 16. I was upset because Fort Bend County failed to offer me a disability-based accommodation to cure my vote by mail application by curbside, but instead required me to come in person to the central office to cure my vote by mail application.
- 17. At that time I had not gone outside in public since March 2020 due to fear of contracting COVID.

- 18. Because I was unable to cure my application for a ballot by mail, I had to vote in person during the March 2022 primary, using curbside voting, because I wanted to make sure I could vote.
- 19. It was a very cold day outside and I was quite uncomfortable because I still had to go outside to get into and out of the car.
- 20. At the polling place, it took 40 minutes for me to have my curbside voting initiated and completed by a poll worker.
- 21. The process was slow as the weather was very cold and the poll worker had to go in and out of the polling place to ask me a variety of questions and get signatures.
- 22. Although I was unable to vote by mail in the March 2022 primary, I did manage to vote by mail in ballot in the November 2022 general election.
- 23. I do not intend to vote in person again.
- 24. I intend to try to vote by absentee ballot in the future but I am afraid that my application to vote by mail will be rejected for again. I am afraid of identity theft when I am required to include my social security number on an envelope that is going out into the public, and I don't want my identity stolen.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746 with the translation assistance of my daughter, Farha Ahmed. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on May 23 2023.

1 also have this other type of League in Texas it serves a

- 2 local community called a League at large and they are
- normally smaller leagues or newer leagues and they need 3
- more assistance and they're considered units, right of 4
- the Texas League. So one of them has their own by laws 5
- and policies and procedures the other one is -- is a 6
- part of the Texas League. Okay. Right.
- And does the National League have its own 8 Ο. 9 bylaws and organizational documents?
- 10 It has its own bylaws. The Texas League has its own bylaws and then local leagues that are 11
- 12 independent have their own bylaws.
- 13 When I ask you about the League today Okav.
- 14 I'm gonna be asking about the Women Voters of Texas --
- 15 Α. Okay.
- 16 -- and anything that's a part of the League of
- Women Voters of Texas, including those, I think you 17
- 18 called them consolidated local leagues?
- 19 Α. Leagues at Large.
- 20 0. The Leagues at Large.
- 21 Α. Yes.
- 22 Ο. They're --
- 23 Yes, but the people who are members of a local
- 24 League that has their own bylaws and has their own
- 25 policies and procedures they are under the Texas League

1 so they have -- they follow our -- they -- they follow

- 2 what we say for anything to do with state level
- 3 | information or state level advocacy. So they take care
- 4 of the needs of the local level. We take care of the
- 5 needs of the Voters at the state level. So we're all
- 6 one organization. They belong to all the same
- 7 organization, but they joined the local level.
- Q. So I think you said that the state League can
- 9 set certain rules that govern the conduct of local
- 10 | leagues; is that right?
- 11 A. Yeah. But not -- not every conduct. Some
- 12 | things are -- are open for the local leagues that have
- 13 | their own policies specific to what they're doing at the
- 14 | local level.
- 15 | Q. And some activities are undertaken by local
- 16 | leagues -- separate from the state League, right?
- 17 A. At the local level.
- 18 Q. Is that a yes?
- 19 A. It was. No, it wasn't a yes. It was at the
- 20 | local level local leagues can take action like if they
- 21 | want to -- when they're doing the voters guide, they're
- 22 | doing the voters guide for local elections, right?
- 23 | O. Sure, I'm not --
- 24 A. When they're going --
- 25 | Q. -- trying --

1 to Interrogatory No. 3?

- A. What -- what page is it on?
- Q. It's on Page 14 of Exhibit 2. If you look about half way down the page you will see a sentence that says, LWVTX has approximately 3,050 members across Texas. Do you see that?
 - A. Yes.

- Q. Does LWVTX mean League of Women Voters of 9 Texas?
- 10 A. Yes.
- Q. And is 3,050 your best estimate of how many members League has?
 - A. It goes up and down right around that number.
- Q. How does one become a member of the League?
 - A. Most members can join -- folks, anybody who is 16 and over can join the League of women voters and generally they join at the local level and -- but if there's not a local League in their community then they will join at the state level and occasionally people join at the national level. Yeah. They pay a certain amount of money and that's how they join.
 - Q. So is there a form one fills out to become a member?
- A. Is there a form one fills out. Do I fill out a form. I'm trying to think. I go online and I click a

1 could have the opportunity to say I want to run against

- 2 so-and-so, but in general we have that nominating
- process work so that everybody who really wants to be on 3
- the board gets an opportunity to either be on the board
- or to do some other projects at the statewide level. 5
- And how are the members of the nominating 6 committee chosen?
- The members of the nominating committee, that
- is in the bylaws and so -- so -- so check the bylaws
- 10 just to confirm that I'm being accurate. I'm not 100
- percent sure off the top of my head, but I believe 11
- two -- three members who are not on the board are -- are 12
- 13 on the nominating committee and then two members who are
- 14 on the current board are on the nominating committee.
- 15 It's something like that so I think it ends up being
- 16 five people. So that's something like -- my understand,
- 17 but I would have to really read the bylaws to make sure
- 18 I have it right. And -- and one of them is assigned to
- 19 be the chair.
- So the League of Women Voters of Texas is 20
- 21 governed by a board, right?
- 22 Uh-huh, yes. Α.
- 23 And that board is chosen through a convention
- 24 that votes to approve or not the people nominated by the
- 25 nominating committee, right?

Q. You said the voter convention is done by delegates, right?

- A. Yes.
- Q. And how does one become a delegate?
- A. Okay. What's fun is we just had our convention on April -- in early April. So this all somewhat fresh in my mind. Let's think how we do -- so tell me the question again.
- Q. How does one become a delegate to the League of Women Voters of Texas convention?
- A. Okay. So in our bylaws it says the number -something about the number of members in your League or League at large determines the number of delegates that you have and so we use math. And then to determine the number of delegates and then how are those delegates chosen the local League president gets to say who's on the final list, but pretty much anybody who wants to come to convention and be a delegate, there's plenty of opportunities for them to be there.
- Q. The delegates to the League of Women Voters of Texas convention are chosen by the local League presidents, correct?
 - A. By the local League presidents, yes.
- Q. How does one become a president of a local 1 looked at except for 2021 instead of 2020?

- 2 A. Yes.
- Q. Okay. Let's just briefly look at the last page again, which is Bates stamped 2276?
- 5 A. Uh-huh.
- Q. Do you see a similar pie chart regarding the League's income underneath heading, Funding the Mission?
- 8 A. Yes.
- 9 MR. CLANCY: Same objection as beyond the 10 scope of the deposition notice.
- 11 Q. (BY MR. THOMPSON) Does it show the League's 12 income for 20 -- - 13 A. Income, yes the pie chart.
- Q. I'm sorry. I'm noticing something about the last page. If you look at the top of the last page, it says 2022 report. Do you see that?
- A. Yeah.
- Q. But the title on the first page said 2021
- 19 | Impact Report, right?
- 20 A. Yes. So --
- 21 Q. It is currently April of 2022, right?
- 22 A. 2021, today, yes.
- Q. Do you think that the chart relates to the relevant numbers for 2021 or 2022?
- 25 A. 2021.

1 I'm sorry. So the chart on Bates stamp 2276 2 shows that the League of Women Voters of Texas had an income in 2021 of $320,308, right? 3

Just a continuing objection MR. CLANCY: this line of question speak and can you answer.

- (BY MR. THOMPSON) And the share of that income Ο. that was attributable to the per member payments from local leagues was 17 percent, right?
- 10 Α. No, wait a second. Membership says 17 percent 11 yes.
 - Ο. All right. Just to make sure we get it clear for the record. The pie chart shows on the bottom right-hand corner a 17 percent slice of the pie labeled membership, right?
 - Α. Yes.
 - And that means that 17 percent of the League of Women Voters of Texas income in 2021 came from the per member payments made by local leagues, right?
 - That's my understanding. Α.
 - Thank you very much. You can set aside 0. Okay. Exhibit 4. So based on the numbers from 2020 and 2021 more than 80 percent of the League's funding comes from sources other than per member payments, right?

25 Objection; form. MR. CLANCY:

voters overall. LWVTX would not have to conduct this type of public education in the absence of SB1. Do you

- A. Yes, that was a very long paragraph.
 - O. It was indeed?
- A. Yes.

see all that?

- Q. Okay. So toward the top of that paragraph the complaint alleges that SB1 would frustrate LWVTX's mission of empowering voters and defending democracy by expanding voter registration and increasing voter turn out. How does SB1 frustrate LWVTX's mission?
- A. So our mission of empowering voters and defending democracy we take -- we take to heart and I can barely say the mission without going woo hoo every time because it's so important to us. The -- so during empowering voters. So during most elections we're working really hard and especially working on trying to get more people registered to vote in voting Texas elections and -- and we have in the past been concentrating much of our efforts on young voters like we have a high school voter registration program, college age voters also because we know if you could get a voter to -- a young voter to participate in one election then they're more likely to participate in more elections. And we do that through our high school voter

1 registration and education, first vote education project 2 and the campus vote project that we work on a lot. other area we work with are people who are less likely 3 to vote and so those would be people who are not 4 consistent voters, voters in low income areas, we work 5 with voters who are served by food banks, voters who are 6 new voters, we have a whole naturalization ceremony and we have voters who -- who are new to Texas. those -- those are some of the areas -- some of the 10 areas we work on when we try to empower voters in Texas 11 in trying to get out the vote. The -- and instead of being able to do that, since -- SB1 we spent a great 12 13 deal of our time instead educating voters who are 14 normally consistent voters who have been voted -- voting 15 for a very, very, very long time in many cases who are 16 voting by mail, who are 65 years and over or are a voter 17 with a disability. And so we've been spending much of 18 our time instead of working with those inconsistent 19 voters, but working with normally consistent voters 20 who's been voting for a very long time who are now need a lot of voter education in order to get -- even get 21 22 through the application or the ballot by mail process. 23 So we -- we turned all of our energy -- I'm sorry, I'm 24 making hand motion we turned our energy from what we had 25 previously been concentrating on to these 65 and over voters and voters with disabilities on educating them about the new SB1 law, especially regarding voter ID.

- Q. So I understand, Ms. Chimene, that you brought in some specific examples of what the League does and how it respond to SB1. I want to see if I can kind of put those examples into categories and make sure I understand each of the applicable categories that they exist. So what I think you were just testifying about was -- that in response to SB1, the League has shifted some of its focus from activities it used to do to other activities in response to SB1, is that accurate?
 - A. Yes.

- Q. Is there any way -- I'm sorry, let me try that again. Is that what the League is referring to when it says that SB1 frustrates the League's mission?
- A. It's one of the aspects of what we mean when we say it frustrates the League's mission. It's -- is it okay if I keep going? So for us our mission is really important to our members and -- and supporters. And that is empowering voters and defending democracy. And frustrating our mission by making it so that these consistent older voters who are 65 and over and Texas and who are voters with a disability can't get through the process either of applying to vote by mail or the ones that had their ballots rejected in this last election or during the primary where they had 25,000 voters who voted by mails ballot rejected. I would say yes it frustrates our mission so --

- Q. So I think you said that the shift and focus is one aspect of how SB1 allegedly frustrates the League's mission. I want a list of all the aspects in which the League contends that SB1 frustrates the League's mission. Can you provide that?
- I can provide you with the ones that I could 10 come up with at this moment, but I'm sure there's going So let me start with, frustrates our 11 to be more. 12 mission. So let me start with the fact that we had to 13 pull together all of our volunteer efforts and focus on creating voter education materials and creating a 14 15 communication plan for this specific bill and that 16 included actually hiring a communications person. 17 Everybody in the League is a volunteer. I'm a 18 volunteer. Everybody's a volunteer except we have a staff member who is like -- her title is Executive 19 Director, but she's more like an administrator of the 20 21 office and -- and we got enough money to be able to hire 2.2 a communications person because this is taken up so much of the volunteer's times and my time and other peoples 23 times on the board that we're unable to get done the 24 25 normal activities that we would like to provide or we're members time, the inability to reach the voters we normally reach and are concerned about and the cost of having to pay extra staff as much as we could. So now we have communications person that we're paying for and also — let me try to think. So that's volunteer time — it frustrates our mission because I know these voters who reached out to me and to us to let us know how frustrated they were with this process. There was categories of them. So some of them were very angry about this bill and why is this happening to them.

And others are embarrassed that they were unable to follow this process. That they -- that SB1 created and others are not talking about it. They have just hold up and I'm not hearing from them. So my feeling and concern is that they will quit being a part of our democracy. And I believe that this is all due to SB1 and these major changes that happen especially with the voter ID and the complicated process for voting by mail. And -- and -- and so when I say it frustrates our mission, I mean it really frustrates our mission in so many different ways and those are just the three that I was able to name at this moment.

- Q. Okay. Let me try -- try this again.
- 25 A. Okay.

1 get through the application process had their votes not 2 counted in the primary. Some of those voters are angry about it and letting me know that they're angry by 3 sending -- by contacting me in some way that we've 4 already shared. Others are embarrassed and are kind of 5 turning it on themselves they're -- they seem 6 embarrassed and others I am not hearing from and my concern because our mission is empowering voters into 8 9 fitting democracy. My concern is the frustration is 10 we're not meeting those voters needs and we can't meet their voter's needs because there is nothing I can do to 11 make sure that they're able to participate in this 12 13 process and those voters we are losing in this already 14 low voting state. We are losing those voters and I'm 15 not sure that we'll ever be able to get them back again and that is because of SB1. 16

- Q. Okay. I think I understand the second category you're describing, but I need to make sure that I'm accurately understanding your testimony. The League has a goal of helping voters to vote, right? Is that a yes?
 - A. Yes.

Q. And the League contends that its goal is frustrated by SB1, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And that's because some voters the League contends, are not able to effectively vote due to new provisions in SB1, correct?

MR. CLANCY: Objection. Misstates the testimony. Form.

So some voters are -- my concern is that because of the ID requirement and other issues with SB1 that we have mentioned -- the lawyers have mentioned, that some voters our -- are unable to overcome the obstacles no matter how much voter education we provide. No matter how much we work with county election officials. No matter how much we promote this SB1 complicates vote by mail and -- and makes it so that we're losing voters who are normally consistent voters. Not only that, but we're unable to meet -- we can't -we can't seem to get them through this and we don't have the resources to do voter education that is -- that is required and so it's frustrating also because we're not going in meeting all the voter's needs. So we're not meeting the high school voter needs. We're not meeting the college student needs. We're not meeting the low income voters or the inconsistent voters who we normally concentrate on and instead we've had to turn our attention to people who are normally very consistent voters. People who normally have been voting consistently and by mail for some time for many years and they've been voting by mail for many years and now those voters are unable to either get through the

- 8 application process or they're one of the 25,000 that 9 had their ballots rejected. So this is frustrating our 10 mission.
 - Q. Let me try to sum it up. We'll see if I get it right. The League contends that SB1 frustrates its mission by preventing some people from voting, correct?

- Q. In an effort to address that problem the League has tried to educate voters about SB1, right?
- A. That is one of the things we have tried to do, yes.
 - Q. And by Spending the resources to educate voters about SB1, the League has necessarily shifted some resources away from activities it otherwise would have done, correct?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Does that capture all the ways that the League contends that SB1 frustrates its mission?

- So we have resources, we have voters, we have 3 our time, and efforts. So I could say yes for now. 4 sorry, I -- I -- I know that I'll go home and remember 5 all these other reasons. So I apologize and I know 6 you're going to try to go over and over and over again, but maybe after the next break I can come back to you 8 and tell you some more, but at this particular moment I 10 think that is a lot of resources and a lot of frustration that we have so thank you. 11
- Q. (BY MR. THOMPSON) Sitting here today you can't tell me about any other ways that the vote by mail provisions and SB1 frustrates the League's mission, can you.
- A. Tell me, again. Read it out loud. Let me try to categorize it.
 - Q. Sure. Maybe -- maybe it would help if I numbered them.
- A. Well, if it was written down I'd probably able to look at it and think more, but go -- yes, say No. 1 that might help.
- Q. Okay. No. 1, the League contends that the vote by mail provisions and SB1 will prevent some voters from participating in elections, right?

1 A. Yes, so that's voters, yes.

Q. No. 2, the League tries to address that problem by shifting its resources from other activities to educating voters about SB1, right?

- A. Right. Yes.
- Q. No. 3, despite the League's efforts the vote by mail provisions and SB1 will according to the League still prevent some voters from participating in elections, right?
 - A. Yes.

- Q. Now, I think those are the three broad categories of ways that you have testified the vote by mail provisions and SB1 can frustrate the League's mission.
- A. Did one of those include financial resources, not just volunteer time, but also financial resources? Is that included under the resource section?
- Q. Yes, as far as I'm concerned the resources addressed in No. 2 can be any type of resource you want.
 - A. Okay. All right that sounds good.
- Q. Is that -- are those the only three broad categories you can testify about sitting here today.
 - A. Sitting here today, yes. Thank you.
- Q. You can't identify right now any other way in which the vote by mail provisions of SB1 frustrates the

1 A. At least. I was -- we were working on 1 or 2 yesterday, sorry.

Q. Are there more educational videos that the League intends to edit or remake going forward based on SB1 going into effect?

MR. CLANCY: Objection; form.

A. Yes, there will be more videos.

- Q. (BY MR. THOMPSON) When will those be edited or remade?
- A. It seems as though since December in the middle of -- right during -- during the holidays instead of having a wonderful -- a relaxing vacation we were creating videos about vote by mail. Many of those videos -- I don't know many, those videos have been edited and then we provide them in different ways. So when you make a voter educational video you're trying to make it in a way that meets -- you're trying to provide voter education for people who are impacted by the bill and you're trying to make it -- meet all of their needs and so there's many videos and there's many documents and there's graphics and try -- and then working with partners and other government agencies trying to meet the needs of the voters.
- Q. So as I understand your testimony you're saying that the League provides new information, including

1 through remade videos about changes caused by SB1,
2 correct?

A. We have created numerous videos about changes to SB1 and we will continue to create the videos in a way that we hope will reach more and more voters. At the beginning SB1 was confusing for us and hard for us to consolidate and take that huge bill and try to make it into legal language that voters could understand, but our early videos are fairly complicated because it's a complicated process and we're trying to simplify as much as we can. So it's just -- it's just -- this is been a very difficult time for us.

- Q. So based on Paragraph 167 of the second amended complaint I thought there were particular videos, educational videos that the League wanted to edit or remake; is that right.
- A. About -- about SB1 and vote by mail, in particular especially regarding the voter ID aspects of it. We will -- those videos were made and they're multiple different types and now we are continuing to edit and remake videos trying to reach as many voters as possible just as possible.
- Q. When does the League anticipate that it will finish editing or remaking those videos?

MR. CLANCY: Objection; form.

A. I make most of the videos to be honest, so that's what I did over my vacation. I think the video's will be changing because they'll be made by somebody else after June. When I am not on the board -- so I expect those videos will be changing and perhaps being edited or just remaking them in a different way. I don't know if I answered your question, I'm sorry.

Q. My question was, when do you think the process will be complete?

MR. CLANCY: Objection; form.

- A. Those -- when will it be complete. I think the voter education that we provide on SB1 will continue on as we try to find tune our voter education so that more so to see if we could reach more voters and have them be successful voters. So right now the videos are in English, they need to be made in Spanish, perhaps some other languages, right now the videos were very simply made by me and some other League members. And I -- and it was a huge start. I think it will continue on. I expect we may have more videos as time goes by trying to reach as many people as possible I know I've said that before. Okay.
- Q. (BY MR. THOMPSON) If SB1 were no longer in effect, would the League need to change the videos yet again to take down that change?

Q. If you flip to Page 9 and 10 and look at slides 2 18 to 19.

A. Okay.

- Q. There the League is providing tips about assistance for voters in polling place, right?
 - A. Right.
- Q. So having gone through a few of these slides, I guess what I want to know is, is this exhibit a representative example of the types of tips and education that the League provides?

MR. CLANCY: Objection; form.

- A. This is not -- this is way more specific than we normally get. Because SB1 is so complicated and was so massive and the changes are overwhelming for many voters this is a lot more than we normally do. We normally have more perky happy slides about registering to vote or voting early, you know, and this one is like really more detailed, detailed oriented and that is what SB1 has done. Also this is very early on so over time our education has changed and this is not for voters it is for organizations that work with the voters. So I wouldn't teach voters all of this necessarily. I would try to make it more simple, but it's -- I like it. I -- I created it. I'm not a lawyer.
 - Q. Sure. And I'm surely not trained --

Exhibit 30

DECLARATION OF JOYCE LEBOMBARD

My name is Joyce LeBombard. I am over the age of 18 and capable of making this declaration. The facts stated herein are within my personal knowledge:

1. I am the President of the League of Women Voters of Texas ("LWVTX"). I have served in this role since June 2022. My current term will end in June of 2024. This is an unpaid, volunteer position to which I devote an average of 40 hours a week. I have been a member of the League since February 2017. I served the Austin Area League as VP of Voters Service, and then as President and Interim Communications & Technology Director. I am retired from a management career in IT, primarily in the financial services industry.

About the LWVTX:

- 2. The League of Women Voters of Texas is a nonpartisan, grassroots civic organization that encourages informed and active participation in government, works to increase understanding of major public policy issues, and influences public policy through education and advocacy. LWVTX's mission is to empower voters and defend democracy.
- 3. LWVTX's main office is in Austin, Texas. LWVTX has approximately 3,000 members and between 33 and 35 local leagues covering 39 counties across Texas. The League also serves voters statewide, even outside of these areas.
- 4. Members of local leagues are also members of the LWVTX, as well as the League of Women Voters of the United States.

- LWVTX members pay annual dues, a portion of which are paid to LWVTX from local leagues in the form of per member payments. These funds are used to fund a portion of LWVTX's activities.
- 6. LWVTX's officers and board members are LWVTX members who are elected by other members. Officer and board elections occur at the biennial LWVTX convention, where members from local leagues vote in the elections.
- 7. LWVTX is a volunteer-based organization. Many of our members participate in LWVTX's election-related programs, such as registering people to vote, participating in get out the vote ("GOTV") events, canvassing or "doorknocking," assisting individual voters, and hosting nonpartisan issue or candidate forums.
- 8. LWVTX and its local leagues fund, create, and distribute non-partisan election guides.

 These guides help to inform voters about how to vote and what the candidates and propositions on their ballots stand for. These guides are distributed across the state to voters, public entities like libraries, and other organizations—both as physical copies and online. LWVTX sends these voter guides to as many counties as possible, including counties without local leagues.
- 9. LWVTX undertakes a number of activities related to encouraging and facilitating voting by mail, including organizing and running voter registration drives; designing and executing public information campaigns about how to vote by mail; creating social media posts and materials about voter registration and early voting; encouraging eligible voters to use mail-in ballots; and educating voters about how to comply with Texas election laws governing early voting and voting by mail.

LWVTX Members:

- 10. Many LWVTX members vote by mail, including because they are over the age of 65 or have a disability.
- 11. I am aware of and know many LWVTX members who have disabilities, and as a result vote by mail and/or use assistants when they vote.
- 12. We also have many members who serve as voting assistants to voters casting mail-in-ballots in their communities. Organizations and others will often ask LWVTX chapters and members to provide assistants.
- 13. Many of the members and voters that LWVTX works with, who are older than 65 or have disabilities, do not have the privilege of voting easily. Many of the voters are unable to drive themselves to a polling location, are unable to walk around and use voting machines by themselves, and have been some of the most vulnerable populations to risk of severe illness from COVID-19.
- 14. LWVTX members are also some of the most devoted voters and committed to pursuing the ideals of American democracy. Many members have been voting since they were first old enough and eligible to vote, and have been voting and encouraging others around them to vote since then. Some of our members have individually been voters and activists for over half a century. LWVTX members are integral to pursuing our mission of empowering voters and defending democracy.

LWVTX's Diversion of Resources Due to SB1:

15. The provisions of SB1 challenged in this lawsuit have harmed LWVTX's ability to pursue its mission. The additional requirement to include a Texas ID number or social security number when voting by mail, and new requirements criminalizing assistants for

- vote-by-mail ballots, has required LWVTX to devote significant resources to inform members and other voters how to navigate these changes.
- 16. Leading up to and since SB 1 went into effect in December 2021, LWVTX has had to devote significant personnel time and resources to helping members and the public navigate SB 1's new provisions. LWVTX will have to continue to divert resources in future elections to address the changes under SB 1, as long as its challenged provisions remain in place.
- 17. As the LWVTX's President, I have had to devote a significant portion of my time to addressing the harmful changes under SB 1. Likewise, my predecessor and other board members and LWVTX paid staff have also devoted significant time to SB 1. We have had to dedicate time to educating LWVTX members and the public about SB 1's harmful requirements and restrictions.
- 18. In response to requests about SB1 from voters and other organizations, we have hosted and participated in several presentations about the challenged SB1 provisions. Along with other board members and staff, I created PowerPoint presentations explaining SB1 and advising voters how to navigate these changes.
- 19. Much of the information we were using to advise members and voters about the changes under SB1 had to continue to evolve as the implementation of SB1 changed unpredictably. For instance, we initially understood that voters needed to (and were supposed to) include only one identification number when they voted by mail. This later changed to advise voters to include both a Texas ID number and a social security number, in order to increase the likelihood that one of these numbers would match what - was in their voter file. As a result, LWVTX had to change the advice that we were giving to members and voters, and once again update materials to reflect this.

- 20. LWVTX has also spent a significant amount of time answering questions from local leagues about how to navigate changes under SB1. As discussed above, there has been serious confusion about whether local leagues should advise members and voters to write down only one identification number when voting by mail, or instead include both numbers. Likewise, I have had to answer many questions from local leagues about how to safely serve as voter assistants under the new SB1 requirements.
- 21. The LWVTX President is responsible for responding to media requests for the LWVTX. Since the passage of SB1, leading up to each election we have consistently received requests for information from journalists and media outlets about changes under SB1. Responding to these requests has been important for LWVTX to help publicize the changes under SB1 that harm voters, such as informing voters that they should include two identification numbers on applications and ballots to vote by mail, and that voter assistants have new and additional requirements to follow. Coordinating these interviews, preparing for them, and participating in them has taken a significant amount of personnel time since the passage of SB1.
- 22. Historically, the LWVTX President has handled the organizations' external communications. Because so much of LWVTX's time was being occupied by responding to requests and creating materials to respond to requests about SB1, the LWVTX's board of directors approved about $42,000 to hire a Digital Communications Associate, a position we did not employ before, and $10,000 to pay for their recruitment and - orientation. This new staff member would not have been needed if the LWVTX President had not had to respond to the changes under SB 1.

- 23. Additionally, LWVTX has had to expend financial resources on producing materials reflecting changes in the law related to SB 1, including the voters' guide. These changes to the voter guide needed to be translated into Spanish, Chinese, and Vietnamese, which costs additional financial resources.
- 24. LWVTX has worked with another organization, the Center for Civic Design to design an alternative Vote by Mail application form for other organizations and voters to use, which attempts to simplify the new identification and assistance requirements introduced by SB1. We have devoted a significant amount of time to creating the design and sharing it with other organizations and voters. We have translated the application into Spanish, but we are still working on translating the application into other languages and sharing it with communities that speak other languages.
- 25. LWVTX has spent time making suggestions to the Secretary of State's office about how to improve the implementation of SB1's new requirements. For instance, we have advised the Secretary of State's office to shift to recommending that voters include both their driver's license and social security numbers, instead of just one number. We have also offered suggestions about how information and videos on the Secretary of State's website about voting by mail should be improved.
- 26. As a result of its diversion of resources to respond to SB 1, LWVTX has had to significantly scale back its GOTV efforts leading up to elections. Rather than focusing on designing and disseminating materials on topics to encourage lower-propensity voters, such as supporting college students in voting and helping voters find their polling place, LWVTX has had to focus on designing and disseminating materials about SB1's changes to the vote-by-mail process. Additionally, LWVTX has been forced to reduce its outreach to young voters, including encouraging voter registration at high schools, because LWVTX has had to focus on voters more likely to be affected by the challenged provisions of SB 1. As a result, LWVTX has shifted much of its time and resources to talking to people who are usually reliable and devoted voters, but who are now encountering new challenges to voting because of the requirements under SB1.

27. Overall, responding to the harmful challenged provisions of SB 1 required a huge diversion of LWVTX's resources, negatively affecting its usual and planned activities to pursue its mission.

Harms to LWVTX Members and Other Voters

- 28. Since the passage of SB1, I have regularly received questions from local leagues, members, and other voters about how to navigate SB1's requirements for identification numbers when voting by mail and using an assistant when voting. LWVTX members are generally reliable and devoted voters who intend to continue to vote in the future, but many are concerned about the difficulties and risks that will occur when they do vote because of SB1. The members and voters that I hear from are scared of what SB1's requirements mean for them if they make a mistake or misinterpret the new requirements.
- 29. Many of the members and voters that I hear from are frustrated that to vote by mail they have to essentially guess what identification number they used when they registered to vote. I have also heard from people who are apprehensive about writing down their social security number on a form to vote by mail, because they have been advised to be extremely careful sharing their social security numbers.

- 30. LWVTX members who have been harmed by SB1's requirements include Pam Gaskin, Janet Eickmeyer, Jeannie Lewis, Patricia Buck, Milan Suarez, and Cynthia Edmondson.
- 31. Leading up to and during the March 1, 2022 primary and November 2022 general election in Texas, LWVTX heard from many members and other voters that they were having serious difficulties voting because of new SB1 requirements. Many longtime voters had their applications or ballots to vote by mail rejected for the first time.

 Likewise, many voters were unable to vote at all because they were unable to navigate the new identification requirements to vote by mail.
- 32. Although the state has implemented a ballot tracker and cure process for voting by mail, LWVTX has heard from many people that these systems failed them. Many members and other voters were unable to access the ballot tracker because their identification information would not allow them to log on. Likewise, LWVTX heard from many people who were not able to cure their ballots in time to vote before the election. Specifically, close to Election Days, many people were unable to cure their ballots in person because of limitations caused by their age and disabilities—the very reasons that they choose not to vote in person in the first place. Many LWVTX members are outraged about the high percentages of vote-by-mail applications and ballots that were rejected.

Conclusion:

33. Voter education and voting access were the casualties of the draconian changes under SB

1. SB 1 resulted in many Texas voters being silenced, and this will continue to happen as long as the challenged provisions of SB1 are in place.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1745. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF GRACE CHIMENE

My name is Grace Chimene. I am over the age of 18 and capable of making this declaration. The facts stated herein are within my personal knowledge:

- 1. I previously served as the President of the League of Women Voters of Texas ("LWVTX") between June 2018 and June 2022. Further, I served on the LWVTX Board of Directors between 2014 and 2022, and previously served as the LWVTX advocacy chair. I have been a member of the LWVTX since 2012.
- 2. I was President of the LWVTX when Senate Bill 1 was passed by the Texas Legislature in 2021, as well as when Senate Bill 1's provisions were first implemented at the end of 2021.
- 3. During the 2020 LWVTX State Convention, LWVTX approved a plan to review the state of election administration and technology in Texas elections, including by developing a new LWVTX "Facts and Issues" position on 1) physical and cybersecurity measures in elections, 2) election equipment, and 3) measures to increase confidence in elections.

4. However, due to the extensive time the LWVTX expended to challenge and educate the public about SB 1, LWVTX had to table the planned review and updates. Given the intensity of discourse during the extended 2021 legislative season around SB 1, and the final massive changes to the Texas Election Code, the resources for the planned review were diverted to responding to widespread requests for detailed information during the legislative sessions and addressing the impact of SB 1 once it went into effect.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1745. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

Page 12 1 were retired? 2 Α. Well, I retired the first time from AT&T; and I was a sales executive. I had -- I was a 3 division manager. I had sales organizations in 4 Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas. They would call 5 them -- and Arkansas -- the MOKA states. 6 7 The MOKA states. Q. And when I retired from there, I went to Α. 9 work for KPMG, the accounting firm; and I retired 10 from there. 11 And three guys that -- two guys that I had been -- that I had worked with back in the 12 13 AT&T days and at KPMG, we all started our own little consultancy. And we -- that was in 2008. And we 14 closed that down in 2019. 15 So you've been retired since 2019? 16 Q. 17 Α. Yes. 18 0. Okay. Now, you're a member of the League of Women Voters Texas; correct? 19 20

- 21 Okay. And before that, you were a 0. 22 member of the League of Women Voters Houston; right?
 - I still am. Α.
 - You still are. Okay. Q.
- 25 You can be a member of both?

1 Α. Yes. 2 Q. Okay. And those are nonprofit organizations, correct, ma'am? 3 4 Α. Yes, they are. Okay. I'll talk a little bit more about Ο. those later. 6 7 But before that, are you a member of any other nonprofit organizations? 8 Well, I'm a member of the Alpha Kappa Α. 10 Alpha Sorority, Incorporated. 11 I'm a member of the National 12 Congress of Black Women. 13 And that would be it. 14 Okay. Those two. 0. 15 Are you a member of any -- or strike that. 16 17 Are you a member of any other 18 professional organizations? 19 Α. I am a member of ISACA, I-S-A-C-A. T'm a certified information systems auditor, and I am a 20 21 member of that organization. 22 I'm also a member of the National Association of Parliamentarians. 23 24 Oh, okay. My apologies for talking over Q. you. 25

1 during the special session. Do you understand that, 2 ma'am? I understand that. 3 Α. Okay. Thank you. 4 0. Now, do you understand that the 5 6 United States and OCA Greater Houston are plaintiffs 7 in this case? Α. I don't know what OCA Houston is. 9 Okay. I'll move on. Ο. It's not 10 important. 11 Do you understand that you were 12 disclosed as a potential witness in this case? 13 I do understand that. Α. 14 Do you know why that was done? Ο. 15 Α. Because I had some issues with my 16 attempts to -- to receive my application for a 17 mail-in ballot. 18 0. Any other reasons that you're aware of? 19 Α. No. 20 Okay. Now, I'm glad that you mentioned 0. 21 that, ma'am, because I do want to talk about that a 22 little bit. But I have a few preliminary questions 23 first.

Now, are you registered to vote?

Α.

Q.

Okay.

Pamiel Gaskin

1 school. He called me. He said, "For your birthday, 2 I'm going to come get you. Give me your schedule, your class schedule, and I'm going to come get you 3 and get you registered to vote." 4 So I told him what my class schedule 5 He showed up on a Thursday afternoon, about 1 6 was. 7 o'clock. Drove me back to Galveston County. That morning -- next morning took me 8 9 to register to vote, and drove me back to Austin 10 that afternoon so I could go to my 1 o'clock class. 11 Q. That's great. 12 Do you remember what class it was? 13 Α. No. No. I'm 75. That was -- I No. 14 was 21 then. 15 Ο. Sometimes when you've got great stories 16 like that, you remember random details, that sort of 17 thing. 18 Α. That's not a detail I remember. 19

- Q. Well, that's a long drive from Austin to Galveston.
- 21 A. Yeah.

- Q. Now, you said that you voted in the March 2022 primary; correct?
- 24 A. I did.
- 25 Q. Okay. Now, I understand you had some

1 form from you guys." 2 She said, "Well, the Secretary of State didn't send us the right forms in time, and we 3 didn't populate the correct form until around the 4 5 6th of January." I said. "Okay. Is the correct form 6 7 there now?" She said, "Yes." 8 9 So I pulled the correct form down. Filled it out. 10 Mailed it in. And I had just -- it 11 was -- this was on the 13th. 12 On the 20th, I had just finished a 13 League of Women Voters activity, and I was on my way 14 And Veronica called me and said, "Don't shoot 15 the messenger. Your application has been rejected." 16 I said, "For what?" 17 She said, "You didn't put the 18 correct ID on your application." 19 I said, "Veronica, what do you mean 20 I didn't put the right ID? It asks for my driver's license number, and that's what I put on there." 21 22 She says, "Well" --23 I said, "What was I supposed to put 24 on it?" 25 She said, "Well, I can't tell you,

1 because if I do, I could go to jail because of the 2 new law." And I said, "Well, obviously since 3 you're only asking for two things, it must be my 4 Social Security number." I said, "What number is 5 6 it?" 7 And she said, "It's the number you use when -- the ID you used when you first 8 9 registered to vote that's in your voter record 10 here." 11 And I said, "Well, Veronica, I 12 registered to vote 46 years ago in this county. 13 What" -- so I said, "Okay. It could only be one of two things, since you're only asking for two things. 14 15 "So is it my -- if I tell you what 16 it is, can you confirm that?" 17 She said, "Yes, I can do that." 18 I said, "Okay. Is it my Social 19 Security number?" 20 She said, "Yes, it is." 21 I said, "Thank you very much." 22 I pulled down another form. 23 this time, leaving nothing to chance, everywhere 24 there was a blank, even on the optional information, I filled it all in, and mailed it back on the 14th. 25

1 And on the 28th of January -- no, the 31st of January, I got my ballots in the mail. 2 28 days, three tries. 3 And then you submitted those ballots 4 correctly --5 I did. 6 Α. 7 -- correct? Yeah. Q. And did you track those ballots 8 9 after you submitted them? 10 Α. I did. 11 Where did you track them? 0. 12 On ballot tracker. You go to the County Α. 13 site, and it's a little thing you click on that says 14 "Track my ballot." 15 Ο. And I guess it lets you know once the ballot's been accepted? 16 17 It tells you. You can see when it was Α. 18 saved; you can see when it was accepted; and you can 19 see -- they use a funny term for it being processed. 20 And I don't remember what it is. But you can tell 21 when it's being processed. 22 And your and your husband's votes were 23 eventually processed; correct? 24 Α. Yes, they were.

Q.

Okay. Well, thank you for explaining

Pamiel Gaskin

June 29, 2022

1 Ο. (BY MR. DiSORBO) Understand. And I'm 2 not asking if you know every provision that's in SB1. 3 4 I'm just saying, me and you sitting right now, any provisions of SB1 come to mind that 5 6 you oppose besides the ones we've already talked 7 about? Α. 8 No. Good to go, ma'am? 9 Ο. Okay. 10 Α. I'm good. 11 All right. So I want to talk a little Q. 12 bit about your membership in the League of Women 13 Voters. 14 Α. Okay. 15 0. And you had told me that you're a member 16 of both the League of Women Voters Texas and Houston 17 branches; is that right? 18 Α. Correct. 19 0. You were a member of the Houston branch 20 first; is that correct? 21 Α. Yes. 22 And when did you become a member? 0. 23 In probably the '90s. Α. 24 Okay. And how did you originally become Q. 25 a member?

Pamiel Gaskin

A. Actually, one of my sorority sisters and I were talking about ways that we could become more civically engaged, and the League of Women Voters seemed to offer the things that we were interested in: voter registration; voter education. So we joined, she and I.

- Q. And you've held various positions in the Houston chapter over the years; is that right?
 - A. Correct.

- Q. Which ones, if you can recall?
- A. I was the chairman of nonnaturalization voter registration, which is everything other than naturalization.
 - Q. As the name implies.
 - A. I was a board member.

I worked on our voter guide on the questions -- question development for candidates.

And I also worked on the voter guide following up with candidates to harass them into sending in their responses.

- Q. That takes some perseverance, doesn't it?
 - A. Yes, it does. And thick skin.
 - Q. Okay. So you did that.
- 25 Any other position -- you were -- so

1 you were the chair of that. What other positions 2 did you hold? That's it. 3 Α. That's the main one? 4 0. Uh-huh. 5 Α. Okay. And now you're a member of the 6 0. 7 Texas branch too; is that correct? Α. That's correct. 8 9 Okay. And I think you're a director in 0. 10 the Texas branch; is that right? 11 That's correct. Just effective June 1st Α. 12 of this year. 13 Of this year. Well, congratulations. 0. That's --14 15 Α. A few weeks ago. 16 Q. How did that come about? 17 Α. I was elected by the membership at our 18 state convention in April. 19 0. This April? 20 Uh-huh. Α. 21 How did you decide to run? Q. 22 I was asked to run. Α. The nominating committee asked me if I would consider running. 23 24 Did they --Q.

Α.

Last year.

1 0. Last year. 2 Α. Yes. When -- about what time of the year last 3 Ο. 4 year? 5 Probably October/November. Α. Of 2021? 6 0. 7 Uh-huh. Α. 8 Okay. And why did they want you to run? 0. 9 Been an active member. I quess they saw Α. 10 something, that they thought I could contribute on a 11 state level. 12 They thought you were a good candidate? Ο. 13 Thought I was a good candidate. Α. 14 Nothing more specific than that, that Ο. 15 you're aware of? 16 Not that I'm aware of. Α. 17 Okay. And I suppose you were Ο. 18 successful; you were elected? 19 Α. Well, they -- I made their vetting process, and they presented the slate to the 20 21 membership. 22 And the membership votes up or 0. Okav. 23 down on a slate, I suppose; is that right? 24 Α. Yes.

Now, what is -- strike that.

Q.

Okav.

Q. So these are the disclosures which have identified you as someone with knowledge on absentee ballots by mail, do you have any reason to believe that you are here for any other reason?

MS. HARRIS: Objection, form.

- Q. (BY MR. WASSDORF) You can go ahead and answer.
 - A. No.
- Q. So when I'm referring to SB 1, as we just read in there, do you understand that I'm talking about the Election Integrity Bill that the legislature passed this past session?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. And as -- as we just read in this document, you're being identified on behalf of the League of Women Voters of Texas, do you know who the League of Women Voters of Texas is?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. And, you know, if I use the phrase League of Women Voters, or the League, will you understand that I mean the League of Women Voters of Texas?
 - A. Yes.
- 25 Q. What county do you live in?

1 Α. Dallas County. 2 Q. Roughly, where? Toward -- in Richardson, close to Collin 3 Α. 4 County, a few blocks south of Collin County. How long have you lived in Dallas? 5 0. 6 Α. All my life, except when I was in college. Τ 7 mean, my residence was here, but I was away at college. Okay. Where did you go to high school? 8 Ο. 9 Hillcrest High School. Α. 10 0. My -- my dad went to Jesuit, the old one down 11 on Oak Lawn. 12 He -- as I recall, though, he took 13 somebody to prom from Hillcrest, he didn't take you to 14 prom, did he? 15 Α. Pardon? 16 He didn't take you to prom, did he? Q. 17 Α. No, he did not. 18 Okay. So what's your educational background? 0. 19 Α. I have a BA from the University of Texas in 20 Austin, that's the last -- and some postgraduate work 21 but no postgraduate degrees. 22

- And what was that degree in? 0.
- It was in American history. Α.

25

- Do you have any other education or training? Q.
- I did some postgraduate work. I was a Α.

- 1 A. No.
- 2 Q. Have you ever donated to a political campaign?
- 3 A. Yes.
- 4 Q. And whose campaign?
- A. Again, over the years there probably -- there have been too many to -- to recall. Whether or not I donated, I don't know, probably to the McGovern campaign, Sissy Farenthold when she ran for governor. I my little $5 and $10 donations were spread out over candidates over a lot of years and a lot of elections.

 - Q. So have you ever donated to a Democrat's political campaign?
- 13 A. Yes.

12

- Q. Have you ever donated to Republican's political campaign?
- 16 A. No.
- Q. Have you ever voted in the Republican primary?
- 18 A. Once.
- 19 Q. Do you remember when that was?
- A. Again, I believe it was in the 70s. That was it, and it was a state election.
- 22 | 0. That's all right.
- 23 A. I don't recall the precise year.
- Q. So are you a member of the League of Women Voters, Texas?

1 Α. I'm a member of the League of Women Voters of 2 Dallas, which makes me, entitles me to be a member of the League of Women Voters of Texas, also. 3 So let's talk about that for a minute, I Ο. quess. 6 Is there a National League of Women 7 Voters? 8 Yes, I believe so. Α. 9 And so then there's a State League of Women 0. 10 Voters, the League of Women Voters of Texas --11 Α. Yes. 12 0. -- right? 13 And then I quess there are also local 14 chapters, such as the League of Women Voters of Dallas? 15 Α. (No verbal response.) 16 And so you are a member of the League of Women 0. 17 Voters of Dallas, correct? 18 Α. Yes. And the League of Women -- I just this 19 last year joined the League of Women Voters of 20 Richardson. 21 Of Richardson? Q. 22 So do you pay dues? 23 Α. Yes.

How much are those dues, do you know?

I believe Dallas is $75 a year, and as I

- Q. But you just pay dues to Dallas and Richardson, right?
- A. Yes.
 - Q. Do these local leagues that you're a member of, do they have a leadership structure, or how -- how does that work?
 - A. They have boards of directors, so -- and committee chairs and --
 - Q. How are those individuals selected, do you know?
 - A. There is a nominating committee that meets, I guess -- I'm not sure if it's every year or every -- what the terms are. I haven't been that involved, so -- committee chairs, I think it's whoever steps up and takes a leadership role.

 - Q. I hate to ask this, but you identified that time period based on your age, what's your birth date?
 - A. Year, or?
 - Q. Well, just your birth date in general, I mean yeah, including the year, the whole thing?
 - A. February 13, 1950.
- Q. Same age as my mom.

So do you vote frequently?

- A. When I know about the candidates, yes.
- Q. Have you ever voted in person in Dallas County?
- 18 A. Yes.
- 19 Q. Have you ever voted by mail in Dallas County?
- 20 A. Yes.
- Q. Approximately, how many times do you think you've voted by mail?
- A. I started voting by mail, I think with COVID, so for the past, I guess, two and a half years, three years, maybe, or -- I'm guessing.

Q. Could -- could you tell us what this is?

On the League of Women Voters website they had Α. a, seems like a, among other information about upcoming meetings, and so forth. They said did you have difficulty voting? And click on to respond. And then they had a place where you could respond to that, so I -- after some frustration, I did.

And let me read this here. Ο.

So it says, "Your Election Experience, poor; Voting Experience" and it -- you replied, "I voted by mail and can't determine whether my ballot was counted. Dallas County is supposed to be calling me back, but the SOS website says I'm not even registered", and then it has your name and phone number", did I read that correctly there?

- Α. Yes.
- 0. So what -- what made your election experience poor?

MS. HARRIS: Objection, form.

Α. Soon after the first of the year, when it was possible, I downloaded the application for voting by mail from, I guess it's the Dallas County. I don't even know what entity the application was for absentee -- an absentee ballot to vote in the primary. And I filled it out, I thought completely, and -- or according to instructions and mailed it in.

Soon after, a couple of weeks, I don't recall exactly how long after, I received a letter saying that my ballot request was rejected because of -- and they had highlighted either, I don't recall the exact wording, an incomplete or incompatible driver's license or social security number.

And they included another application, which I filled out, and that -- this time completely, including -- well, I thought was completely -- and sent it right away, and it too was rejected for the same reason. So I -- and another application was included with the second rejection.

Instead of filling that out, I called Dallas County. I went online, and it's -- there was -- Dallas County has a track your ballot link on their voting site, and -- or track your vote by mail, whatever it says. I'm not exactly sure of what the wording is.

So I went to that, and -- and I called the office -- I called the number. And I guess it was at this time, I don't remember -- I guess, I think the first time I did talk to somebody. One time I had to leave a message, and I guess that's what this is referring to, about them calling me back.

But I spoke with somebody, and I said my absentee ballot request has been rejected twice, and I'd like to know why. I thought it was complete. What do I need to do in order to get an absentee ballot? And she said -- she looked it up on her computer, she was very nice and she said something about -- to the effect that the numbers weren't, you know, it didn't -- they didn't go in properly, or something.

They didn't -- they weren't -- and she looked again on another source. I don't know if it was a different website. I don't -- I don't know what she was doing. It was all on the computer, I assume. And I heard a voice of a man, who seemed to be in a supervisory capacity, saying no, that's okay we'll send her a ballot, she -- she's been approved. And I received an absentee ballot soon after that, which I filled out and mailed in.

Q. (BY MR. WASSDORF) Okay. I am now handing you what has been marked as Exhibit 3.

If you will look at Line 27, you'll see

Q. But you don't have any specific recollection of having done this?

- A. It's an accurate representation, so I don't -- I don't recall, you know, what -- what it was in response to.
- Q. When it says that Dallas County shows it was received three times on two dates, do you know what that's referring to?
- A. I went to the track your ballot link on the Dallas County website, to see if my ballot had been received and counted, because there was a lot in the press at that time, in newspapers about ballots being rejected. I wanted to make sure that mine had been received, and -- and the mails are unreliable, had been received in a timely way and had been counted, in fact, counted.
- Q. And so on that website, it showed that your ballot had been received three times?
 - A. That's what it shows.
- Q. It -- it says here, and I think you've previously stated, that you called the -- the County about your ballot, did you ever hear back from the County?
- A. I don't remem -- recall if I -- they called me, or if I called them again. I think I called -- I

- A. Yes. And I know people who did that.
- Q. (BY MR. WASSDORF) Are you aware of any other members of the League of Women Voters who had their applications for ballot by mail rejected for not having, or not matching the number on the driver's license, election certificate, identification certificate or social security number?

MS. HARRIS: Objection, form.

- A. It doesn't ask for your voter registration number, I don't -- as I recall. No. I don't know of any, I -- I'm not -- I haven't been that involved.
- Q. (BY MR. WASSDORF) On your application that was rejected the first time, you included your driver's license number?
- A. As I recall, I just put the last four digits of my social security number, because I knew that offhand, and I wouldn't have had to, you know, dig out my driver's license and copy it down. So I -- I believe I just did my soc -- the last four of my social security number -- digits of my social security number.
- Q. And are you confident that you wrote it down correctly?
 - A. I -- it was -- I used as a college ID. I -- I

Janet Eickmeyer June 13, 2022

 - Α. Yes.
- Have you ever been unable to vote by mail 0. because of the requirements of Section 5.02 of the Bill that we just read?
- MS. HARRIS: Objection, form, calls for a legal conclusion.
 - Α. No.
- 22 (BY MR. WASSDORF) So let's go to the next Ο. 23 section, it's Section 5.03. I think it's two pages 24 forward.

I have served on juries, but I don't 1 No. 2. recall ever testifying, no. 3 Have you ever testified in another proceeding, 0 4 like before the legislature? I have testified before elected bodies like the State Board of Education. I have testified on 6 school books before them. 7 Have you ever been involved in a lawsuit 8 0 9 before? 10 Α No. 11 Where did you go to school? 0 12 Α I went to school from 12 years old until I 13 graduated at Butler High School in Huntsville, Alabama. 14 0 Did you go to any school after that? 15 I went to college in Montevallo, 16 Alabama, and was there four years and graduated. 17 then later I went to TWU, Texas Woman's University for a 18 master's degree in education. 19 And then after that, I went to Texas 20 University [sic] to work on my MBA. And I got tired of 21 commuting, because I live in San Marcos here in Hays 22 County, and I transferred to Texas State University to 23 finish my MBA there.

I don't remember that they put out a notice about problems with SB 1. It seems like we were talking -- and this was on Zoom -- in some kind of meeting and we were sharing experiences we had had with voting this voting season. I think it started out more informal. I am not sure of the -- if we were actually asked to come forward.

Okay. And when you said you talked with local members of the league, was that what you were referring to?

Α Yes.

Okay. We will get back to that in just a minute. Let me ask you some questions about the league. Is that all right?

Α Sure.

Q So you testified that you were a member of the League of Women Voters of Texas, correct?

A Yes. When you are a league member, you are a member of your local organization, which is League of Women Voters of Hays County, but then you are automatically a member of the state league, which is the League of Women Voters of Texas, and you are also a member of the League of Women Voters of the United States. So it's kind of a triad or triple level.

- O Okay. As a member, do you pay dues?
- A Yes.

2.

- O Annual dues?
- A Yes.
 - Q How much are annual dues, if you remember?
 - A I think it's about $65.
 - Q And all members pay each year?
- A Yes. There is a special break for students and if you have a family, like both husband and wife want to join, there is a discount for the second person. And the $65 is just something I am guessing. I pay dues to so many organizations. I -- I don't specifically remember, but it's probably around that amount.
 - Q That's fine.
- Is it all right if I just say, "the league," instead of "the League of Women Voters of Texas" for each question?

A Barbara Nichols -- yeah.

Q But you said you don't -- but books is a little bit more of a chore to do with the magnifying glass?

A Yeah. The print isn't as big as those names. When you don't have the video on, your name is printed much bigger than the names below. The people -- like your name and my name is in much smaller print.

MS. KUMAR: Zachary, we have been going for just over an hour. I don't know if this might be a good time for a break or if you want to finish this line of questions.

MR. BERG: Yeah. Let's take a break. 15 minutes?

MS. KUMAR: Sounds good.

MS. KUMAR: Sounds great.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Time is 11:26 a.m. We are back on the record.

Q (BY MR. BERG) Ms. Lewis, right before we went off the record, we were talking about challenges that you experienced during your life as a result of your disability; is that correct?

2.

- A During my life?
- Q In your life.

A Yeah. At some point in my life. I was not born or lived, you know, a great deal of my life disabled.

Q When did it start? When did you notice it?

MS. KUMAR: Objection, form.

A I think it started with arthritis in my knees, and so I had my first knee replacement -- gosh, I don't know how many years ago. Then I had to have my second knee replaced, then my hip, and then my other hip. And it has just gradually reduced my mobility.

And then the macular degeneration -- I once had 20/20 vision, but it has gradually been compromised. My hearing has always been normal until I got older. Now I am wearing hearing aids. And most of the time that works okay, but sometimes I have to have people repeat things.

I have a heart murmur and I am under a cardiologist's care. I am on blood thinner and I am on medication for high blood pressure and medication for cholesterol. And I -- what else do I have? Did I say I have a torn rotator cuff in my shoulder?

Q No.

And I went, you know, with nervous trepidation because they are right in your face and I have got my mask on, but still. So, you know, it's been one of the biggest problems, I think.

Well, my joints, too. Just walking, standing. Oh, I have spinal stenosis, which causes my back to hurt. If I am just up for a few minutes, my back starts hurting until I sit down again.

The macular degeneration, is that progressive? Will that get worse?

Yes. Supposedly it does get worse over time. Α I -- like I say, I take this medication that's recommended by my eye doctor. I am supposed to have that exam every -- actually, when I went this time, he said I could come back in a year, but they check to make sure it hasn't turned from dry to wet.

If you have wet macular degeneration, you have to get shots in your eyeball, because I have friends that have got -- had to get that. So far I haven't developed that.

So you voted in the 2022 March 1st primary, correct?

- A Yes. I tried.
- Q You were unsuccessful in voting?
- A Finally I was successful, but I had to go through this horrible ordeal.
 - Q What was the -- so you voted absentee --
- A Well, I voted --
 - Q -- right?
- 13 | A -- mail-in ballot.
- 14 | O Mail -- my apologies. Mail-in ballot.
 - So you filed an application for ballot by mail at some point?

A Yes. And I really want to emphasize the previous two years I had no trouble, but I knew that you had to apply for a ballot by mail for the whole year and then it expired. So in January, rather -- I really didn't like going online to ask for an application for mail-in ballot. I am just so used to dealing with the county election administrator's office.

I just called and asked them to send me an application for a mail-in ballot and they sent it by mail and I filled it out very carefully and mailed it in and thought everything was okay.

And then I get a letter from the county election administrator's office saying my application has been rejected. And I --

O And -- oh.

A -- voted -- I voted two years for mail-in ballot and no problem, but they said my application -- and in the same letter was an app- -- a voter registration application.

I already had my new voter registration card, which was sent out every two years and -- I already had my card, but they said they put that -- I had to apply for another voter registration card.

And can I tell you, I called -- I called the county election administrator's office again, and I said, "What's going on? I have already filled out" -- "I mean, I have already got my voter registration card. I have been registered since 1985. Why do I have to fill out an application for a new voter registration card?"

And they said because back in 1985 -- how many years ago is that? I can't even count. Back in 1985 when I filled out my voter registration application, the identification I put on there was my Social Security number, not my driver's license. And the application I filled out in 2022, and probably the previous years, too, I put my driver's license number and not my Social Security number.

Because since 1985, the Social Security

Administration has come out with the advice not to use your Social Security number for identification on things like that. I mean, you notice now, when you go to the doctor's office, they don't ask for your Social Security number. They ask your birthday.

So I thought it was not wise to put my Social Security number on this. And since I use my Texas driver's license -- I have to use it every time I vote now -- I thought, you know, they would have that record of my Texas driver's license, but no.

So I filled out -- you know, they sent me a new application. No. I didn't have to fill out a new application. I just had to fill out a new voter registration application, so then they had the voter registration application with my Social Security number on it that could match the application for the ballot by mail that I had already sent in.

Q But you didn't -- they didn't ask you to fill out a new application for ballot by mail?

A No. They used that one and they just compared

And then I began to hear on the news that mail-in ballots were being rejected. They eventually were rejected by the thousands. And I began to worry about my ballot that I had mailed in, so I did what I usually do. I called the Hays County election administrator's office and I said, "I have mailed in my mail-in ballot; I want to make sure that you have it and it's okay."

And they said, "Yes, we have it, and it's okay." So I was relieved for a few hours. That same day I get in the mail from the county election administrator's office that my mail-in ballot had been rejected.

O Okay.

A They didn't include a new ballot or anything. You know, it was just -- just rejected. And, obviously, it had to be fixed or whatever. So, again, I called the county election administrator's office and I said, you know, "I don't understand why my ballot was rejected, but, you know, what can I do?"

And the staff person I talked to said, "Well, it's getting kind of close to the election." I think it was a week or maybe a little more away. She said, "mail is so slow; if we mail the new ballot to you and then you mail it back, it might not get here in time, so you are going to need to come in person to fix it."

2.

The whole reason I was doing a mail-in ballot was so I wouldn't have to go in person, but I was so desperate to have my vote counted. I mean, that's been my life ever since we moved here. With the League of Women Voters and all the things I do with elections, I was determined to have my vote counted.

So I go over to the county election administrator's office, which is in our Government Center. And I pull in the parking lot and at the very entrance to the parking lot, of course, there were people out there with campaign signs. And the chair of the Democratic Party came over to my window and rolled down my -- the window -- no. That was another occasion. Never mind.

Anyway, so I drove in the parking lot and it was totally full. And I thought, Hey, this is a pretty good sign. All these people are voting?" Well, I found out later they were having two trials there and so that's what it was.

So I -- I drive my car over to the handicapped place, and every handicapped spot was taken. And so I pulled over to the side so I could see the handicapped spots and know when one pulled out. Now, a few of those were for curbside voting, that people were busy doing vote, actually, and one of the polling workers was sitting at the door, a man, and he motioned for me to go over to the table. And I said, "No, I am not here to vote; I'm here because I need to go to the county election administrator's office to fix a ballot." And I said, "What is the shortest way to get to the county election administrator's office?"

And he could see I had a cane. I was probably out of breath. And he said, "There is no short way.

You have to go down the hall and then you turn here and you turn" -- you know, he was giving me all this.

And I said, "But they said I could come in the back door."

And he said, "Well, they should not have told you that."

Well, there was a female election worker who heard all this and she came over and she said, "I will show her." So we went out of that room. Directly across the hall was an unmarked door, which was the county election administrator's office back door, and she opened it and took me in. Thank goodness.

And there were a bunch of people in there all working and one of the staff came over and I told her what I was there for and she brought me a chair because I really needed to sit down by then. And she went and looked up my ballot and -- the one that had been rejected -- and she brought it over to me.

Jeannie Lewis August 01, 2022

2.

And they had figured out this way to open up a part of the flap on the envelope to show some writing without actually unsealing the ballot itself in some way. I don't know how it was. But, anyway, she showed me this writing under the flap of the envelope where you lick and seal it. It was under the flap, and she showed me this writing and said, "You were supposed to put your ID number here."

And I said, "What?" The print was so small. It must have been 5 or 6 size. I mean, there was no way I could read any of that, much less think about looking under a flap for it. But there it was hidden -- hidden under the flap. And I found out later that's the problem most people had had with the ballot by mail is that those -- those hidden tiny prints.

Well, she showed me this line where I could put my Texas driver's license and my Social Security card number. Well, I had learned I better do the Social Security. So I knew that by heart. I wrote that down on the flap. And then I couldn't read the number on my driver's license, so I handed her my driver's license and had her read the number to me, and I wrote that number down.

Exhibit 35

DECLARATION OF CYNTHIA EDMONDSON

My name is Cynthia Edmondson. I am over the age of 18 and capable of making this declaration. The facts stated herein are within my personal knowledge:

- 1. I am a resident of Houston, Texas, and am an eligible voter in the state of Texas.
- 2. I am registered to vote in Harris County, where I reside.
- 3. I am 80 years old.
- 4. I believe I have been registered to vote in Texas since about the time I moved back to Texas in the 1970s. I try to vote in every election.
- 5. I am a member of the League of Women Voters of Texas. I have been a member for several years.
- 6. I have been voting by mail since approximately 2008, when I turned 65 years old.
- 7. I live with multiple sclerosis. My symptoms would make it difficult for me to vote in person. As a result of multiple sclerosis, I have difficulty walking and balancing. I am prone to falling, so I use a walker for assistance and a wheelchair for longer distances. I also get tired easily and use the restroom frequently; it would be difficult for me to stand in a long line to vote in person. Multiple sclerosis also causes my handwriting to be shaky and unclear.
- 8. On or about January 3, 2022, I submitted my application to vote by mail in the March 1, 2022 primary election. On that application, I included my driver's license number. I did not include my social security number because the application forms said to only do so if I did not have a driver's license number.

- 9. A few days later, the Harris County Elections Department called me, and an employee told me that the driver's license number I included on my application did not match the number that I had used when I registered to vote. The employee I spoke with advised me to include both my driver's license number and social security number in my application to vote by mail.
- 10. On or about January 7, 2022, the Harris County Elections Department sent me a new application to vote by mail. I once again filled out the application to vote by mail. I followed the advice I had received from the Harris County Elections

 Department to include my social security number on the application form in addition to my driver's license number. Doing so made me uncomfortable because the form said to only include a social security number if I did not have a driver's license number. Because I do have a Texas driver's license, it felt wrong not following the instructions as written.
- 11. Afterwards, I received my ballot to vote by mail. On my ballot, I included both my driver's license and social security number. I believe my ballot was counted.
- 12. During my earlier phone call, the Harris County Elections Department had also advised me to update my voter registration to include both my driver's license number and social security number, but not to do so until after my vote-by-mail application was processed, so as not to disrupt that process. After I returned my ballot, I updated my voter registration.
- 13. I was annoyed and confused throughout my voting experience. The process was cumbersome, and it felt unfair to have to figure out why my application was rejected and how to fix it. It felt like the form was intentionally tricky to prevent people from voting.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF PATRICIA BUCK

My name is Patricia Buck. I am over the age of 18 and capable of making this declaration. The facts stated herein are within my personal knowledge:

- 1. I am a resident of Houston, Texas, and I am an eligible voter in the state of Texas.
- 2. I am registered to vote in Harris County, where I reside.
- 3. I was born in 1952.
- 4. I have been registered to vote in Texas since approximately 1998. I try to vote in every election.
- 5. I am a member of the League of Women Voters of Texas and have been a member for several years.
- 6. I have always voted in person in the past, but in 2022 my husband and I planned to begin voting by mail.
- 7. My husband and I wanted to vote by mail because we both have health conditions that make it difficult for us to stand in line at a voting location. We both have diabetes, and my husband has congestive heart failure. Sometimes voting locations have chairs to sit in while you are waiting, but often the only option is to stand in line. In order to comfortably and safely vote in person, we often have to make several trips to a voting location until we see the line is short enough for us to vote.
- 8. Because of these issues with voting in person, my husband and I started the process of applying to vote by mail in 2022. However, when I received the application, I saw that it asked for our social security numbers. I also learned that the mail-in ballot requires voters to include their social security number on the outside of the ballot's carrier envelope. My husband and I have always been taught that it is crucial not to share our social security numbers with others, and to keep them private. I have similar concerns about sharing my driver's license number because of potential identity theft issues.

- 9. In 2022, I also heard reports about high rates of mail-in applications and ballots being rejected. I was also concerned that if we voted by mail, our votes might not be counted because of these rejection issues.
- 10. Even though voting in person is difficult due to our physical issues, my husband and I did not go forward with applying to vote by mail because we were scared by the requirements to list our social security and driver's license numbers and reports of high rejection rates. Because voting in person is so difficult due to our health, I wish we could vote by mail without these concerns.
- 11. Instead, my husband and I voted in person during elections in 2022 and will continue to vote in person because of these concerns.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

- 8. I voted by mail in the 2022 general elections. I voted by mail because I was away from my county of residence while attending college at the University of Washington.
- 9. On or about October 4, 2022, I printed out an application to vote by mail in the November 8, 2022 general election.
- 10. That same evening, I filled out my application and then mailed it to the Harris County Elections Administrator's Office the following day on October 5, 2022.
- 11. I received a letter from the Harris County Elections Administrator's Office, dated October 13, 2022, at my home residence in Harris County as well as my Seattle - mailing address, notifying me that my application for a ballot by mail had been rejected.

- 12. The document attached as Exhibit A to this Declaration is a true and correct copy of the letter I received from the Harris County Elections Administrator's Office notifying me of my rejected application for ballot by mail.
- 13. The letter stated that my Personal Identification Number is not associated with my voter record and that my application was defective because my voter registration record did not have a proper identification number, even though the identification numbers I provided on my application were all correct.
- 14. Specifically, I had provided my Texas driver's license number, my Social Security number, and my Texas Voter Registration number (VUID) on my application for a ballot by mail.
- 15. In the days that followed, I was preparing to update my voter registration record and reapply for a ballot to vote by mail. On October 27, 2022, my family received a packet at my home residence in Harris County with the mail ballot I had applied for from the Harris County Elections Administrator's Office.
- 16. My family mailed the Harris County mail ballot packet to me at my Washington State address, and I received it on November 1, 2022.
- 17. Because it appeared to me that the Harris County Elections Administrator's Office had fixed the ID issue on its own and evidently approved my mail ballot application, I did not proceed with updating my voter registration record or completing the reapplication process for a ballot by mail.

- 18. I was still confused as to why my ID numbers were initially considered incorrect, and why my mail ballot was subsequently sent to my Harris County home address instead of my Washington State mailing address.
- 19. Although I only submitted one application to vote by mail, the rejection letter and the subsequent mailing of a mail ballot to my Harris County address instead of my Washington State address caused me a significant delay in voting.
- 20. On November 4, 2022, I mailed my ballot to the Harris County Elections Administrator's Office, one month after I had started the process to vote by mail.

- 21. After mailing in my ballot and through the hours after the election ended, I checked the status of my ballot through the Harris County Mail Ballot Activity Lookup portal on the Harris Votes website, which indicated that my ballot had not been received or counted. To this date, it is not clear to me whether my ballot was counted because the portal does not show that my vote was received or counted.
- 22. It is my belief that my mail ballot was ultimately not counted due to the delays incurred by the apparent confusion over the ID numbers on my application or voter registration record.
- 23. My extended family includes many longtime voters who vote in nearly every election. I have family members who are also members of the League of Women Voters of Texas, and I have been raised to consider voting an important civic duty and an inherent right. During high school I worked at a polling place and I have helped to register voters because I am a strong supporter of having equal access to voting for all persons who are eligible.

- 24. My experience trying to vote by mail in Texas was extremely stressful and confusing and I came close to giving up on the whole process. But because my family taught me the importance of voting, I tried my best to proceed with the process, with my family's support, to get my vote in on time.
- 25. Because I will still be attending college out of state this year and next year, I intend to vote by mail in the future, but I worry that my voting rights will be violated if my future mail ballots are not counted again due to issues with the current identification requirements for voting by mail in Texas.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

Executed on May 18, 2023.

DECLARATION OF DEBORAH CHEN

My name is Deborah Chen. I am over the age of 18 and capable of making this declaration.

The facts stated herein are within my personal knowledge.

- I am a lawyer and the Civic Engagement Programs Director for OCA-Greater Houston (OCA-GH). OCA-GH is the Greater Houston arm of the national organization OCA – Asian Pacific American Advocates. I am also the Executive Vice President of OCA – Asian Pacific American Advocates.
- 2. OCA-GH is a non-profit organization with its main offices in Houston, Texas.
- 3. OCA-GH is a non-partisan organization whose mission is to advance the social, political, and economic well-being of the Asian American and Pacific Islander ("AAPI") community, primarily in Harris, Brazoria, and Fort Bend counties, with a focus on developing advocacy, leadership, and civic engagement participation within that community. The four main goals of OCA-GH's mission are to (1) advocate for social justice, equal opportunity, and fair treatment; (2) promote civic participation, education, and leadership; (3) advance coalitions and community building; and (4) foster cultural heritage.
- 4. OGA-GH has 19 board members, approximately 160 dues-paying members who elect leadership, and several hundred volunteer members who work to fundraise and implement OCA-GH's programs throughout the greater Houston area. Many of OCA-GH's volunteer members are high school and college students. As volunteer members participate in activities they may be promoted to OCA-GH staff, meaning they are paid wages for their work. For example, a college student who consistently participates in OCA-GH's door knocking or field campaigns may - be promoted to "Team Lead," and then be responsible for managing others in those programs.

- 5. OCA-GH offers a variety of programs to empower the AAPI community it serves, including leadership training; education workshops; arts and cultural events; advocacy campaigns, including creating and distributing fliers in multiple languages; facilitating voting, including by providing rides to the polls and hosting candidate forums; voter registration & voter pledge drives; legal clinics; internships; scholarships; mentorship and civic engagement; and monitoring of and advocacy for national and local public policy. As part of its efforts to increase civic engagement, OCA-GH commits ample member time and resources each year to conducting citizenship drives that help hundreds of AAPI community members gain citizenship; providing voter education and civic engagement trainings; and registering those new citizens to vote and providing them with voter education trainings after they gain citizenship.
- 6. To meet its objective to increase voter participation, OCA-GH engages in and promotes a wide variety of voter registration, voter engagement, voter education, get-out-the-vote, exit polling, and election protection efforts across Greater Houston, including in the Sugar Land region of Fort Bend County. For example, OCA-GH has coordinated with Harris County to provide public demonstrations of how to use voting machines; recruited volunteers to take seniors to go vote; assisted seniors in early voting; directed voters to the League of Women Voters' voter guide (and originally funded LWV to translate their voter guide into Chinese); coordinated with EMGAGE and other AAPI community organizations to host - events to promote civic empowerment; and partnered with the Asian American Legal Defense and Education Fund national exit polling and election protection/election observation programs.

- 7. A substantial portion of OCA-GH's membership, and the AAPI community it serves, are elderly and/or have limited English proficiency ("LEP"). For example, many AAPIs in the Greater Houston area sponsor their parents to live with them in multigenerational households pursuant to family-based immigration visas. Similarly, much of the Vietnamese community, which is very large in Houston, came to the United States as adults after the Vietnam war, and are now elderly. OCA-GH therefore focuses in part on senior outreach and has made such efforts both pre- and post-COVID, including through a health coalition group that involves arranging monthly bus trips for seniors for recreation, seminars, and health fairs.
- 8. OCA-GH's mission has been frustrated by SB 1's new ID matching requirement that a voter provide an identification number that matches what is in their voter file on their application for a ballot by mail ("ABBM") and carrier envelope.
- 9. OCA-GH has many members who have voted by mail in the past, as have many members of the AAPI community OCA-GH serves. Many of these voters qualify due to age, disability (typically low vision), or both. Many are also LEP voters.
- 10. Many of these elderly OCA-GH and community members have expressed fears that they will have their ABBM or mail-ballot rejected under SB 1 and that they won't receive notification about such errors in time to fix them before the election. They have also expressed fears that they won't remember which number they used to register to vote, or that they will suffer identity theft due to putting their - identification numbers on an envelope going out into the public with no idea who will see it.

- 11. Historically, OCA-GH would have provided mail-in voting assistance, including voter education efforts regarding SB 1's ID matching requirements, that would help assuage these fears. As the result of other SB 1 provisions, however, OCA-GH no longer provides this sort of mail-in voting assistance.
- 12. Specifically, and as relevant to OCA-GH's challenge to SB 1's ID matching requirements: Before SB 1's passage, OCA-GH arranged and publicized in-person candidate forums at several locations frequented by the community, like the Chinese Community Center and the library. Attendance at these forums varied from approximately 100 to 400 or more people. OCA-GH would set up a table at these candidate forums and provide voting assistance to any OCA-GH member or community member seeking assistance for any reason, including due to a language barrier, to low vision, or to being unfamiliar with the voting process as a first-time AAPI voter. This included helping voters complete their ABBMs, mail-ballots, and registration forms, to explaining the election process and what was on the ballot. Those seeking assistance were frequently limited English proficiency ("LEP") voters, elderly voters, or both. OCA-GH routinely provided the same sort of voting assistance with ABBMs and mail-in ballots to any OCA-GH member or community member who requested it during OCA-GH's voting machine demonstrations, voter training events, frequent door knocking and field campaigns, and exit polling survey tables. OCA-GH also routinely held in-person mail-in voting training sessions at which it would explain how to obtain an ABBM and vote by mail to

- OCA-GH members and community members and maintained a presence at the Tracy Gee Community Center, and at early voting centers, to provide mail-in voting assistance to AAPI seniors—frequently LEP or low vision voters—who sought out OCA-GH's help.
- 13. Before SB 1's passage, OCA-GH paid its staff and members competitive wages for their work during these in-person candidate forums, voting machine demonstrations, door knocking and field campaigns, exit polling, and other activities, as well as provided staff and members with bottled water, sports drinks, snacks, and other forms of refreshment in exchange for their services. OCA-GH also provided food and refreshments to all attendees at its election-related community events, to encourage staff, member, and other attendee participation; to make things easier on attendees who might be pressed for time; to show appreciation for the community; and because providing food and refreshment is a common cultural courtesy.
- 14. Following the passage of SB 1, however, OCA-GH has made the organization-wide decision to cease providing mail-in voting assistance, as well as severely scaled back its activities during which mail-in ballots may be present, due to the fear of criminal prosecution pursuant to SB 1 Sections 6.06 and 7.04. Specifically, OCA-GH fears that by paying its staff and members who provide mail-in voting assistance, or by supplying them with food of drinks—or by doing the same for staff and members engaged in various election-related community events and activities—it is providing "compensation" in violation of SB 1 Section 6.06 (Texas

- Election Code § 86.0105) and SB 1 Section 7.04 (Texas Election Code § 276.015), and placing itself and its members at risk of criminal prosecution.
- 15. As a result, to counteract the effects of SB 1's ID matching provisions, OCA-GH devotes resources to encouraging voters to go to vote in person—thereby avoiding both the ID-matching and criminal liability problems altogether—and has spent, and will continue to spend, time educating them on how, where, and when to vote in person to avoid the rejection of their ABBM or mail-in ballot. OCA-GH's decision to encourage voters who qualify to vote by mail to instead vote in person was bolstered by seeing how many people had their mail-ballot materials rejected during the March 2022 primary election.
- 16. This remains true even though many elderly OCA-GH members and AAPI community members are at elevated risk of and seriously fear contracting COVID in their vulnerable and advanced age. Despite this, these voters are willing to take the risk of voting in person because they want to participate in democracy and do their civic duty to vote. OCA-GH members Sam and Elizabeth Hwong illustrate this. The Hwongs are married and are both in their eighties. Prior to passage of SB 1 both voted by mail, and both were eligible to vote by mail during the 2022 elections. However, despite the significant personal risk of voting in person, the Hwongs both chose to cast their votes in person during the March and November elections because they feared that their mail-balloting materials would be rejected due to SB 1. Both would have voted by mail if not for SB 1.
- 17. It is unconscionable to require elderly voters to choose between putting themselves at risk of identity theft and disenfranchisement in order to vote safely at home or putting themselves at risk of COVID infection to avoid SB1's identification number requirements.

18. It is critical to OCA-GH's mission that the process of voting by mail is as safe and secure as possible, and that every vote cast by AAPI voters in Texas is counted.
SB1 is disenfranchising the OCA-GH and Texas AAPI community. The disenfranchisement of any AAPI Texas voter impairs OCA-GH's ability to achieve its goal of civic participation.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on May 22, 2023.

- Q. Is OCA-Greater Houston a membership organization?
- A. Yes.
- Q. How many members does OCA-Greater Houston have approximately?
 - A. Paid, voting members, around 160 or so.
 - Q. So 160 paid members -- paid, voting members?
- 11 A. Yes.
- 12 Q. And how many --
- A. Depending on the time of year, it could go as high as 200-something. But average, I'd say 160. I don't know the exact amount right now.
- 16 Q. An approximation is perfectly fine.
- And how many, roughly, nonpaid, voting -18 nonvoting members do you have?
- A. Nonvoting members, we consider to be any person who participates in our programs, is a volunteer. It could be a client that we have provided services for.
- 22 | So that could be in -- several hundred.
- Q. And where are these members located?
- A. The vast majority are in the Greater Houston area. Our seniors that we provide assistance to generally are around the Asiatown area or in the surrounding areas, typically from Sugar Land and/or the Alief/Sharpstown/Gulfton, some as far away as Katy. Our student ment- -- I'm sorry -- our student members -- we do a lot of youth trainings. Those literally are in the hundreds, are all around the city, mostly on the west side of the city.

- Q. So Harris County-centered?
- A. Harris County-centered is the bulk of it. But, you know, we have had students who, you know, come from, you know, Fort Bend County or Brazoria County, from Sugar Land and Pearland.
- 13 | Q. So you --

- A. But the bulk of them are in Harris County.
- Q. So you made the distinction between paid, voting members and then the nonvoting members, people who either volunteered or received services; is that correct?
- A. Yes. Or participate in our programs.
 - Q. So would you consider those more clients?
- A. Not really. Because, you know, for example, a lot of our students, they volunteer at different events.
- 23 | We -- I wouldn't consider them a client so much as
- 24 | they're, you know, just younger members. They're future
- 25 | leaders. We --

- 1 Q. Part of the community?
- 2 A. Part of the community.
- Q. And I think you had mentioned this before, but do members pay dues?
 - A. Voting members pay dues.
- Q. And do voting members elect the OCA-Greater Houston's leadership?
- 8 A. Correct.
- 9 Q. Do they elect board members?
- 10 A. Yes.

5

- 11 Q. And do they elect officers?
- 12 A. Members elect the chapter president. The board members elect the other officers.
- Q. Is OCA-Greater Houston's leadership made up of members?
- 16 A. Yes.
- Q. And how are the members involved in the organization's activities?
- And I'm talking specifically about the voting members.
- A. Typically, they are -- voting members tend to be a little -- they tend to fall into two buckets.
- 23 They're either much more active, or they're -- simply
- 24 they're "I just want to support the work that you do. I
- 25 | don't have the time to be involved, but I believe in 1 what you do." 2 Ο. And who manages the day-to-day operations of OCA-Greater Houston? 3 I manage a large portion of it. 4 And the chapter president, I imagine, takes the 5 0. 6 rest? As well as other board members. Α. 8 Okay. Ο. They take on different things. Α. 10 And how many people are on the board? Q. Right now, there are 19 or 20 board members. 11 Α. 12 And do they all have office -- do they all hold Ο. 13 an officer position? 14 They are all board members, and then there No. 15 are specific officers of president, vice president, 16 treasurer, secretary. 17 And are they in addition to the board members, 18 or are they among the board members? 19 Α. Among the board members. 20 Ο. And you already mentioned that the board 21 members are selected by the voting members, and the --22 Chapter president is --Α.

A. Our board member who is, you know, active with exit surveys are both Rogene -- she has been active with exit surveys in the past -- as well as Cecil Fong.

THE REPORTER: Can you spell that?

THE WITNESS: C-E-C-I-L F-O-N-G.

A. Other board members who have helped with the exit surveys are Cecilia Pham. That's P-H-A-M. Those are the two that come right off the top of my head.

Cecil Fong has also been the -- one of the board members who's been very active with -- in the past with helping to take seniors to go vote or being an assister at a voting location.

- Q. What is OCA-Greater Houston's mission?
- A. It's a four-prong mission. It's actually very broad. And I -- I should know this right off the top of my head, and I don't know it off the top of my head.

 But I'm fairly certain we have this typed.
 - Q. I'm pretty sure it's in the interrogatories.
- A. Somewhere in here. I know our taglines, in raising the hopes and --
 - Q. If you look at Interrogatory 5.
 - A. Okay.
 - Q. Interrogatory 5, Response A.
- 25 A. Yes.

1 O. Provides four bullet points. 2 "To advocate for social justice, equality" -- "equal opportunity, and fair treatment; to 3 promote civic participation, education, and leadership; (3) to advance coalitions and community buildings; and 5 (4) to foster cultural heritage." 6 7 Would that be an accurate summation? Α. Yes. 8 9 Now, in your second amended complaint, it says, 10 OCA-Greater Houston is a "civil rights organization of community advocates dedicated to advancing the social, 11 political, and economic well-being of Americans of Asian 12 13 and Pacific Island descent." 14 That is in paragraph 14. 15 Α. I'm sorry. And that is Exhibit... 2. 16 Q. 17 Α. 2. 18 O. My apologies. I should have specified. 19 Α. No worries. Okay. 20 O. Second sentence. 21 Is that an accurate description as well? 2.2 Α. Yes. 23 And you'd agree that Asian and Pacific 24 Island-descent Americans are a diverse population? 25 Α. Yes.

DECLARATION OF ELIZABETH HWONG

My name is Elizabeth Hwong. I am over the age of 18 and capable of making this declaration. The facts stated herein are within my personal knowledge.

- I am a resident of Harris County, Texas and eligible to vote in Harris County, Texas.
- 2. I am 80 years old.
- 3. I am a board member of OCA-GH.
- 4. I immigrated to the United States in 1965 as a student.
- 5. I became a citizen in 1973 and registered to vote Texas shortly afterwards.
- I regularly voted in person since the mid-1970's, and by mail for around two decades, when Texas first allowed seniors to vote by mail so we don't have to go out.
- 7. I have a Texas Driver's License and a voter registration card.

8. I stayed inside since January 2020 because I have an elevated risk and seriously fear contracting COVID due to my advanced age.

9. I was willing to take the risk of voting in person in 2022 because I want to participate in democracy and do my civic duty to vote.

10. I prefer to vote by mail to avoid any health risk and because it is more convenient for senior citizens like me.

11. I fear that my vote by mail application would be rejected because I don't remember which number I used when I registered to vote in the 1970's.

12. I fear that I wouldn't be notified in time about any mismatch in the number I used to register to vote in the 1970's and the number I use in my vote by mail application, in time to fix the error before the election.

13. I fear identity theft due to putting my social security number on the vote by mail application envelope going out into the public with no protection or idea of who could see it.

14. I continue to have these fears and will take the risk of voting in person, although I would vote by mail in the future, if not for SB1, because it is safer and more convenient for me as a senior citizen.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on May 24, 2023.

DECLARATION OF BOB KAFKA

My name is Bob Kafka. I am over the age of 21 and fully competent to make this declaration.

Under penalty of perjury, I declare the following based upon my personal knowledge:

- 1. I am the coordinator of REVUP-Texas ("REVUP"), as well as one of three Board members.
- 2. REVUP stands for Register, Educate, Vote, Use Power.
- 3. REVUP is a statewide, non-partisan, nonprofit grassroots organization that was formed in 2015.
- 4. REVUP is a member-based organization whose members are primarily individuals with disabilities. REVUP currently has about 500 members spread out across Texas. REVUP members with disabilities participate in and help guide the direction of REVUP's efforts.
- 5. REVUP's members include voters who are eligible to vote by mail.
- 6. Since its inception, REVUP's mission has been to empower persons with disabilities through voter registration and assistance, issue advocacy, mobilization and organizing. REVUP typically engages in a variety of advocacy efforts on behalf of its members, which includes supporting certain policies at local and state legislative bodies, as well as outreach to members to support these policies. This advocacy involves outreach to its members and others in the disability community through in-person events and trainings.

- 7. A primary focus of accomplishing REVUP's mission is registering persons with disabilities, and their allies, to vote. REVUP therefore spends significant time to get as many of these individuals registered to vote as it can. A corollary focus is educating REVUP members and the broader disability community about issues that impact their lives.
- 8. To further REVUP's mission to register persons with disabilities, REVUP participates in National Voter Registration Day, and National Disability Voter Registration Week, which is coordinated nationwide by the American Association of People with Disabilities.
- 9. To further REVUP's mission to educate its members and the disability community about registering to vote and about issues that impact them, REVUP has a dedicated website, a podcast series entitled "Use Your Power," and a presence on social media (e.g., Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter).
- 10. REVUP also produces PSAs to educate and inform its members and the broader disability community about voter registration and issues that impact their lives.
- 11. SB 1's passage, however, forced REVUP to shift its focus away from its established voter registration and education efforts and instead focus on educating voters about SB 1's changes to the mail-in-voting process, changes that place new barriers on getting a mail-in ballot.
- 12. Prior to SB 1's enactment, REVUP's plans were to devote substantial time and resources on educating its members and the disability community about issues that affect their lives. Instead, much time and resources were diverted to producing and disseminating podcasts and informational materials focused on SB 1, including changes and barriers to the new vote-by-mail process.

DocuSign Envelope ID: B7731DE6-DC7E-41A8-84AA-BA17969495A8

13. Educating REVUP's members and others about the risks of improper rejection of a mail-in ballot hampers REVUP's mission of expanding voter registration and increasing voter turnout of persons with disabilities.

14. REVUP has very limited resources—members do not pay dues—so that time and resources spent producing and disseminating informational materials and podcasts, answering calls and emails, and updating its website to explain the changes and barriers to mail-in-voting, are resources it would otherwise spend elsewhere.

15. REVUP's voter registration and get out the vote efforts, as well as its goal of empowering the disability community to become a constituency, are undercut when persons with disabilities vote-by-mail but have their ballots or applications rejected due to an immaterial identification issue.

16. Because of SB 1 and its changes to the mail-in-voting process, REVUP has had to expend some of its extremely limited financial resources on getting its website updated and for American Sign Language interpreters for its SB 1 podcasts and trainings.

17. Unless and until SB 1's vote-by-mail requirements are changed, REVUP's voter registration and get out the vote efforts and its policy advocacy will continue to suffer because

REVUP will need to continue to spend time and resources educating and warning its members about these onerous and immaterial requirements.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on May 22, 2023 |, 11:25 AM, GDT, Texas.

- 6 on behalf of REVUP, right?
 - A. Correct.
- Q. First off, can you describe to the Court what REVUP
- 9 | is?
- 10 A. REVUP is a statewide nonpartisan, nonprofit created
- 11 to increase the involvement of people with disabilities and
- 12 | allies in the electoral process. REVUP is -- stands for
- 13 | Register, Educate, Vote, Use your Power. The disability vote
- 14 has not been seen as an entity to have involvement in the
- 15 | electoral process. So that was why REVUP was created and its
- 16 | mission.
- 17 Q. So you see there where it says Topics For
- 18 | Examination at the top of the page?
- 19 A. Right.
- Q. Okay. We have Topics 1 through 10 on the first
- 21 page. Do you see that?
- 22 A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Are you here to testify on behalf of REVUP for
- 24 | Topics 1 through 10?
- 25 A. Yes, sir.

1 And actually the Governor election when Greq 2 Abbott was running against Wendy Davis, uh, it became apparent that this was going to be a high-visibility election, 3 especially with, you know, then Attorney General Abbott being a person with a disability and then Wendy Davis being very high 5 visibility as her time in the legislature. So that we thought 6 it was time to start to create an entity that would focus on, in a nonpartisan way, the disability vote and to sort of begin to make the point that even though people with disabilities do 9 10 vote, the candidates and policymakers don't really think of it as an entity. So that really was the motivation for developing 11 12 REVUP.

- Q. So what year did the organization REVUP actually form?
 - A. 2015.

14

15

16

17

18

20

- Q. And you mentioned it's nonpartisan. So, for instance, in the circumstance with Governor Abbott -- now Governor Abbott and then I believe Representative Davis REVUP didn't take a position with regard to any partisan issue?
- A. No. We're strictly nonpartisan. We reach out to both parties equally.
- Q. When REVUP was formed, can you tell me a little bit about the structure of the organization?
- A. Yeah. We have a three-member board that, you know, that -- basically a president, secretary and a director. And

Bob Kafka April 07, 2022

1 they meet on an annual basis. We have a membership and that --

- the membership doesn't elect the board. The board is
- self-electing and basically does all the legal requirements in
- terms of financial, signing contracts and such.

- When you say the members don't elect the board, how does REVUP fund board members?
- Basically, our -- we outreach in terms of people who Α. are interested. And the -- since the board elects itself, if people are interested, that is brought up. And if there's going to be any turnover, that is how, you know, we would consider a new board member. And the board can expand. Up to now we have not expanded past the three board members.
 - With regard to funding, how is REVUP funded?
- It's totally grass roots. We don't get any federal, state or local funds. We're a relatively small nonprofit. would like to say that we punch above our weight in terms of influence with very little funding.
- Let me ask you this. So I don't usually share personal details about myself in deposition, but I'll share this one because I think it might be relevant to what we're doing here. So once upon a time I was on the United Way board. And one of the things United Way did was they funded smaller organizations within communities to see that they had funding for whatever services they were providing.
 - So when you say you're grass roots only -- uh,

1 the example of the United Way, you don't have organizations like United Way or any other large organization funding you?

A. No.

3

5

6

9

10

- Q. How many members does REVUP have?
- A. We approximate 500. And that's because our membership criteria is being involved, so we have to approximate. But what we have said when asked, approximately 500 that we have an impact around. They don't have a membership list per se.
- Q. Well, if you don't have a membership list, how do you determine how many members roughly that you have?
- 12 We use an interesting concept that we're actually Α. 13 kind of proud of. The way we have organized and the way we have -- in fact I said -- punch above our weight is that we 14 send out information through organizations, individuals. And 15 16 then they disseminate. And people who get involved in the 17 organization we consider members. Though it's not the 18 traditional way members are seen, it has really gotten us a way 19 of, in our mission, of educating and disseminating information. And so that is why when we say we have approximately 500 -- it 20 21 could be much larger than that because of the way we define 2.2 "member."
 - Q. Do members pay dues?
- 24 A. No, no dues.
- 25 | O. Do members donate?

submit things. I would hesitate a guess.

Q. Let's talk a little bit about how your organization is divvied up. Now, I understood you to say that the goal of REVUP is to have influence on, in a nonpartisan way, policy decisions that impact issues around people with disabilities.

- A. Uh-huh.
- O. Is that fair?
- A. Yeah.

- Q. Programmatically, how is REVUP divided?
- A. Basically, we use the acronym as the way we design what we do both in terms of our advocacy for -- or the involvement. Obviously register. So voter registration programs and outreach to try to get as many people with disabilities and allies registered.

Then, which is a major piece of our work, is educating the disability community on some of the issues that are impacting their lives. Even though they know it personally, uh, we talk about how those are being impacted by policymaking.

And then the V, the vote, the get out the vote, we have a big push. So most of our work is focused around those three areas. And since voting is our prime mission, that's actually how the group got named and -- you know, in its goal and mission.

Q. With regard to registration, what activities in the last six to seven years has REVUP engaged in?

Α. Yeah. We participate basically with register to It's an online attempt to register people. We have developed a relationship with that organization. Especially because of the pandemic, in-person registration drives have been difficult. And so we were trying to think of a way to be able to continue to outreach during a period of time when there were not going to be a lot of in-person, especially since people with disabilities are more vulnerable. And I say that because -- you know, we have tried to shun the term "vulnerable" for years, but the pandemic has flipped that on its head. So we had to find ways to register people to get them involved. And so that area.

We also participate in an annual National Disability Voter Registration Week which is coordinated by the American Association of People with Disabilities nationwide. And then we also participate in the National Disability Reg -not Disability. National Voter Registration Day which is held. So we have tried to target our registration attempts focused on both local and national registration drives.

- So, if I understand you correctly, you have engaged Q. in online registration efforts?
- 23 Yeah, as much as possible. Texas doesn't have Α. 24 online voter registration, but there is a way that -- legally 25 to be able to do it so that people can use an app. Then we

Q. All right. I wanted to make sure those acronyms got into the record for the benefit of the Court.

So let me see if I can focus this down. With regard to education, can you tell me about what REVUP does with regard to education as it relates to voting?

- A. Oh, well, we send out inform -- well, first we have our social media. We have a website. We have a podcast called Use Your Power, and we have done webinars. We have on our website some of the things that we have done in the past, specifically on voting. I apologize because I thought you meant what did we do in terms of education on issues. So I apologize for the long soliloquy on issues there. But -- so basically information fliers in terms of that. And that gets put on all our social media. We have an Instagram and a YouTube. We have done quite a bit and I think we have submitted some of the media that we have done to promote voting both -- again, in the three areas, registra -- mostly registration and getting out the vote.

 - A. I don't believe so.
 - Q. So no Twitter?
- A. Oh, actually we do. I'm showing my age. I apologize. We don't have TikTok. That's the one thing I do know. I really am -- show my age about social media. But, you know, we have young people that are starting to bring me into the 21st Century I suppose.
- Q. Yeah, well, don't feel too bad. I'm graying myself,
 - So let's talk a little bit about the social media. So what kind of information do you put on your social media?
 - A. All relevant to the three -- you know, in the acronym. Power, just one example. We have had podcasts on various different issues in terms of -- we have had different groups that have been affected by voting and giving some of the issues.
- On Facebook we put all our documents and some of our media that we develop, specifically PSAs. You know, that's the type of information we put on there mostly, again, all

- 2 about, as best we can, the dates. And, you know, we hope that
- 3 | that information is then disseminated through the local

- Q. Do you send out any hard copy documents with regard to voting?
- 7 A. Very -- very little in terms of hard copies. We do 8 most of it through -- you know, electronically.
 - Q. Do you do any trainings on voting?
- 10 A. We have done -- I think we have done a webinar on --
- 11 | I don't know if you would call it a training per se, but
- 12 | basically on -- mostly informational type webinar.
- Q. When did that webinar take place?
- 14 A. I would have to go back and check if I may.
- Q. Are there any other efforts -- let's see if we can
- 16 go through. We have talked about social media. You use
- 17 | Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, YouTube, right?
- 18 A. Yeah.
- 19 Q. You also have a podcast?
- 20 A. Yeah.
- 21 Q. Is that available on Apple?
- A. No, it's just available on our website. And we disseminate it through just our -- the networks on e-mail and things like that.
- Q. With regard to YouTube, do you post videos?

A. Yeah. Again, I would have to go back and ask the people, but we also put -- the podcast is -- excuse me. The podcast is also -- excuse me -- is also shown on the YouTube

- 9 A. Right.
 - Q. Since Senate Bill 1 passed and was signed by the Governor, have you had to amend any of that?
 - A. Well, we have had to move our focus. You know, again, when I started going through the litany of education issues, a lot of that has taken a back seat since SB 1. I think about five or six of our podcasts have related directly to Senate Bill 1 where our original plans was to start doing a much more intensive, you know, education on those issues that I mentioned previously in terms of that. So Senate Bill 1 has taken, you know, at least on the podcasts and our document development, much more of our time.
 - Q. Let me see if I can ask the question a different way because I think what I'm asking is slightly different than what you're answering.
 - A. Okay.
- 25 Q. Maybe I can break this out just a little bit.

1 REVUP posted on Facebook before Senate Bill 1 2 passed, right? 3 Α. Yes. So in the time period between Senate Bill 1 passing 4 Q. 5 and 2015, REVUP made posts on Facebook? Α. Sure. 6 7 Have you made posts on Facebook since Senate Bill 1 0. 8 passed? 9 Α. Yes. 10 0. Did you have to go back and change any of the Facebook posts on account of Senate Bill 1 passing? 11 12 No, but it was -- you know, the focus of the posts Α. 13 were different because of Senate Bill 1 because of the need to focus on -- because we were getting guite a bit of calls --14 15 phone calls from people, you know, because -- you know, as --16 you know, the news was so focused on the voting bill, you know, 17 and the -- the special sessions that -- so that -- that really 18 changed our -- you know, how our time and resources were spent. 19 0. With regard to your website, did you have to change anything related to voting on your website on account of --20 21 Α. Well --2.2 On account of Senate Bill 1? 0. 23 I mean, Senate Bill 1 caused us actually to Α. Yeah. 24 sit down with our webmaster. And we had to spend -- we're 25 still in the process of spending time developing so that we

1 | could specifically get more information targeted to what the

- 2 | new SB 1 because, again, there was such misinformation. And
- 3 the chilling effect that we got just -- just from the multitude
- 4 of phone calls that we got from around the state and feedback
- 5 that we got from various different organizations about, you
- 6 know, so many of the sections of the bill, you know, because
- 7 people are not policy wonks. So that -- that is why we spend
- 8 an inordinate amount of time with our webmaster about re --
- 9 redesigning so that we could focus on that.
- 10 Q. What's your webmaster's name?
- 11 A. His name is (mumbling) Nathan Freeze.
- 12 Q. Freeze like you freeze an ice cube or Friese as in

- 15 | O. -- F-r-i-e-s-e?
- 16 A. Like an ice cube.
- 17 | 0. Got you.
- 18 | With regard to your Twitter account, I presume
- 19 | REVUP posted on Twitter before Senate Bill 1?
- 20 A. Yes.
- 21 Q. Have you had to go back and change any of your
- 22 | tweets on account of Senate Bill 1?
- 23 A. The only way I can answer that is that just what the
- 24 | -- what the Twitter type things were posted. And, again, I
- 25 | don't -- one of our volunteers posts that. But, again, it would be posting more of our SB 1 focus than on other areas, which we would have done had SB 1 not been, you know, enacted.

- Q. With regard to Instagram, did REVUP post on Instagram before Senate Bill 1?
 - A. Yes.

- Q. Have you had to go back and amend anything you've put on Instagram?
 - A. Just the same answer basically. It's what was put on, you know, since SB 1 rather than -- we continued to do Instagram, but it was the content of what was placed on SB 1.
 - Q. I want to make sure that the record is clear on this. So the answer is no, you haven't had to go back and change anything that you posted before Senate Bill 1?
 - A. Well, we didn't -- we continued to post. The content of what we posted changed because it was more focused on SB 1.
 - Q. Right. My question -- all I'm asking is: Have you gone back and changed anything that you posted prior to Senate Bill 1 on account of Senate Bill 1? Let me see if I can put it like this.
 - A. Okay. If you could explain that.
- Q. Yeah. If you posted something about voting in 2020, have you had to go back and change what you posted in 2020 on account of Senate Bill 1?
 - A. Only the -- not changing maybe what we posted in 1 2020, but what we posted post-SB 1 was focused on SB 1.

2 0. Got you. So I think it's fair to say for Facebook, Twitter, your website, Instagram, YouTube, your podcasts your position is your focus has been geared towards Senate Bill 1 since it passed. Is that fair?

- Α. I think, yeah, predominantly, yes.
- But it's also true that you haven't had to go back 0. and change anything on any of that social media that predated Senate Bill 1 on account of Senate Bill 1?
- Only where it related to what we had before, the actual language change. You know, we may not have changed the document per se, but the information was different than it would have been previous to SB 1, slight -- you know, any I mean, you have pre-bill and then you have post the bill.
- Okay. So I can make it clear on the record, I just 0. want to make sure the Court understands this. So when you're talking about changing things, I understand you to be saying that you're posting new information on your social media that explains the changes that came about on account of Senate Bill 1; is that right?
- 2.2 Α. Correct.
- 23 All right. And so you didn't go back and change 0. 24 anything that predated Senate Bill 1, right?
- 25 Α. No.

technologically works is above my pay grade, so to speak.

- 7 A. Correct.
- Q. So there's no money coming out of REVUP's pocket, so to speak, to pay for the people who are operating the social media?
- A. No. We do -- we do pay one person's expenses. We give it a stipend of 100 a month to do our podcast. But that is not -- it's not a salary. It's basically to offset her expenses, but that's the only. But the webmaster is paid.
 - Q. Do you take a salary?
- 16 A. No.

- 17 Q. I presume the board doesn't either?
- 18 A. No, nobody on the board.
- Q. Can you tell me what you contend is any negative impact that you, you being REVUP, have suffered on account of Senate Bill 1?
- 22 A. You mean me specifically? No
- Q. I don't mean Bob Kafka.
- 24 A. Right.
- Q. I mean REVUP. So with regard to Senate Bill 1, can you tell me what impact that's had on REVUP?

1

20 21

2.2

23

25

2 Well, it has -- like I said, it has sort of redirected our focus -- short term I hope -- in terms of what the impact of the requirements, and specifically, you know, the section in terms of the -- the ID requirements. And then 5 specifically also on the assistant area. Those two focuses 6 have been -- I would say the most of the questions that we have gotten and focused on in terms of changing REVUP. ironically, our focus was -- since I talked about community 10 integration, was to get people to the polls. So some of the things in SB 1 plus the pandemic made us focus more on the 11 12 mail-in ballot area. So that's why SB 1 itself really sent a 13 shockwave, sort of a chilling message because at the same time that the pandemic -- and people with disabilities are 14 15 particularly -- and I hate to use the word, but I'll use it 16 again -- more vulnerable because of that. So it basically 17 focused more on mail-in ballot and then SB 1 just made that 18 process more difficult.

- Q. What's REVUP's view on whether community integration is better served by in-person versus mail-in voting?
- A. As a general philosophy, we believe integration into the general public as much as possible whether it's in voting, whether it's in terms of transportation, housing. There's a long history of people being warehoused, segregated, apart from everything. I mean, we have come a long way from the 1 Legislature and signed by Governor Abbott?

- 2 A. Right.
 - Q. Okay.
- 4 A. Yeah.
- Q. All right. So -- and let me just ask so the record is clear. You have understood that that's what I have been referring to when I have been talking about Senate Bill 1?
- A. I hope so, otherwise we've been spending a lot of time --
- Q. I just want to make sure. It's -- you know, I have a lot of cases with -- things with Senate Bill -- insert number.
- 13 A. Right.
- Q. And, you know, sometimes -- every legislature has a Senate Bill 1.
- 16 A. Right.
- Q. So, you know, just want to make sure.
- 18 A. Yeah. Yeah, I understand.
- Q. All right. So, with that in mind, can you tell me how much time REVUP has spent in changing its focus and trying to reach its target audience about changes from the Senate Bill 1?
- A. You know, I can't give a percentage exactly, but it feels like almost everything -- I mean, SB 1 has sort of been like hovering over because of its, you know, impact in the 1 | media, both in print and, you know, all over social media. And

- 2 | it also has coincided with the increase of the disability vote
- 3 | because of some of the work that we had done since our creation
- 4 and work that had been done not just by us, but other
- 5 organizations. So, you know, the good part is that the number
- 6 of people who were more involved in the voting process is a
- 7 | positive. But then SB 1 just caused that to, you know, take up
- 8 | a predominant amount of our time. So it seems like it's
- 9 omnipresent.
- 10 Q. So even today?
- 11 A. Oh, yeah. I mean, it continued in terms -- you
- 12 know, we are gearing up now for the -- getting people educated
- 13 on the runoff and so the debacle in terms of the mail-in ballot
- 14 | in the original primary, 24,000, you know, rejections. So
- 15 | people are going -- we're going to be spending a lot of time
- 16 trying to make sure that doesn't occur again. But, you know, I
- 17 | think that's why we're here.
- 18 Q. Well, let me ask you this: You spent time educating
- 19 voters in advance of the primary, right?
- 20 A. Uh-huh.
- 21 Q. And you have been training them on what Senate Bill
- 22 | 1 requires, right?
- 23 A. Yeah, but it was un -- even for those who had been
- 24 | following that there was a lot of confusion about. And the
- 25 | Secretary of State did not issue some of the information in a

1 We are going to try to get them information. The -the real issue is in terms of the -- the makeup of the various groups and the complexity of Senate Bill 1 that has been 3 difficult. You know, those of us -- you know, I have a college education and trying to understand it. We try to put it in a 5 format that is understandable. But, you know, again -- and 6 this is not stereotypic, but so many of our members are low income, on Medicaid. And some of the information is difficult. And, obviously, we don't hit every person with a disability in 10 terms of the network. So even though -- you know, we attempt. That's our mission. You know, the overall population is so 11 12 large. You know, I just looked before I came here. You know, 13 there are about three to five million people with disabilities, according to the Governor's Committee on People with 14 15 Disabilities that have disabilities, you know, under the age of 16 65, not even counting those over. So, again, we would, even 17 with our information, only touch a portion of the potential 18 voting group, so --19 0. Okay. My question is a little bit simpler than the 20

Q. Okay. My question is a little bit simpler than the one you just answered. I'm just asking: The education that you're trying to do right now for the May primary, is that based on your current understanding of Senate Bill 1?

23

24

- A. Yes. Sorry to spend all that time for a yes answer.
- Q. All right. So as part of this lawsuit, REVUP will have spent at least two elections training voters with

Civ. Act. No. 5:21-cv-844 (XR) (consolidated cases)

DECLARATION OF TERI SALTZMAN

My name is Teri Saltzman. I am over the age of 21 and fully competent to make this declaration. Under penalty of perjury, I declare the following based on my personal knowledge:

1. I am a 59-year-old woman who currently lives in Travis County, Texas. I have been mostly voting by mail since 1985. I voted for the first time in Texas in 1985. In 2000, I moved to Florida and was a registered voter there. I moved to North Carolina in 2011 and was a registered voter there. Since 2014, I have been living and voting in Texas.

- 2. I am a member of The Arc of Texas and REVUP-Texas. I routinely receive informational emails from both organizations.
- 3. I vote by mail because I am legally blind. I am substantially limited in the major life activity of seeing. Being independent is important to me. I use a screen magnifier to assist my vision. I prefer to vote by mail because I have voted in person before and found it difficult due to my disability. Voting sites don't always have the machines working that make voting accessible to me. For example, I have tried to vote in person before and there were headphones missing from the accessible voting machine. The volunteers at the voting sites are helpful, but they don't always know how to work or fix the machines so that I can vote. In addition, I do not drive due to my disability, so voting in person would require me to find transportation.

- 4. Prior to SB 1, I voted by mail in Texas several times and never had any problems.
- 5. In January 2022, I requested a mail-in ballot online at vote.org. I received a ballot request form, completed the form, and submitted the form within a week.
- 6. About a week later, my request for a mail-in ballot on the basis of my disability was denied. I was given two reasons for its denial. First, I received a letter stating that my request for a mail-in ballot had been denied because my driver's license number, Social Security number, or voter ID number were incorrect. However, I had entered all three numbers correctly. I verified these numbers were correct with a Training and Technical Support Specialist at Disability Rights Texas. Second, an employee at the Elections Office told me the reason that my request for a mail-in ballot was denied was because the application I was sent was out of date. She stated that the Elections Office had changed forms in January. However, I requested my mail-in ballot application in January, so I should have been sent the up-to-date form.

7. The Elections Office employee directed me to go to the Texas Secretary of State Ballot by Mail Tracker at www.votetexas.gov to re-enter my information, but I was unsuccessful after several tries. The website was not accessible for blind users and was difficult to view with my screen magnifier. The website also seemed to be having technical issues. DRTX communicated with the Travis County Department of Elections on my behalf and obtained

- an accessible document for me. I completed that document, submitted it, and thought I cured the issue.
- 8. In February 2022, I received my mail-in ballot, completed the ballot, and mailed the ballot before the deadline.
- 9. On March 4, 2022, less than a week before the deadline, I received a letter from Travis County Elections stating that my mail-in ballot was rejected. This Notice of Carrier Defect email stated that my Carrier Envelope was received and reviewed, but defective. The box was checked on the Notice that my carrier envelope did not contain my Texas Driver's License Number, Texas Personal Identification Number, Texas Election Identification Certificate Number or the last 4 digits of my Social Security Number; or that the number I provided did not match the number associated with my voter registration record as provided by my County's Voter Registrar. I contacted the Travis County Election Office to clarify and was told that I did not provide my ID numbers under the envelope flap before I sealed and signed the envelope. Due to my disability, I did not see anything on the envelope flap when I received it. I had never heard of this requirement and did not receive any instructions regarding the envelope flap in my March ballot election envelope. I was once again directed to go to the Texas Secretary of State Ballot by Mail Tracker at www.votetexas.gov to attempt to cure, or to cancel my ballot. I attempted to cure through the Ballot by Mail Tracker and was unsuccessful. The website was still inaccessible even when I used my screen magnifier and seemed to be having technical issues.

10. I contacted Travis County's Election Office by phone four times to attempt to successfully cure my ballot through the State Ballot by Mail Tracker, and each person I spoke to suggested a different solution. I was told that it was possible

I was entering too much information and to attempt again, leaving out information. For example, my street address has "Avenue" in it, and I was told to leave "Avenue" out of my address. This did not work. Another person from the Travis County Election Office asked me if I knew about large print software and screen readers, which was frustrating to me because, as a legally blind person, I am very aware of this technology. I already use a screen magnifier. Finally, another person asked me if I could go down to their office and drop my ballot off, or if I could ask anyone to drive me there. This suggestion was frustrating as well, as I vote by mail due to my disability and to be independent. I did not feel I should be required to find and obtain transportation to fix the issue as this would defeat the purpose of voting by mail. After ample time on the phone, the website finally worked when I clicked the button and cured the ballot. I called the Travis County Election Office to verify, and they confirmed my ballot was cured.

- 11. At no time did I see or was I offered any information on my rights as a person with a disability, and the availability of reasonable modifications or accommodations under federal or state laws. At no time did I see or was I offered contact information for who could help me with reasonable modification or accommodations, or information as to what the grievance procedure would be if I was initially refused. This information was not available on the website, on anything that was mailed to me, or from any of the many people I spoke with.
- 12. Approximately a week later, I received another letter, which was not in an accessible format for me because it was not in large print, stating that there were errors in my ballot, so therefore my ballot didn't count. I am unsure if this letter was a copy from the week prior or if it was a new letter. I am now unsure if my vote was counted.

- 13. In May 2022, I tried voting curbside rather than voting by mail during the primary runoff. A volunteer came outside with a laptop, but it was inaccessible, and they had no headphones. Because of this, the volunteer had to read the screen for me and I had no choice but to tell them my choices out loud. My vote was not private as the election volunteer heard my choices.
- 14. In addition to the difficulties and barriers with voting in person described above, I cannot drive myself to the polling place, and paratransit is not available where I live in Pflugerville. While my husband does drive, he is not always available to drive me when the polls are open.
- 15. I tried voting by mail again in November 2022. My optic device magnifies print to the eighth power, and yet the font on the mail-in-ballot envelope flap is still too small for it to be readable for me. In November 2022, the font was even smaller because there was even more text on the envelope flap. My mail in ballot was rejected yet again for an ID-related reason, and I was again unable to cure the problem online because it again said that I was not a registered voter.

16. SB 1 is making it harder for people with disabilities like me to vote. I registered to vote by mail based on my disability and I have always done this successfully in the past, but this option is no longer accessible to me due to all of the new ID requirements and burdens imposed by SB 1 on the voting by mail process. I tried so hard to vote in the March primary, but at every turn, I faced obstacles due to my disability. I am very concerned about my ability to vote in the future due to SB 1.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on this 22 day of May, 2023, at Austin, Texas.

DECLARATION OF YVONNE IGLESIAS

My name is Yvonne Iglesias. I am over the age of 21 and fully competent to make this declaration.

Under penalty of perjury, I declare the following based on my personal knowledge:

- 1. I am an eligible and registered voter in Hidalgo County, Texas.
- 2. I am a person who is paralyzed, experiences consistent muscle spasms, and is blind in one eye.
- 3. Since at least 2006, I have voted in most elections, both federal and state. I vote for the best candidate for me and my issues, whether they are Republican, Democrat, or other political party candidates. I believe I included my voter registration card identification and other identification as requested when applying and voting by mail. Since 2006, I have voted by mail the same way each year and did not have any problems and my votes counted.
- 4. In the 2022 November elections, after the passage of SB 1, I submitted an application to vote-by-mail.

- 5. I completed my application to vote-by-mail and sent it to the election office in Hidalgo County, Texas, just as I have since 2006, when my ballot was accepted and my votes were counted. I followed up on my application by calling the election office in Hidalgo County, Texas, well before the 2022 November election to confirm that my application was received. During this call, I was informed by a Hidalgo County election official that my vote-by-mail application had been rejected for an ID-related reason.
- 6. The election official explained to me what ID number to write on my application, which I did, and then resubmitted my voter application.
- 7. After submitting my second vote-by-mail application, I again reached out to the elections office for Hidalgo County, Texas, several days before the November 2022 election to confirm that my second application was received and accepted. I was again informed by an election official from Hidalgo County, Texas, that my second vote-by-mail application was rejected for an ID-related reason and because it had arrived too late.
- 8. Because I am unable to travel on short notice, as my disabilities require me to engage in significant coordination to arrange appropriate, accessible transportation, I was unable to vote in the November 2022 election.
- 9. Because of my disabilities, voting by mail remains the only form of voting that is accessible to me, but I no longer have confidence that I will be able to vote in the future as a result of the changes brought about by SB 1. Even after revising my ID number per the instructions of a county election official, my application to vote by mail was still rejected despite no issues applying to vote by mail in the previous fifteen years. I still do not understand why both of my applications were rejected.

10. I am a member of The Arc Texas and REVUP Texas. I became a member of these organizations because voting as a person with a disability is important to me. My sister, before she passed away, always stressed to me the importance of voting. I vote now in honor of her memory of this important right.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on this 12th day of May, 2023, at Hidalgo County, Texas.

DECLARATION OF LAURA HALVORSON

My name is Laura Halvorson. I am over the age of 21 and fully competent to make this declaration. Under penalty of perjury, I declare the following based upon my personal knowledge:

- 1. I am a 39-year-old woman who currently lives in Bexar County, Texas. I registered to vote for the first time after I turned 18 and sometime before the 2004 presidential election in which I voted.
- 2. Between 2004 and 2014, I was a registered voter in the Dallas metro area where I lived. During this decade, I lived at times in Dallas, Denton, and Collin counties and updated my registration to ensure I could vote each time after I moved.
- 3. In 2015, I moved out of state and updated my registration to Virginia. When I returned to Texas at the end of 2019, I registered to vote again in Texas, this time in Bexar County. I have been continually registered to vote in Bexar County, Texas since 2019.
- 4. Voting is important to me. I have voted in every presidential election since 2004 and most other local and state elections since then.

- 5. I am a member of REVUP Texas ("REVUP") and The Arc of Texas.
- 6. From talking to members of REVUP, I learned that Texas has some of the lowest voter turnout in the nation. In 2014, I was Ms. Wheelchair Texas and I made voting part of my platform that year. I have stayed involved with REVUP since then, including participating with the REVUP Virginia chapter while I lived there. When I returned to Texas in 2019, I resumed my membership with REVUP Texas.
- 7. I was a member of the National Council on Independent Living's Voting Rights Committee from 2016-2020 and had extensive social media engagement during this time with #CripTheVote to encourage voter turnout amongst people with disabilities.
- 8. I have several disabilities that substantially limit several major life activities. I have a very progressive form of Muscular Dystrophy that substantially limits my mobility (including walking, standing, lifting, and bending), ability to complete my activities of daily living (ADLs) necessary to care for myself, and my breathing. I am on a BIPAP breathing machine 24 hours a day, require attendant care for 90% of my ADLs, and use a power wheelchair for all mobility. My conditions also cause me severe pain.
- 9. Because of my Muscular Dystrophy, I require assistance for all gross motor skills like reaching for objects, grasping/holding objects, and pressing buttons. Because of my disabilities, I require what is known as "total care" from caregivers with essentially all activities of daily living including cooking, dressing, and bathing.
- 10. I also have to have someone with me at all times because my chronic neuromuscular respiratory failure requires use of a BIPAP Ventilator 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, and if it became unplugged or unhooked, I could not survive more than a few minutes. I have been on my BIPAP Ventilator full time since about March 2017.

- 11. Because of my chronic neuromuscular respiratory failure, even a mild cough can quickly become serious and possibly fatal. As a result, during the COVID-19 pandemic, my medical providers have advised me to avoid public spaces and crowds, and this is still their advice for me_due to my high risk, even as many others have resumed "normal" life without the precautions many took during the height of the pandemic.
- 12. How I have voted has changed over time as my Muscular Dystrophy has progressed and the pandemic also changed my method of voting. In 2004 2014, when I was voting in the Dallas metro area, I typically voted early in person. During one of the last elections, poll workers did adjust the voting screen so that I could reach it and mark my vote.
- 13. In Virginia, I typically voted curbside during early voting. During the one or two times I went inside a polling place in person, poll workers brought me to the front of the line so I did not have to wait, and I was given a paper ballot which I could mark without assistance. Since that time, my disabilities have progressed and marking a paper ballot without assistance is painful and difficult.
- 14. Since I returned to Texas, I have voted in Bexar County. I voted in the 2020 presidential primaries in person during early voting. I required total assistance from my personal care attendant. They drove me to the polling place, helped me get out of my wheelchair accessible van, and put on a mask to protect me from COVID-19 because I could not lift my hands to do these activities for myself. While I am able to move my powerchair myself, they had to open doors for me to enter the building. I waited in a very short line and when it was my turn, I approached the poll worker. My personal care attendant then had to remove my Texas ID from my wallet and give it to the poll worker who confirmed my voter registration.

- 15. The poll worker administered the oath to my personal care attendant. The poll worker then gave my attendant the number to input into the voting machine since I could not lift my hands to take the number. Because I could not lift my hands or press the button on the voting machine, my personal care attendant input my number into the machine and then marked who I told her I wanted to vote for. When the voting machine printed my ballot, I was not able to grasp the ballot myself so my personal care attendant had to take my ballot and cross the room with me to deposit it into the ballot box.
- 16. By the time of the next election, COVID-19 cases were significantly higher and the lines were very long, even during early voting, so I used curbside vote during the November 2020 election in Bexar County. My boyfriend drove me to the polling place because I could not because of my disabilities. When we arrived, I called for curbside voting. After about twenty minutes, a poll worker came outside and my boyfriend got out my ID and gave it to the poll worker since I did not have the motor function to get out my ID or hand it to the worker. They returned with a form for my boyfriend to complete and administered the oath to him so that he could assist me with voting. The poll worker than handed the voting tablet to my boyfriend. I did not have the ability to press the screen so I told my boyfriend who I wanted to vote for and he pressed the screen for me.
- 17. I curbside voted again in Bexar County during a 2021 local election. My boyfriend drove me again and had to assist me in much the same way—he had to get out my ID and give it to the poll worker and also had to hold the tablet and press buttons for me to designate who I wanted to vote for since I could not do so because of my disabilities.
- 18. I had applied to vote by mail as a person with a disability after my return to Texas in 2020 because I was not sure what would happen with COVID and with my disabilities, and I_did not know how crowded the polling places would be. Since I was able to vote curbside in the 2020 elections, I had not tried to vote by mail-in ballot until this year.

- 19. I voted by mail-in ballot during the March 2022 primary elections. My personal care attendants check and bring in my mail for me and one of them brought in my ballot. At the time, the assistor's oath still limited assistance to reading the ballot, marking the ballot, or directing me to do those things. My personal care attendant was not willing to assist me with opening or marking my ballot—as a green card holder, she was unwilling to take the oath to assist me (in person or by mail) because she was afraid of the threat of criminal prosecution and the impact on her legal status. Because she was not able to help me, I had to open and mark the ballot myself. Because of my disabilities, it took me four different times to mark my ballot—I could only hold the pen for short periods of time without my hand cramping and it also took a lot of energy and time to turn the ballot around on my table to position it so that I could fill in the bubble for who I wanted to vote for. After about ten minutes during which I would mark a few candidates, I would have to rest for about thirty minutes before I could try to hold a pen and mark the ballot again. All in all, it was very difficult for me to vote and the process was ultimately spread across two days.
- 20. Similarly, it took me a lot of time to complete the information on the envelope and seal the envelope. Because of my gross motor difficulties, my signature changes day-to-day and my handwriting when printing can become difficult to read. Because of this, I was afraid my ballot would be rejected for not having the correct ID number. I also had great difficulty pressing hard enough to sign over the envelope flap.

- 21. I submitted my mail-in ballot before the due date and it was shown as received on February 26 on the Secretary of State's website; however, it was not marked as accepted until well after the election when I looked online at the time. If there had been a problem with my ballot like if I had transposed numbers in my Texas ID number, my handwriting had been illegible, or I hadn't been able to press hard enough for the signature on the envelope flap, I would not have been able to correct my ballot and my vote would have been thrown out.
- 22. Because of how long it took to process my March 2022 primary mail-in ballot, I do not trust voting by mail because if I am unable to mark the ballot hard enough with the pen or transpose two numbers in my ID, I would not be notified with enough time to be able to correct my ballot or early vote in person, which means I would not get to vote at all.
- 23. Because of my experience in March 2022, I voted in person in November 2022 during the general election so that I could be sure my vote counted. Before the November election, I spent several hours over the course of several days researching the voting machines available in Bexar County, including watching instructional videos and emailing elections officials to try to confirm availability of remotes for the voting machines. When I did not get an answer to my email, my father went to my polling place a few days before I did to confirm they had the devices I needed to vote.
- 24. When I arrived at my polling place, I went to the sign-in table, which was so crowded that there were people hovering over me, not wearing masks. Voting in person put my health at risk—my personal care attendant and I were the only ones wearing masks. This is one of the only public places I have gone since mid-2020 other than a medical office or pharmacy.

- 25. I surrendered my mail-in ballot and handed over my ID. After I received my ballot, my personal care attendant accompanied me to the machine. Though it is my understanding that the oath for assistors is no longer so limited, I was still uncomfortable placing my attendant, who is a woman of color, in that position given that there is so much confusion around the law, so I did not ask for her assistance other than for her to monitor my ventilator in case there were any issues with it.
- 26. The poll worker brought me over to the machine and plugged in the remote so that I could vote. I started to operate the remote and it was not working—the directions were reversed from what the buttons indicated (up was down, left was right, etc.). The poll worker did not know how to operate it and so was unable to help other than to ask if I was "pressing the buttons," which I was.
- Once I figured out the remote, which took several minutes, I came to the first name on the screen and discovered the font was so large that it cut off part of the candidate's name and their party. Most of the names on the ballot had at least part of the name or party designation cut off, making it hard to identify who I wanted to vote for and taking additional time. Later I discovered this was likely because the large font feature had been turned on, even though I did not require a large font to read the ballot.
- 28. On the summary screen, it was again very difficult to see my choices and confirm I'd voted for the candidates I wanted to vote for. After I had confirmed my choices, it took several additional minutes to figure out how to navigate with the remote to print my ballot.
- 29. After my ballot printed, I took it across the room and adjusted the height and angle of my power wheelchair so that I could just barely reach the place to put my ballot into the ballot box. This also took several minutes.

- 30. From the time I turned over my ID at the sign-in table to the time I submitted my ballot, it took over thirty minutes for me to vote in person.
- 34. While I would like to vote by mail in the future, or have the option to do so when my health makes going in public more dangerous, I want to know that my ballot will be counted. My experience in March 2022 makes me worry my ballot will not be counted in the future and I will not know of errors until it is too late to fix them or to vote in person.
- 31. As a person with a disability, I already face significant barriers to vote and SB 1 has already made it harder for me to vote in 2022 and will continue to make it harder for me to vote in the future. I am disappointed that the state is working to make elections less accessible for people like me.

- 6. In the election between Beto and Abbott, I tried to vote by mail. My mom filled out the application to vote by mail and read it to me before it was sent in. I signed the application.
- 7. We put my passport number on the application to vote by mail.

- 8. I never received a ballot, so my mom took me to vote in person. It was very difficult for me to vote in person because of my disabilities. I successfully used my passport number to vote in person.
- 9. I am a member of The ARC of Texas and REVUP.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on ________, at Cameron County, Texas.

Civil Action No. 5:21-cv-844 (XR) (consolidated cases)

DECLARATION OF ANNE SCOTT

My name is Anne Scott. I am over the age of 21 and fully competent to make this declaration.

Under penalty of perjury, I declare the following based on my personal knowledge:

- 1. I am an eligible and registered voter in Hidalgo County, Texas.
- I am the mother of Taylor Scott. Taylor is also an eligible and registered voter in Hidalgo County, Texas.
- 3. Taylor is medically fragile. She is diagnosed with Cerebral Palsy, is blind in one eye, and uses a power wheelchair for mobility as she cannot walk independently. Taylor's disabilities substantially limit several life activities, including walking, speaking, communicating, and caring for herself.
- 4. Taylor's disabilities also impact her ability to speak and communicate with people who are unfamiliar with her speech patterns. Many people who do not know her may not understand her.
- 5. Due to Taylor's disabilities, I assist her with many things, including voting.

- 6. Taylor has a valid U.S. passport. She also has a state-issued identification card, but this ID expired during the COVID-19 pandemic in October 2020. Due to Taylor's disabilities and medical fragility, we were unable to go in person to have her identification card renewed. Her state-issued identification card is still expired.
- 7. In the November 2022 election, I helped Taylor apply to vote by mail. I thought that we could not use Taylor's expired state identification card number on the mail-in-ballot application, so we used her U.S. passport number. Taylor did not receive a ballot in return after sending in her application to vote-by-mail in November 2022.
- 8. Because Taylor never received any notification as to whether or why her application to vote by mail was rejected, she never had an opportunity to cure her application.
- 9. When the ballot did not arrive for Taylor, I took her to vote in person. Because of Taylor's disabilities and medical fragility, we are very cautious about taking her out in public due to COVID, so it was a risk to take her to vote in person. Taylor was able to vote in person using her U.S. passport as identification.
- 10. I never influence my daughter's voting. My daughter votes independently and she tells me she disagrees with some of the candidates who I support.
- 11. Taylor and I are members of REVUP and The Arc of Texas.
- 12. My daughter and I receive email communications from REVUP and The Arc of Texas.

This Declaration is made pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on May 18, 2023, at County of Hawaii, Hawaii.

INTERROGATORY NO. 3: For the November 2022 general election, state Harris County's final rejection rate of timely received ABBMs, expressed as a percentage of all timely received ABBMs and rounded to two decimal places.

RESPONSE: 1.47%

INTERROGATORY NO. 4: State the difference, and indicate whether it is positive or negative, between the percentage set out in response to Interrogatory No. 3 and the final rejection rate of timely received ABBMs, expressed as a percentage of all timely received ABBMs and rounded to two decimal places, during:

- a. The November 2020 general election
- b. The November 2018 general election

OBJECTION: Defendant Tatum objects to this interrogatory because, at the time these interrogatories were propounded, the scheduling order in this litigation limited discovery to matters related to the 2022 general election (Dkt. 437). Thus, these requests were outside the scope of the discovery. Without waiving this objection, Defendant may supplement this response with data if it can be obtained later.

INTERROGATORY NO. 5: For the November 2022 general election, state Harris County's final rejection rate of timely received ballots by mail, expressed as a percentage of all timely received ballots by mail and rounded to two decimal places.

RESPONSE: 4.16%

INTERROGATORY NO. 6: State the difference, and indicate whether it is positive or negative, between the percentage set out in response to Interrogatory No. 5 and the final rejection rate of timely received ballots by mail, expressed as a percentage of all timely received ballots by mail and rounded to two decimal places, during:

- a. The November 2020 general election
- b. The November 2018 general election

OBJECTION: Defendant Tatum objects to this interrogatory because, at the time these interrogatories were propounded, the scheduling order in this litigation limited discovery to matters related to the 2022 general election (Dkt. 437). Thus, these requests were outside the scope of the discovery. Without waiving this objection, Defendant may supplement this response with data if it can be obtained later.

I. OBJECTIONS TO DEFINITIONS

1. Defendant Limon-Mercado objects to Plaintiff's definition of "you" as including "Travis County, including the Office of the Travis County Clerk, the Travis County Clerk, her predecessors and successors..." This definition is overly broad and improperly includes prior County Clerk administrations not included or the subject of this litigation. Additionally, said definitions could be construed to require the disclosure of information concerning matters made exempt from discovery under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(b)(1) and the Federal Rules of Evidence, including, but not limited to attorney work product, litigation privilege, deliberative process privilege, grand jury proceedings, and ongoing criminal investigations.

II. RESPONSES AND OBJECTIONS TO OCA PLAINTIFFS' FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on this 19th day of January, 2023, the attached State Defendants' Supplemental Objections and Responses to the United States' Second Request of Interrogatories was served on opposing counsel via electronic mail.

/s/ Kathleen T. Hunker KATHLEEN T. HUNKER Special Counsel

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

Under Rule 26(b)(1), the proper scope of discovery is limited to "any nonprivileged matter that is relevant to any party's claim or defense and proportional to the needs of the case." Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1) (2015). Among the considerations that are germane to that inquiry are "the parties' resources, the importance of the discovery in resolving the issues, and whether the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit." Id. The twin demands for relevancy and proportionality "are related but distinct requirements." Samsung Electronics Am., Inc. v. Chung, 321 F.R.D. 250, 279 (N.D. Tex. 2017). Thus, if the information sought is irrelevant to the party's claims or defenses, "it is not necessary to determine whether it would be proportional if it were relevant." Walker v. Pioneer Prod. Servs., Inc., No. CV 15-0645, 2016 WL 1244510, at *3 (E.D. La. Mar. 30, 2016). Conversely, "relevance alone does not translate into automatic discoverability" because "[a]n assessment of proportionality is essential." Motorola Sols., Inc. v. Hytera Comme 'ns Corp., 365 F. Supp. 3d 916, 924 (N.D. Ill. 2019). Accordingly, State Defendants object to these requests to the extent that the information sought is either irrelevant or disproportionate.

State Defendants object to the definition of "conviction" or "convicted" as vague, overbroad, and ambiguous. Specifically, the term "an admission or finding of guilt" is subject to different interpretations. State Defendants understand the term to include pleas of guilt, stipulations of guilt, and acknowledgments of the offense. Therefore, State Defendants understand the terms "conviction" and "convicted" not to pertain to cases in which a defendant or suspect pleaded nolo contendere or no contest, or to cases in which a defendant otherwise reached an outcome that—though not a conviction by a judge or jury in a court of law—nonetheless involved violation of Texas Law.

State Defendants also object to the definition of "impermissible in-person voter assistance" as vague and ambiguous. Specifically, it is defined as "the acts of influencing or coercing a voter in the presence of their ballot"; yet Interrogatory No. 4 seeks instances of "impermissible in-person voter assistance" that occurred "by influencing or coercing a voter in the presence of their ballot." Therefore, this definition is tautological, and its meaning is not discernible. For this reason, State Defendants interpret the term "impermissible in-person voter assistance" to mean any in-person voter assistance that is not permissible.

Finally, State Defendants object to the definition of "voting by impersonation" as vague and ambiguous. The definition uses the term "vote harvesting," which is not defined. Therefore, State Defendants adopt the meaning of "vote harvesting" that State Defendants have otherwise used in the course of this litigation. Furthermore, the definition of "voting by impersonation" includes "improperly returning a ballot on behalf of another," which is a broad, sweeping, and undefined category of conduct. For this reason, the term "voting by impersonation" is vague and ambiguous because it is not limited in scope. Hence, State Defendants interpret the term "voting by impersonation" as those instances in which someone illegally votes as or on behalf of someone who is eligible to vote that does not constitute vote harvesting.

These answers and objections are made without waiving any further objections to, or admitting the relevancy or materiality of, any of the information requested. All answers are given without prejudice to State Defendants' right to introduce or object to the discovery of any documents, facts, or information discovered after the date hereof. Likewise, these answers and objections are not intended to be, and shall not be construed as, agreement with the United States' characterization of any facts, circumstances, or legal obligations. State Defendants reserve the right to contest any such characterization as inaccurate and object to the Requests insofar as they contain any express or implied assumptions of fact or law concerning matters at issue in this litigation.

State Defendants will provide their answers based on terms as they are commonly understood and consistent with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. State Defendants object to and will refrain from extending or modifying any words employed in the Requests to comport with any expanded definitions or instructions. State Defendants will answer the Requests to the extent required by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Local Rules of the Western District of Texas.

SPECIFIC OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES TO THE UNITED STATES' SECOND SET OF INTERROGATORIES

INTERROGATORY NO. 4: State each instance in which a person has been convicted of violating Texas law for providing or attempting to provide impermissible in-person voter assistance by influencing or coercing a voter in the presence of their ballot, including but not limited to relevant violations of Sections 64.012(a)(4), 64.036, 276.013(a)(1), and 276.013(a)(6) of the Texas Election Code.

OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case and unduly burdensome, including for the reason that the United States does not limit its request to particular date ranges or particular statutory provisions. To that end, State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that it requires State Defendants to search and examine all case records without limitation to time or statutory provision. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1). The Office of the Attorney General of Texas began tracking, investigating, and prosecuting election fraud cases in 2004. Therefore, State Defendants read this interrogatory to seek information dating from 2004 to the present. Furthermore, the Office of the Attorney General of Texas may not be aware of other prosecutions that may have been filed by criminal district attorneys.

Additionally, State Defendants object to this Interrogatory to the extent that it calls for information that is publicly available or otherwise equally accessible to the United States. In that same vein, the Office of the Attorney General has already produced charts of pending and completed prosecutions from the Office of the Attorney General, as well as copies of prosecution-diversion agreement at bates stamped ranges STATE087312–STATE087395. Those materials represent a summary of business records held by the Office of the Attorney General, and ascertaining the information requested in this interrogatory will impose substantially the same burden on OAG as it would Plaintiffs' counsel. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d).

Finally, State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that it calls for information subject to investigative privilege, attorney—client privilege, or attorney work-product privilege. Because the Office of the Attorney General is actively involved in investigations and prosecutions of election-related crimes, all three privileges likely apply to on-going investigations and prosecutions.

Subject to and without waiving these objections, State Defendants answer as follows:

The following table represents convictions for providing impermissible in-person voter assistance by influencing or coercing a voter in the presence of his or her ballot but does not include mere instances of such occurrences without convictions:

INTERROGATORY NO. 5: State each instance in which a person has been convicted of violating Texas law by voting or attempting to vote by impersonation using a mail ballot, including but not limited to violations of Sections 64.012, 64.036, 276.013(a)(2), 276.013(a)(3), or 276.013(a)(7) of the Texas Election Code.

OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case, overly broad, irrelevant to any claim or defense, not reasonably specific, and unduly burdensome, including for the reason that the United States does not limit its request to particular date ranges or particular statutory provisions. To that end, State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that it requires State Defendants to search and examine all case records without limitation to time or statutory provision. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(l). The Office of the Attorney General of Texas began tracking, investigating, and prosecuting election fraud cases in 2004. Therefore, State Defendants read this interrogatory to seek information dating from 2004 to the present. Furthermore, the Office of the Attorney General of Texas may not be aware of other prosecutions that may have been filed by criminal district attorneys.

Additionally, State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that it calls for information that is publicly available or otherwise equally accessible to the United States. In that same vein, the Office of the Attorney General has already produced charts of pending and completed prosecutions from the Office of the Attorney General, as well as copies of prosecution-diversion agreement at bates stamped ranges STATE087312-STATE087395. Those materials represent a summary of business records held by the Office of the Attorney General, and ascertaining the information requested in this interrogatory will impose substantially the same burden on OAG as it would Plaintiffs' counsel. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d).

Finally, State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that it calls for information subject to investigative privilege, attorney-client privilege, or attorney work-product privilege. Because the Office of the Attorney General is actively involved in investigations and prosecutions of election-related crimes, all three privileges likely apply to on-going investigations and prosecutions.

Subject to and without waiving these objections, State Defendants answer as follows:

State Defendants understand this interrogatory not to pertain to cases involving violation of Texas Law for voting or attempting to vote by impersonation not through the use of a mail ballot. Nor do State Defendants understand this interrogatory to pertain to cases that might also constitute vote harvesting. Therefore, State Defendants identify the following convictions for voting or attempting to vote by impersonation using a mail ballot but do not include mere instances of such occurrences without convictions:

Case No.	Name	Location	Resolution Date	Laws Violated	Final Disposition
B-05-2101- 0- CR-B	Melva Kay Ponce	Bee County	7/26/2005	Tex. Elec. Code§ 64.012	Pleaded Guilty

SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE: Subject to State Defendants' understanding of the meaning and parameters of this interrogatory as set forth in their original response, the individual and case identified above remains the only instance that is responsive to this interrogatory.

INTERROGATORY NO. 6: State the number of voters who have collected, modified, or added a Texas driver's license number, Texas election identification certificate number, Texas personal identification card number, or the last four digits of their social security number to their voter registration record using any online portals provided pursuant to SB 1 from December 2, 2021 until the present, disaggregated by portal. In answering this interrogatory, do not include voter registration information submitted or updated as part of an online driver license renewal or change-of-address transaction, pursuant to Section 5 of the National Voter Registration Act, 52 U.S.C. § 20504, and the settlement agreement in Stringer v. Hughs, No. 5:21-cv-46 (W.D. Tex.).

OBJECTIONS AND ORIGINAL RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case, overly broad, irrelevant to any claim or defense, not reasonably specific, or unduly burdensome. Additionally, State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that it requests information through "the present," which would result in the inclusion of incomplete and inaccurate information if applied to the May 7, 2022 election, for which early voting began on April 25, 2022. Subject to and without waiving these objections,

State Defendants answer as follows:

State Defendants do not possess the capability to provide information responsive to this interrogatory. Aside from the methods specifically excluded in the interrogatory itself, the only "online portal[]" through which the referenced identifying information could have been updated by a voter is located on the Texas.gov website. That website is maintained by the Texas Department of Information Resources, which is not a party to this case. A voter is required to enter his current driver license number, ID number, voter registration card VUID, and Social Security Number in order to access this portal for the purpose of updating the voter's name or address. The identifying information of voters who submit a change of name or address on Texas.gov is transmitted to the Office of the Texas Secretary of State ("SOS") on a nightly basis. If the TEAM database is missing the driver license/ID number or Social Security number disclosed by the voter in gaining access to Texas.gov, that voter's missing information is updated in TEAM.

There is no individual field or combination of fields in TEAM that would allow State Defendants to isolate the specific information requested in this interrogatory. The TEAM system contains an audit log that tracks the history of changes or updates made to a voter's record, but that audit log does not differentiate between the types of changes offered through the Texas.gov system. Because of these limitations that are inherent in the TEAM system, State Defendants are unable to provide data that is responsive to this interrogatory.

SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE:

Subject to State Defendants' understanding of the meaning and parameters of this interrogatory as set forth in their original response, State Defendants remain unable to provide data responsive to this interrogatory.

INTERROGATORY NO. 7: State the number of voters who have cured identification defects in their Application for a Ballot By Mail using any online portals provided pursuant to SB 1 from December 2, 2021 until the present, disaggregated by portal.

OBJECTIONS AND ORIGINAL RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case, overly broad, irrelevant to any claim or defense, not reasonably specific, or unduly burdensome. Additionally, State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that it requests information through "the present," which would result in the inclusion of incomplete and inaccurate information if applied to the May 7, 2022 election, for which early voting began on April 25, 2022. Subject to and without waiving these objections, State Defendants answer as follows:

The only "online portal[]" through which identification defects in a voter's Application for a Ballot By Mail ("ABBM") may be cured is the Ballot by Mail Tracker available at VoteTexas.gov.² A voter can use the Tracker to cure an initial failure to provide any of the required personal identification numbers or if the numbers provided do not match the voter registration record. While SOS can determine the number of voters who used the Tracker to correct a defect in their ABBM and subsequently had their ABBM accepted, this total does not necessarily provide the exact information requested in this interrogatory. That is because the TEAM system is a living database that captures only the current or most recent status associated with any information in a voter's record. Therefore, State Defendants can only provide ABBM figures for the March 1, 2022 Primary reflecting the final status of voters in the TEAM system. With those caveats and limitations in mind, State Defendants can represent that the total number of ABBMs submitted for the March 1, 2022 Primary was 264,647; the total number of voters who used the Tracker to correct a defect in their ABBM was 364; and the total number of those voters who used the Tracker to correct a defect in their ABBM and either had their ABBM accepted or cancelled their application and instead voted in person was 237.

SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE: Subject to State Defendants' understanding of the meaning and parameters of this interrogatory as set forth in their original response, State Defendants supplement their response with the following counts as calculated by the Texas Secretary of State:

May 7, 2022 Constitutional Amendment Election

Total number of ABBMs submitted: 288,865.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defect in their ABBM: 48.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defect in their ABBM and had their ABBM accepted or cancelled their application and voted in person: 16.

May 24, 2022 Primary Runoff Election

Total number of ABBMs submitted: 280,277.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defect in their ABBM: 11.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defect in their ABBM and had their ABBM accepted or cancelled their application and voted in person: 7.

November 8, 2022 General Election

Total number of ABBMs submitted: 431,571.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defect in their ABBM: 523.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defect in their ABBM and had their ABBM accepted or cancelled their application and voted in person: 419.

INTERROGATORY NO. 8: State the number of voters who have cured carrier envelope identification defects using any online portal provided pursuant to SB 1 from February 9, 2022 to present, disaggregated by portal.

OBJECTIONS AND ORIGINAL RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case, overly broad, irrelevant to any claim or defense, not reasonably specific, or unduly burdensome. Additionally, State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that it requests information through "the present," which would result in the inclusion of incomplete and inaccurate information if applied to the May 7, 2022 election, for which early voting began on April 25, 2022. Subject to and without waiving these objections, State Defendants answer as follows:

The only "online portal[]" through which a voter may cure carrier envelope identification defects is again the Ballot by Mail Tracker available at VoteTexas.gov. Using this portal, a voter can cure the following three defects:

- 1. The carrier envelope did not contain the voter's Texas Driver's License Number, Texas Personal Identification Number, Texas Election Identification Certificate Number, or the Last 4 digits of his Social Security Number;
- 2. The identification number provided by the voter did not match the number associated with his voter registration record; or
- 3. The voter was not issued one of the documents with the required number and did not indicate this fact on the carrier envelope.

SOS can determine the number of voters who used the Tracker to correct a defective carrier envelope and subsequently had their mail-in ballot accepted, but this total does not necessarily provide the exact information requested in this interrogatory. That is because the TEAM system is a living database that captures only the current or most recent status associated with any information in a voter's record. Therefore, State Defendants can only provide mail ballot figures for the March 1, 2022 Primary reflecting the final status of voters in the TEAM system. Considering those limitations, State Defendants can represent that the total number of mail ballots submitted for the March 1, 2022 Primary was 198,947; the total number of voters who used the Tracker to correct a defective carrier envelope was 2,628; and the total number of voters who used the Tracker to correct a defective carrier envelope and either had their mail ballot accepted or cancelled their mail ballot and instead voted in person was 1,788.

May 7, 2022 Constitutional Amendment Election

Total number of mail ballots submitted: 190,469.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defective carrier envelope: 1,017.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defective carrier envelope and had their mail ballot accepted or cancelled their mail ballot and voted in person: 937.

May 24, 2022 Primary Runoff Election

Total number of mail ballots submitted: 183,260.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defective carrier envelope: 1,071.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defective carrier envelope and had their mail ballot accepted or cancelled their mail ballot and voted in person: 1,063.

November 8, 2022 General Election

Total number of mail ballots submitted: 345,679.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defective carrier envelope: 1,531.

Total number of voters who used the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct a defective carrier envelope and had their mail ballot accepted or cancelled their mail ballot and voted in person: 1,496.

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

Under Rule 26(b)(1), the proper scope of discovery is limited to "any nonprivileged matter that is relevant to any party's claim or defense and proportional to the needs of the case." Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1) (2015). Among the considerations that are germane to that inquiry are "the parties' resources, the importance of the discovery in resolving the issues, and whether the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit." Id. The twin demands for relevancy and proportionality "are related but distinct requirements." Samsung Electronics Am., Inc. v. Chung, 321 F.R.D. 250, 279 (N.D. Tex. 2017). Thus, if the information sought is irrelevant to the party's claims or defenses, "it is not necessary to determine whether it would be proportional if it were relevant." Walker v. Pioneer Prod. Servs., Inc., No. CV 15-0645, 2016 WL 1244510, at *3 (E.D. La. Mar. 30, 2016). Conversely, "relevance alone does not translate into automatic discoverability" because "[a]n assessment of proportionality is essential." Motorola Sols., Inc. v. Hytera Commc'ns Corp., 365 F. Supp. 3d 916, 924 (N.D. Ill. 2019). Accordingly, State Defendants object to these interrogatories to the extent that the information sought is either irrelevant or disproportionate.

All answers are given without prejudice to State Defendants' right to introduce or object to the discovery of any documents, facts, or information discovered after the date hereof. Likewise, these answers and objections are not intended to be, and shall not be construed as, agreement with the United States' characterization of any facts, circumstances, or legal obligations. State Defendants reserve the right to contest any such characterization as inaccurate and object to these interrogatories insofar as they contain any express or implied assumptions of fact or law concerning matters at issue in this litigation. State Defendants will provide their answers based on terms as they are commonly understood and consistent with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. State Defendants object to and will refrain from extending or modifying any words employed in these interrogatories to comport with any expanded definitions or instructions. State Defendants will answer the interrogatories to the extent required by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Local Rules of the Western District of Texas.

OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES TO THE UNITED STATES' FOURTH SET OF INTERROGATORIES

INTERROGATORY NO. 10. State the number of voter records in the Texas Election Administration Management (TEAM) database for which the "Mail In Request Reject Reason" field is populated with "NT," or "No TDL/SSN in VR Record," in relation to any application for an absentee ballot by mail for the November 8, 2022 general election.

OBJECTION AND RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case, overly broad, irrelevant to any claim or defense, not reasonably specific, or unduly burdensome. These answers and objections are made without waiving any further objections to, or admitting the relevancy or materiality of, any of the information requested.

The Office of the Texas Secretary of State ("SOS") is capable of determining the number of voter records in the TEAM system for which, as of the date of SOS's query, the "Mail In Request Reject Reason" field is populated with "NT" or "No TDL/SSN in VR Record" for the November 8, 2022 General Election. However, this total does not necessarily provide the exact information requested in this interrogatory. That is because the TEAM system is a living database that captures only the current or most recent status associated with any information in a voter's record, including the "Mail In Request Reject Reason" field. If an individual's voter record is updated by a county election official during the absentee ballot by mail ("ABBM") process, any intermediate status associated with that voter is no longer reflected in the TEAM system post-update. Therefore, State Defendants can only provide ABBM rejection figures for the November 8, 2022 General Election reflecting the status of voters in the TEAM system on the date that the query was run in TEAM. Considering those limitations, State Defendants can represent that, as of March 6, 2023, the total number of voter records in the TEAM system for which the "Mail In Request Reject Reason" field is populated with "NT" or "No TDL/SSN in VR Record" for the November 8, 2022 General Election was 163.

INTERROGATORY NO. 11. Identify each county that sought approval to provide supplemental information, instructions, or guidance concerning SB 1 identification number requirements in the ballot package for the November 8, 2022 general election, including but not limited to any insert, letter, or modification of standard materials prescribed by the Office of the Secretary of State.

OBJECTION AND RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case, overly broad, irrelevant to any claim or defense, not reasonably specific, or unduly burdensome. These answers and objections are made without waiving any further objections to, or admitting the relevancy or materiality of, any of the information requested.

Counties need not seek SOS's approval when providing additional information, instructions, or guidance—including explanatory inserts or letters—concerning SB 1 identification number requirements. When requested to do so by county election officials, SOS's role in relation to such materials is to assist and advise those officials with the application, operation, and interpretation of the Texas Election Code. Under Section 31.002 of the Texas Election Code, SOS prescribes the design and content of official election forms to ensure consistency with the requirements of the Code. More specifically, SOS prescribes the required textual material that must be included on the official ballot envelope pursuant to Section 86.012 of the Texas Election Code. Additionally, Section 86.013 of the Texas Election Code sets forth parameters for the design and content of the official carrier envelope, and SOS prescribes textual material that must be included on the official carrier envelope pursuant to Section 86.013(d).

However, SOS has not established a formal tracking system to account for all requests by county election officials for assistance and advice relating to mail balloting materials. Nor has SOS established a formal tracking system for county requests for assistance and advice regarding the modification of prescribed forms in a manner that still satisfies the requirements set forth in the Texas Election Code. Considering those limitations, State Defendants have been able to determine after a diligent search that at least the following counties contacted SOS about modifying prescribed forms or including supplemental mail balloting materials describing the SB 1 identification number requirements:

- Bexar County
- Harris County
- Jefferson County
- Navarro County

INTERROGATORY NO. 12. Identify additional employee or contractor positions (i.e., any additional headcount) created by the Office of the Secretary of State during the general election period to facilitate, support, or assist with mail voting or the implementation of SB 1 identification requirements. In answering this interrogatory, please provide a description of their duties, work hours, and compensation.

OBJECTION AND RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case, overly broad, irrelevant to any claim or defense, not reasonably specific, or unduly burdensome. These answers and objections are made without waiving any further objections to, or admitting the relevancy or materiality of, any of the information requested.

Elections in Texas are largely decentralized, with counties taking a leading role in the administration of elections and SOS providing assistance and advice to election officials upon request. While the SOS hired employees in its Elections Division during the time period in question, no additional employee or contractor positions were created within SOS in response to SB 1's identification requirements. Any assistance or advice provided regarding such requirements fell within SOS's existing resources.

INTERROGATORY NO. 13. State the amount of money spent by the Office of the Secretary of State on voter education specific to SB 1 identification requirements during the general election period and how that money was allocated.

OBJECTION AND RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case, overly broad, irrelevant to any claim or defense, not reasonably specific, or unduly burdensome. These answers and objections are made without waiving any further objections to, or admitting the relevancy or materiality of, any of the information requested.

While SOS engaged in substantial voter outreach and education efforts for the 2022 election cycle, it does not possess the means to determine the precise amount spent on voter education specific to SB 1 identification requirements during the time period in question given the manner in which the funds were expended. SOS's voter education efforts were not itemized by specific provisions of the Texas Election Code or any particular enacted legislation, including SB 1. Considering those limitations, State Defendants can represent that SOS dedicated approximately $3.5 million toward voter education related to voter ID requirements during the 2022 election cycle, which includes the March 2022 Primary Election, the May 7, 2022 Uniform Election, the May 2022 Primary Runoff Election, and the November 2022 General Election. This included approximately $1.5 million in paid media purchases related to voter ID requirements in relation to the General Election. However, these media purchases addressed ID requirements for both voting in person and voting by mail. As such, the SOS is unable to identify spending totals that are disaggregated based on voting type.

INTERROGATORY NO. 14. Identify all voter education undertaken by the Office of the Secretary of State specifically related to SB 1 identification requirements during the general election period, including but not limited to the timing, format, and distribution of such voter education activities.

OBJECTION AND RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case, overly broad, irrelevant to any claim or defense, not reasonably specific, or unduly burdensome. These answers and objections are made without waiving any further objections to, or admitting the relevancy or materiality of, any of the information requested.

While SOS engaged in substantial voter outreach and education efforts for the 2022 election cycle, it does not possess the means to identify efforts specific to SB 1 identification requirements during the time period in question given the manner in which the funds were expended. SOS's voter education efforts were not itemized by specific provisions of the Texas Election Code or any particular enacted legislation, including SB 1. Considering those limitations, State Defendants can represent that SOS's voter education efforts addressing voter ID requirements included paid media purchases, including television and radio ads, local television segments, digital ad banners, print ads in various languages, billboards, gas pump toppers, window clings, and paid social media ads. However, these efforts addressed ID requirements for both voting in person and voting by mail as a whole and were not separated by voting type. Identifying the timing, format, and distribution of each voter education activity, encompassing voting in person and voting by mail collectively, would be unduly burdensome and disproportionate to the needs of the case.

INTERROGATORY NO. 15. State the amount of money provided by the Office of the Secretary of State to counties in the form of grants or other financial support for the purpose of implementing SB 1 identification requirements during the general election period and how that money was allocated, including but not limited to the timing, conditions, and recipients of such payments.

OBJECTION AND RESPONSE:

State Defendants object to this interrogatory to the extent that the information sought is not proportional to the needs of this case, overly broad, irrelevant to any claim or defense, not reasonably specific, or unduly burdensome. These answers and objections are made without waiving any further objections to, or admitting the relevancy or materiality of, any of the information requested.

While SOS has provided counties with grants and similar financial support related to the administration of elections during the relevant time period, it is unaware of any such grants that were provided "for the purpose of implementing SB 1 identification requirements."

89% of Mail Ballots Flagged Under New Law Rejected 19% of all Mail Ballots Received Rejected

(Houston, TX) – Of the 36,878 mail ballots received in time for the 2022 primary, 6,888 mail ballots were ultimately rejected as a direct result of Senate Bill 1. In comparison, for the 2018 primary only 135 of the 48,473 mail ballots received were rejected.

The primary was the first election under SB 1. The bill requires Texans voting by mail to include their Texas ID number or Social Security number on their mail-in ballot's carrier envelope, and that number has to match with the ID listed in the voter registration database.

Confusion and frustration over the new requirements caused a swell of phone calls to the Election Administration's call center. Since January, the call center received 8,000 calls from people asking for help navigating the voting process This is higher than the monthly call volume in the lead up to the November 2020 and November 2021 election.

In response, the office doubled the number of staff dedicated to voter outreach, calling or emailing voters if contact information was on file to help them navigate the new system, followed by a letter of instruction on how to correct, or 'cure', ballots in effort to ensure their ballot would still be counted.

"Since the formation of the Harris County Elections Administration in November 2020, our office increased the number of registered voters in a non-presidential year, a first in Harris County, as a result of our new outreach program, an increased turnout of nearly every election we've hosted, increased access to voting by mail, and was one of four in the county to broaden access to voting while in jail. These restrictive voting laws continue to undermine our efforts to expand voter access and instead make voting harder," said Isabel Longoria, Harris County Elections Administrator.

Ultimately, of the 7,750 mail ballots flagged for rejection specifically due to ID issues, 849 were able to correct their ballots. An additional 13 voters were unable to, or opted out of, voting by mail altogether and appeared in person to cast their ballot.

Those eligible to vote by mail include senior citizens, those with disabilities, have recently given birth, are incarcerated, or are out of the county.

Hi Paul,

We ran the ABBM rejection rate numbers on February 24th – about a week after the February 18th deadline – and the final rejection rate was about 3.8% -- see below for specific numbers and party breakdown:

Election		Total	Applications Accepted	Applications Rejected
2022 March Republican Primary	ABBM	113,868	107,642	5,324
	FPCA	1,042	742	6
2022 March Democratic Primary	ABBM	144,136	138,672	4,616
	FPCA	1,996	1,606	21
Total	АВВМ	258,004	246,314	9,940
	FPCA	3,038	2,348	27

9,940 ABBM rejections out of 258,004 ABBMs received, comes out to a 3.852% rejection rate.

Hope this helps,

Thanks, Sam. Appreciate it.

One last question – What was the final VBM application rejection rate? Bettencourt's office said 3.35%. Is that correct?

Hi Paul,

We're still waiting for all 254 counties to report their final official results, as well as voting history and information regarding mail-in ballot rejections, to our office, so we do not have comprehensive statewide statistics until all data points are uploaded into our system.

As for a comment, You can attribute the following statement to me:

"Based on what we have heard from county election officials, the vast majority of mail-in ballot rejections were due to voters who did not provide any ID information on their carrier envelope, despite having successfully applied for a mail-in ballot using the very same ID information on their Application for a Ballot by Mail. While in years past we have focused our voter education efforts on in-person ID requirements, this year we are also devoting a significant portion of our voter education campaign to enhancing awareness of the new mail-in ballot ID requirements. We are confident we will have all the information we need to apply any lessons learned during the primary to an even more robust voter education campaign heading into the November General Election."

Hi Sam -

Hope you had a good weekend. Reaching out for comment about one more story we have coming about ballot rejections:

Our AP tally of final ballot rejections, based on those final reconciliation reports and contacting counties directly, shows nearly 23,000 rejected ballots. Statewide, that averaged out to a nearly 14% rejection rate.

Couple questions:

- 1) Has your office completed compiling this data from counties as well? If so, what numbers do you have?
- 2) Based on available reports from the U.S. Election Assistance Commission, this is more ballot rejections (and a higher election rate) than in any Texas election since at least 2004. Are these record number?
- 3) Since the primary ended, has the governor or lawmakers reached out to your office to discuss these high rate of rejected ballots?
- 4) Any comment from your office about these final rejected rates?

Thanks again for all your help these last couple weeks.

Paul

ELECTION ADMINISTRATION AND VOTING SURVEY 2020 COMPREHENSIVE REPORT

A REPORT FROM THE
U.S. ELECTION ASSISTANCE COMMISSION TO THE 117TH CONGRESS

Executive Summary

Since 2004, the U.S. Election Assistance Commission (EAC) has conducted the Election Administration and Voting Survey (EAVS) following each federal general election. The EAVS asks all 50 U.S. states, the District of Columbia, and five U.S. territories—American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands—to provide data about the ways Americans vote and how elections are administered. Since 2008, this project has included a separate survey, the Election Administration Policy Survey (Policy Survey), that collects information about state election laws, policies, and practices.

The EAVS provides the most comprehensive source of state and local jurisdiction-level data about election administration in the United States. These data play a vital role in helping election officials, policymakers, and other election stakeholders identify trends, anticipate and respond to changing voter needs, invest resources to improve election administration and the voter experience, and better secure U.S. elections infrastructure. The EAVS data make it possible to examine the details of the U.S. election infrastructure and to produce a generalizable understanding of core aspects of the election process and the management challenges faced by election officials. The survey provides policymakers and the public with critical information every two years about how federal elections are conducted, and it helps the EAC fulfill its congressionally mandated reporting requirements. The EAVS is also invaluable to election officials who use the data to manage election oversight, conduct issue analysis and strategic planning, and create training and promotional materials. The EAC also uses EAVS data to create clearinghouse resources to advance the agency's mission and to better support election officials and voters as well as to inform lawmakers and national-level stakeholders about the impact of federal voting laws and the changing landscape of U.S. elections.

The 2020 general election was heavily affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. The pandemic and the ensuing public health emergency necessitated a variety of changes to existing election practices to accommodate social distancing and to slow the spread of the virus among voters, poll workers, and election officials and staff. In response, many states took action to expand the availability of inperson voting before Election Day and mail voting. Because of its status as the most comprehensive survey of election administration in the United States, the 2020 EAVS serves as a record of the extraordinary efforts by the nation's election officials and poll workers to ensure that the 2020 general election was conducted in a safe and secure manner. To this end, the EAC is pleased to present to the 117th Congress its report on the 2020 EAVS.

This report describes in detail how the 2020 federal general election was administered and how voters cast their ballots. Data from the EAVS and the accompanying Election Administration Policy Survey (Policy Survey) are used to provide an overview of each of the following aspects of the election process:

• Turnout, voting methods, polling places, poll workers, and election technology are covered in Chapter 1, "Overview of Election Administration and Voting in the 2020 General Election";

- Key laws, rules, policies, and procedures that govern U.S. elections are covered in Chapter 2, "Election Law and Procedure: The Policy Survey";
- Voter registration and list maintenance are covered in Chapter 3, "Voter Registration: The NVRA and Beyond";
- Voting by individuals covered under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) is described in Chapter 4, "Military and Overseas Voting in 2020: UOCAVA"; and
- Finally, the methodology of the EAVS and a description of the survey questions are discussed in Chapter 5, "Survey Methodology and Procedures."

Voting and Election Administration Findings

The 2020 EAVS confirms that the 2020 general election saw the highest turnout of any federal general election recorded by the EAVS to date, with 67.7% of the citizen voting age population (CVAP) casting ballots that were counted, an increase of 6.7 percentage points from 2016 levels. Nearly every state saw an increase in turnout compared to the 2016 EAVS. Furthermore, more than 209 million people were active registered voters for the 2020 general election, which represents an all-time high, and more than 161 million voters cast ballots that were counted for this election.

This election also saw sweeping changes in how voters cast their ballots. In the 2016 EAVS, 54.5% of voters cast their ballots in person on Election Day, and in the 2018 EAVS, 58.2% of voters did so. In 2020, only 30.5% of voters cast their ballots in person on Election Day. The percentage of the electorate that voted a mailed ballot increased to 43.1% of the electorate, nearly a 20-percentage-point increase from 2016 levels. Jurisdiction-level analysis shows that the largest increases in mail voting rates occurred in jurisdictions in states that newly instituted all-mail elections in 2020 and in jurisdictions in states that removed requirements to provide an excuse to request a mailed ballot. Although the total number of mailed ballots transmitted in 2020 was more than double the number transmitted in 2016, the percentages of mailed ballots that were returned by voters, that were counted, and that were rejected did not change significantly at the national level.

States reported a total of 132,556 polling places at which 775,101 poll workers assisted voters with in-person early and Election Day voting. The data also show a shift in the age distribution of poll workers, with the percentage of poll workers ages 18 to 25 and 26 to 40 increasing to 6.2% and 15.0%, respectively, and the percentage of poll workers ages 61 to 70 and 71 and older decreasing, to 27.3% and 20.1%, respectively. Jurisdictions also reported that poll worker recruitment was less difficult in 2020 than it was in 2016. In survey comments, many jurisdictions cited cross-cutting effects on their recruitment efforts. Jurisdictions reported that the COVID-19 pandemic made it difficult to retain long-time, older poll workers and caused last-minute poll worker shortages, but the efforts of the EAC, state election offices, and other organizations to encourage qualified individuals to serve as poll workers were cited as helping contribute to an oversupply of poll workers in some areas.

States reported that the use of electronic poll books (or e-poll books) increased since the 2018 EAVS, and 17 states used e-poll books in all of their jurisdictions. Scanners and ballot marking devices (BMD) continued to be the most common types of voting equipment used, and the use of direct-recording electronic (DRE) machines that were not equipped with a voter-verified paper audit trail (DRE without VVPAT) also continued to decline. In 2020, only 32 jurisdictions across the country relied solely on voting machines with no paper backup.

Election Administration Policy Survey Findings

To provide context to the data that states report in the EAVS, the EAC collects information about states' election policies. Two-thirds of states reported having top-down registration systems hosted on a single, central platform or mainframe that is maintained by the state with information supplied by local jurisdictions; the remaining one-third of states reported having bottom-up or hybrid databases. To keep their voter registration rolls accurate and up to date, most states reported sharing information with motor vehicle agencies, government entities that maintain death records, and agencies that maintain felony or prison records. The percentage of states offering both sameday registration (51.8%) and online registration (80.4%) increased since the 2018 Policy Survey.

The Policy Survey also recorded an increase in state policies that make it safer for voters to cast a ballot or to reduce potential lines and crowds at in-person polling places. In 2020, a total of 14 states reported having all-mail elections, in which all registered voters or all active registered voters were automatically sent a mailed ballot—10 of these states conducted all-mail elections statewide, whereas four of the states did so only in select jurisdictions. This was an increase from the 2018 Policy Survey, which found that three states administered their elections entirely by mail and four states had all-mail elections in select local jurisdictions. In addition, 69.6% of states did not require voters to provide an excuse to be able to vote a mailed ballot (seven states had removed the excuse requirement since the 2018 Policy Survey), and 51.8% of states reported that there were some circumstances under which voters could receive ballots electronically. However, the Policy Survey did not collect information on whether policy changes made for the 2020 general election were permanent or temporary, or whether the changes were made in direct response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Nearly all states reported that voting systems must be tested and certified before approval, with the most common certification requirements being testing by an EAC-accredited voting system test laboratory (VSTL), certification according to the EAC-adopted Voluntary Voting System Guidelines (VVSG), and both state and federal certification. In 2020, of the 40 states that reported using e-poll books, 55% required testing and certification to the state's specifications before purchasing the e-poll books.

In the post-election period, 78.6% of states reported that they required a tabulation audit to verify the voting equipment used to count ballots worked properly. Of these states, about three-quarters required a traditional tabulation audit (which examines a sample of ballots from a fixed percentage of randomly selected voting districts or voting machines), whereas about one-fifth of the states required a risk-limiting tabulation audit (in which statistical methods are used to select the audit sample size). All states reported having a mechanism for conducting election recounts, although the circumstances under which a recount would be conducted varied by state.

The National Voter Registration Act (NVRA) Findings

The 2020 EAVS data show the active voter registration rate for the 2020 general election was 88.2% of the CVAP, which represents an increase of 3.5 percentage points since the 2016 EAVS. More than 103 million voter registration applications were submitted between the close of registration for the 2018 general election and the close of registration for the 2020 general election, which represents a 33.8% increase in the number of registration applications received in the period leading up to the 2016 general election. Of the registration applications received, the most common outcome was an update to the voter's existing registration record that did not involve a cross-jurisdiction change of address. This type of update accounted for nearly half of the registration applications received. New and valid registrations that resulted in the creation of a new voter registration record within the jurisdiction accounted for nearly one-third of the applications received.

As with previous iterations of the EAVS, state motor vehicle departments accounted for the largest share of these registration applications (39.3%). The second-most common source of these applications was online registration, which accounted for 28.2% of applications. Online registration also saw the fastest growth of any registration source tracked by the EAVS.

The 29 states and territories that allow same-day voter registration (SDR) reported receiving more than 1.6 million SDRs during the voting period for the 2020 general election, approximately double the number received during the 2018 EAVS. SDR allows individuals to register to vote on the same day that they cast their ballot for an election. Nationwide, more SDRs were received on Election Day than were received during early voting.

Pursuant to the NVRA requirements, states reported sending more than 28 million confirmation notices and removing more than 18 million voter registration records from their voter registration rolls between the close of registration for the 2018 general election and the close of registration for the 2020 general election. The most common reasons cited for removing voter registration records were failure to respond to a confirmation notice and to vote in the two most recent federal general elections, moving from the jurisdiction in which the voter was registered to vote, and the voter's death.

The Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) Findings

States reported transmitting more than 1.2 million ballots to UOCAVA voters—a population that includes members of the uniformed services absent from their voting residence, their eligible family members, and U.S. citizens living overseas who receive special protections under the federal UOCAVA law. Of those transmitted ballots, more than 900,000 were returned by voters and nearly 890,000 were counted in the election.

Continuing a trend that began with the 2016 EAVS, in 2020, overseas citizens made up a larger proportion of the UOCAVA population than did uniformed services members and their eligible family members. In 2020, overseas citizens accounted for 57.4% of registered UOCAVA voters, and uniformed services members accounted for 42.3%. Three states—California, Florida, and Washington—accounted for slightly more than 40% of all the registered UOCAVA voters reported nationwide.

Among uniformed services voters, postal mail transmission was the most common method reported (accounting for nearly half of the ballots transmitted to uniformed services voters), whereas overseas citizens more commonly received their ballots through email (accounting for 70.9% of ballots transmitted to overseas citizens).

Nearly 98% of UOCAVA ballots returned by voters were reported as counted, with just over 2% of returned ballots reported as rejected. Nationwide, more than 33,000 Federal Write-In Absentee Ballots (FWAB) were reported as received. This form may be submitted by UOCAVA voters as an emergency backup ballot in case their official ballot is not received by local election officials in time to be counted. The FWAB allowed nearly 24,000 UOCAVA voters to have their votes counted in the 2020 general election.

This report by the U.S. Election Assistance Commission is the result of a contract to collect and analyze data for the 2020 Election Administration and Voting Survey. The contract was performed by Fors Marsh Group LLC, an applied research company based in Arlington, VA.

Chapter 1. Overview of Election Administration and Voting in the 2020 General Election

Key Findings

The 2020 Election Administration and Voting Survey (EAVS) collected data on ballots cast, voter registration, overseas and military voting, voting technology, and other important issues related to voting and election administration. The 2020 general election was especially impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic, which caused drastic changes to how the election was administered and how voters cast their ballots. Notable findings from the 2020 EAVS include:

- More than 209 million people were active registered voters for the 2020 general election, an all-time high for the EAVS.
- Voter turnout for the 2020 general election reached the highest level documented in any EAVS thus far, at 67.7% of the citizen voting age population (CVAP). Turnout increased 6.7 percentage points from 2016 levels, and nearly all states reported an increase in turnout.
 More than 161 million voters cast ballots that were counted for the 2020 election.
- For the first time, a majority of voters cast their ballots before Election Day. Slightly more than 43% of voters participated with a mailed ballot, and 30.6% of ballots were cast through inperson voting before Election Day. Ballots cast on Election Day at a physical polling place comprised 30.5% of the turnout for the 2020 general election.
- The number of mailed ballots transmitted to voters more than doubled from 2016 to 2020, and the percentage of mailed ballots that were returned by voters, that were counted, and that were rejected held steady with 2016 levels.
- The COVID-19 pandemic appears to have been associated with a change in both poll worker recruitment and the resulting age distribution of the poll worker workforce. States reported that the ages of their poll workers skewed younger during the 2020 general election compared to during the 2016 general election. However, states and jurisdictions reported that recruiting poll workers for this election was slightly easier due to national and state efforts that encouraged voters to serve as poll workers.
- The most common types of election equipment that were used were paper ballot scanners and ballot marking devices (BMD). The use of direct-recording electronic machines that were not equipped with a voter-verified paper audit trail (DRE without VVPAT) continued to decline among jurisdictions since the 2018 general election, and the use of electronic poll books (e-poll books) continued to increase. More than 30% of jurisdictions reported using e-poll books (an increase of more than 5 percentage points from 2018), and 17 states reported that all jurisdictions used e-poll books.

Election Administration in the United States

The United States is notable for having a largely decentralized system for administering federal elections. Local jurisdictions have the primary responsibility of administering state and federal elections and of tabulating, reporting, and certifying results. The U.S. Constitution and various federal laws govern specific aspects of federal elections, and a small number of federal agencies—such as the U.S. Election Assistance Commission (EAC) and the Federal Voting Assistance Program (FVAP)—play a supportive role in election administration. Broad legal and procedural authority rests with the states,¹ territories, the District of Columbia, and local jurisdictions. As a result, a wide variation exists among and within state election policies and practices, and the policies and practices are constantly evolving. Nevertheless, U.S. elections generally follow a standard process. As shown in Figure 1, the election process can be viewed as a cycle.

- 1. The legal and procedural framework for elections is generally established in advance of a general election. This framework includes determining voter eligibility rules; how, when, and where voters may cast their ballots; and what technology will be used to support elections. Supported by state election offices, most of these policies and procedures are implemented by election officials at the local level (e.g., county, township, municipality).
- 2. To participate in elections, eligible citizens typically must register to vote, pursuant to the eligibility rules established by federal law and by their state. 2 In many states, voters must register in advance of a set registration deadline; in others, eligible individuals may register and cast a ballot on the same day, whether during an early voting period or on Election Day. Depending on state policy, eligible citizens may have multiple avenues for submitting their registration applications, including by mail, fax, or email; online registration websites; in person at an election office, at a motor vehicle office, at other state government agency offices, or at an armed forces recruitment office; or through a registration drive. States are also required to periodically examine their voter registration rolls and remove the records of voters who are no longer eligible, for instance, because the voter no longer resides in the state or jurisdiction in which they are registered, the voter has failed to respond to a notice sent to them by mail and has not voted in the two most recent federal general elections, the voter is deceased, or the voter has received a criminal conviction that disqualifies them from voting. The voter may also directly inform the election office of a change in residency, which begins the process of designating a voter as inactive and ultimately removing them from the voter registration roll. The process of updating voter registration rolls and removing ineligible voters is referred to as list maintenance.
- 3. When a federal general election is approaching, voting begins well in advance of Election Day for many voters, including eligible military voters and overseas citizens who are absent from their voting residence, for whom the right to participate in federal elections is protected under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). In addition, all states provide avenues for voters to cast ballots before Election Day. This may include voting a mailed ballot, casting a ballot in person at a dedicated early voting site, or receiving and casting a ballot at an election office. Some states allow any eligible voter to cast their ballot before Election Day, whereas others restrict early voting and mail voting only to certain segments of the population, such as voters who are absent from their home jurisdiction on Election Day, voters with illnesses or disabilities, voters over a certain age, or voters who provide a statutorily valid excuse. The voting options that are available to voters and the timelines for mail voting and in-person early voting vary by state and by local jurisdiction.

4. Voters who do not cast ballots beforehand may vote on Election Day at in-person voting sites staffed by poll workers. In most states, individuals whose eligibility cannot be verified at the time of voting may cast a provisional ballot. Election officials then investigate the eligibility of individuals who cast provisional ballots to determine whether their ballots should be counted, either in full or in part, or rejected.

- 5. After the polls close on Election Day, the process of counting ballots to determine the final election results begins. This may also be referred to as tabulation or canvassing. State policies vary on when counting may begin—some states may begin pre-processing mailed ballots (e.g., opening envelopes, verifying the mail voter's eligibility to cast a ballot, removing ballots from secrecy envelopes to prepare them for counting) before Election Day, whereas other states require that in-person polls must be closed before any ballots can be counted. Depending on state law and on what equipment is used to process the ballots, ballot counting may take several days to complete.
- 6. Once the unofficial results of the election are known, state and local election officials review the results for accuracy and certify them as final. After this is complete, many states conduct audits of their election results and voting equipment to ensure that the established election procedures were followed and that the equipment functioned correctly. Certain election races may also be recounted if the margin of victory is close; if a candidate, party, or other authorized group requests a recount; or if a court orders a recount to be conducted.

The election process can be viewed as a cycle in the sense that the experiences from previous elections are used to inform decision-making for the legal and procedural framework for subsequent elections. Often, the successful approaches and innovations implemented in one state or local jurisdiction during an election are adopted by other states or localities in subsequent elections.

The COVID-19 pandemic was declared in March 2020 and impacted nearly all aspects of the 2020 voting process, from dates and deadlines to how voters were able to register to vote, options to cast a ballot, and how long it took to count the ballots. In some cases, certain state policies, such as those concerning mail and absentee voting, were expanded temporarily for the 2020 election cycle to address the COVID-19 restrictions.³ Throughout the election, state and local election administrators, staff, and poll workers worked heroically to ensure voters were able to exercise their right to vote in a safe and secure manner.

The Election Administration and Voting Survey (EAVS)

Since 2004, the EAC has conducted the EAVS following each federal general election.⁴ The EAVS asks all 50 U.S. states, the District of Columbia, and the five U.S. territories—American Samoa, ³ The 2020 Policy Survey and EAVS did not collect information on when a policy change was made, why it was made, or whether the change was temporary or permanent.

⁴ The EAVS does not collect data on primary elections, run-off elections, or special elections. The data provided by states were only for the November 3, 2020, federal general election.

Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands⁵—to provide data about the ways in which Americans vote and how elections are administered.

The EAVS provides the most comprehensive source of state and local jurisdiction-level data about election administration in the United States. These data play a vital role in helping election officials, policymakers, and other election stakeholders identify trends, anticipate and respond to changing voter needs, invest resources to improve election administration and the voter experience, and better secure U.S. elections infrastructure. The EAVS data make it possible to examine the details of the U.S. elections infrastructure and to produce a generalizable understanding of the core aspects of the election process and the management challenges faced by election officials. The survey provides policymakers and the public with critical information every two years about how federal elections are conducted, and it helps the EAC fulfill its congressionally mandated reporting requirements. The EAVS is also invaluable to election officials themselves. These officials use the EAVS to manage election oversight, conduct issue analysis and strategic planning, and create training and promotional materials.

The EAC also uses the EAVS data to create research and clearinghouse resources to advance the agency's mission and to better support election officials and voters as well as to inform lawmakers and national-level stakeholders about the impact of federal voting laws and the changing landscape of U.S. elections. The EAVS helps the EAC meet its mandate under the Help America Vote Act (HAVA) to serve as a national clearinghouse and resource for the compilation of information and to review procedures with respect to the administration of federal elections. The EAVS sections related to voter registration and UOCAVA voting allow states to satisfy their data reporting requirements established, respectively, by the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA) and UOCAVA. The EAVS also helps FVAP fulfill its obligations under UOCAVA to reduce obstacles to ensure military and overseas voting success by collecting data about how UOCAVA voters participate in elections.

The EAVS data collection effort consists of two separately administered surveys: the Policy Survey and the EAVS. The Policy Survey, which is due in advance of each federal general election, collects data on state election policies and procedures to provide context for the quantitative data included in each state's EAVS submission. The EAVS, which is due after each federal general election is complete, collects data on voter registration, UOCAVA voters, mail voting, in-person voting and polling operations, provisional ballots, voter participation, and election technology. Complete details about the methodology of the 2020 Policy Survey and the EAVS, including an outline of the survey questionnaires, the data collection templates, the data validation process, and technical assistance provided to respondents, can be found in Chapter 5, "Survey Methodology and Procedures," of this report.

Providing EAVS data is frequently a joint task undertaken by state and local jurisdiction election officials. Although 25 states and territories were able to provide all EAVS data from their centralized election database, 31 states and territories relied on local jurisdictions to provide responses to some or all of the EAVS questions. An analysis of how states provide EAVS data can be found in Chapter 2 of this report.

Chapter 1 of this report covers turnout and modes of voting in the 2020 general election, polling places and poll workers, and election technology. This chapter also comprises a non-exhaustive overview of the data provided by states and jurisdictions in the EAVS. State election policies and practices are featured in Chapter 2, "Election Law and Procedure: The Policy Survey." Voter registration is covered in greater detail in Chapter 3, "Voter Registration: The NVRA and Beyond." UOCAVA voting is discussed further in Chapter 4, "Military and Overseas Voting in the 2020 General Election: UOCAVA."

Overall EAVS Response Rates

The analysis in this report is based on information and data submitted and certified by the 50 U.S. states, five territories, and the District of Columbia. These 56 entities comprised 6,460 jurisdictions.6 The state-level response rate was 100% (56 of 56 entities provided data), and the jurisdiction-level response rate was 100% (6,460 of 6,460 jurisdictions provided data).7 During the data collection period, efforts were made to maximize the completeness and accuracy of the data reported. These efforts are outlined in the methodology of this report (Chapter 5). Instances when a state's data were not included in a calculation because of missing data or data quality issues are described in the footnotes and table notes that accompany the analysis in this report.

Turnout in the 2020 General Election

According to the EAVS data submitted by states, there were 228,004,364 voters who were registered to vote in the United States as of November 3, 2020. Of this total, 209,441,338 were considered active voters, which means they had no additional processing requirements to fulfill before voting, and 18,523,963 were considered inactive voters, which means they required address verification under the provisions of the NVRA before they would be permitted to vote.8 As a percentage of the 2019 CVAP estimate calculated by the U.S. Census Bureau, 88.2% of voting age

⁶ What constitutes a jurisdiction for EAVS reporting is defined by how each state chose to provide data. For the 2020 EAVS, most states reported data on the county level (or county equivalent, such as parishes for Louisiana). Illinois, Maryland, Missouri, and Virginia reported data for independent cities in addition to counties. The territories, the District of Columbia, and Alaska each reported as a single jurisdiction. Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Wisconsin reported data on the township level. Maine also reported its UOCAVA data in Section B as a separate jurisdiction, because this information was only collected at the state level. Michigan reported data for the county level, but most election administration activities take place in the 1,520 local election jurisdictions in the state. Two jurisdictions in Wisconsin were consolidated or annexed into other jurisdictions partway through 2020. See Appendix A in Chapter 5 of this report for a breakdown of the number of jurisdictions reported in each state and the response rate by survey section for each state.

⁷ Appendix A of Chapter 5 of this report contains an analysis of state-level response rates to each section of the EAVS. 8 The total number of registered voters was collected in item A1a of the EAVS. The total number of active voters was collected in item A1b. The total number of inactive voters was collected in item A1c. According to the 2020 Policy Survey, six states (Guam, Idaho, North Dakota, New Hampshire, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Wyoming) did not distinguish between active and inactive voters in their registration records. These states were not required to provide data in item A1c of the EAVS. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

Calculating Turnout Rates

When assessing election administration, one primary outcome of interest is voter turnout, which is calculated by dividing the number of people who participated in an election by the number of people who could have participated. The EAVS provides a measure of the total number of voters who cast a ballot that was counted in an election (item F1a) for the numerator in this equation. However, multiple denominators can be used:

• Number of registered voters or active voters. The number of people a state reports as registered and eligible to vote (A1a in the EAVS). Some states separately report the number of active voters who have no additional processing requirements to fulfill before voting (A1b in the EAVS). This number is available for states and sub-state EAVS jurisdictions.

$$\frac{F1a \ of \ EAVS}{A1a \ or \ A1b \ of \ EAVS} \times 100 \ = \ Registration \ Turnout \ Rate$$

• Citizen voting age population (CVAP). The estimate of the total number of U.S. citizens 18 years of age or older based on the U.S. Census Bureau's ACS. This number is available for states and most sub-state EAVS jurisdictions but not for U.S. territories, except for Puerto Rico.

$$\frac{F1a \ of \ EAVS}{CVAP} \times 100 = CVAP \ Turnout \ Rate$$

 Voting Eligible Population (VEP). The measure of the CVAP minus those who are ineligible to vote (such as persons with disqualifying felony convictions) and persons who are in the military or citizens living overseas. This number is available for states, but not territories or for sub-state jurisdictions.

$$\frac{F1a \ of \ EAVS}{VEP} \times 100 \ = \ VEP \ Turnout \ Rate$$

Relying on the number of registered or active voters can be problematic for calculating turnout because it is often challenging for states to keep voter registration rolls fully up to date (see Chapter 3 of this report for a discussion of list maintenance practices). Using VEP as the denominator in turnout calculations would somewhat overrepresent voter turnout—since EAVS data explicitly include persons covered by UOCAVA—and would restrict the ability to estimate turnout for sub-state jurisdictions. Although each denominator has its limitations, the EAC uses CVAP to calculate turnout in this report because of its availability for the majority of jurisdictions that report EAVS data and because it provides a more accurate picture of the population covered by the EAVS. Appendix D of Chapter 5 of this report contains recommendations on how to calculate additional EAVS rates.

citizens were registered as active voters for the 2020 general election.9 This is an increase of 3.6 percentage points from the 2016 CVAP active voter registration rate of 84.6%. Further details about

⁹ This report uses the 1-year American Community Survey (ACS) state estimate for 2019 instead of the 5-year estimate to ensure that the CVAP is as current as possible. The CVAP estimates for 2020 were not available by the time this report was finalized. The active CVAP registration rate was calculated as the total number of active voters (A1b of the EAVS) divided by CVAP. American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands were not included in this calculation because the U.S. Census Bureau does not calculate a CVAP for these territories. North Dakota was not included voter registration, including how voters registered to vote, the use of same-day voter registration (SDR), and list maintenance, can be found in Chapter 3 of this report.

States also reported that a total of 161,303,109 voters cast ballots that were counted for the 2020 general election. This represents a CVAP turnout rate of 67.7% nationwide. ¹⁰ Turnout for the 2020 general election increased 6.7 percentage points from the 2016 CVAP turnout rate of 61%. ¹¹ Despite many election administration challenges related to the COVID-19 pandemic, the 2020 election had the highest turnout rate of any EAVS to date.

Figure 2 shows that nearly all states experienced higher turnout rates in 2020 than they did for the 2016 general election. Twenty-one states had more than 70% of their CVAP cast a ballot that was counted for the 2020 general election; only four states had turnout over 70% for the 2016 election. In addition, three states—Utah, Hawaii, and Texas—had turnout increases of more than 10 percentage points compared to the 2016 general election. The states with the highest turnout increases tended to be those that made mail voting easy for voters. Hawaii and Utah had both enacted all-mail elections in 2019, and Nevada, New Jersey, and Vermont did the same as a temporary measure in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. Arizona, California, Montana, and Washington had already been conducting their elections predominantly or entirely by mail before 2020. Michigan automatically sent mailed ballot request forms to all registered voters for the 2020 general election. These states, along with Georgia, Tennessee, and Texas, each had turnout increases of more than 8 percentage points from 2016 to 2020. Only one U.S. territory—Puerto Rico—reported a decrease in turnout since the 2016 general election.

Another notable finding from the 2020 EAVS was a change in how voters cast their ballots. Historically, the majority of voters have cast their ballots in person at a physical polling place on Election Day. This method of voting was used by 54.5% of voters in 2016 and by 58.2% of voters in 2018. However, in 2020, the percentage of these voters fell to 30.5%. ¹² For the first time in EAVS history, a majority of voters did not cast their ballots in person on Election Day; in 2020, Election Day in-person voting was less commonly used than mail voting or in-person early voting. The nationwide number of voters who vote in person on Election Day has likewise been steadily decreasing, from 72,393,400 in 2016 to 67,133,886 in 2018 and to 47,148,389 in 2020. This is despite an overall in this calculation because this state does not have voter registration. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

¹⁰ The total number of voters who cast a ballot that was counted was reported in item F1a of the EAVS. The CVAP turnout rate was calculated by dividing F1a by CVAP. American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands were not included in this calculation because the U.S. Census Bureau does not calculate CVAP for these territories. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

¹¹ For the 2020 EAVS, the question about voter participation was reworded. In 2016, this question collected data on ballots cast (independent of outcome), whereas in 2020, it collected data on ballots cast and counted. Thus, it is likely that the 2016 turnout calculation was higher than it would have been if the 2020 question wording had been used, thus, underestimating the true turnout change from 2016 to 2020.

¹² Election Day in-person turnout was calculated by dividing the total number of Election Day in-person voters who cast a ballot that was counted (item F1b of the EAVS) by the total number of voters who cast a ballot that was counted (item F1a). Oregon and Washington did not report any in-person Election Day voters because these states conduct their elections almost entirely by mail. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands were not included, as CVAP is not available for these territories. increase in 2020 in the number of states with a policy that allows for vote centers (either on a statewide level or in certain jurisdictions), which allow voters to cast their ballots at any polling location or vote center within their jurisdiction rather than at an assigned polling location. Twenty-one states reported allowing vote centers for the 2020 general election compared to 17 states in 2018. 13

The percentage of voters who used a mailed ballot to vote surged, from 24.5% in 2016 and 25.6% in 2018 to 43.1% in 2020. The number of voters who used in-person early voting also increased from previous years, although the increase was not as large. In 2016, 25.3% of voters cast their ballots early in person, and 22% did so in 2018, compared to 30.6% for the 2020 general election. The

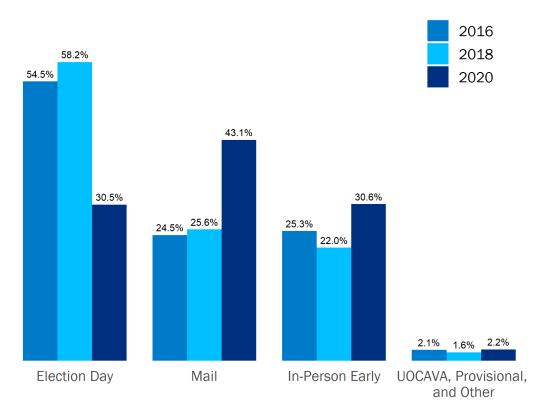

Figure 3. Mail Voting Was the Most Common Way for Voters to Cast Their Ballots in 2020

Mode of Turnout

Source: Election Day turnout was calculated as F1b/F1a x 100 for all years. Mail turnout was calculated as (F1d+F1g)/F1a x 100 for all years. In-person early turnout was calculated as F1f/F1a x 100 for all years. UOCAVA, provisional, and other turnout was calculated as (F1c+F1e+F1h)/F1a x 100 for all years. Casewise deletion was used at the state level (percentages for each mode of voting were calculated independently, and only states that reported data for a given mode were included in the analysis), and because of this, percentages do not sum to 100%.

¹³ Information on vote center policies was provided in Q13 of the 2018 Policy Survey and Q25 of the 2020 Policy Survey. Six states that did not offer vote centers in 2018 did so in 2020, and two states that offered vote centers in 2018 did not in 2020.

EAVS data confirm that the ways voters cast their ballots changed because of the COVID-19 pandemic. Many states took steps to reduce crowding at in-person polling places on Election Day by expanding the use of mail and early voting, and the EAVS data also confirm that voters made use of these options. Figure 3 shows the most commonly used modes of voting for the 2016, 2018, and 2020 general elections.

Voting by Mail

All states and territories and the District of Columbia offer their citizens the opportunity to cast their ballots by mail in federal general elections, although the number of citizens who cast their ballots using this method and the circumstances under which citizens can vote a mailed ballot vary widely among states. Some states use the term "absentee voting" instead of "mail voting." ¹⁴ For purposes of this report, mail voting refers to the process by which:

- 1. An individual receives a ballot in the mail before the election. In some states or jurisdictions, election offices automatically send a mailed ballot to all registered voters (often referred to as "all-mail elections"), whereas others automatically send mailed ballots only to individuals on a permanent mail voting list. In other states, individuals must file an application to request a ballot for each election for which they wish to vote a mailed ballot.¹⁵
- 2. The individual marks the mailed ballot with their preferences at home instead of at an election office or polling location.
- 3. The individual returns the voted ballot to election officials, typically by sending the voted ballot through the mail, by returning the voted ballot to an in-person voting site or election office, or by depositing the voted ballot in a secure designated drop box. ¹⁶ The options voters have for returning voted mailed ballots are dictated by state policy.

The 2020 Policy Survey results show that many states made changes to their mail voting policies since the 2018 general election. However, the Policy Survey did not record precisely when these changes were made, the reason behind the policy changes, or whether the policy changes were permanent or temporary. In 2020, 39 states did not require an excuse for voters to request a mailed ballot; six of these states and one territory (Delaware, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, South Carolina, Virginia, and the U.S. Virgin Islands) required an excuse in 2018 but not in 2020. In addition, 14 states conducted all-mail elections. Ten states (California, Colorado, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, New Jersey, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Vermont, and Washington) conducted all-mail elections on a statewide basis, and four states did so in select jurisdictions (Idaho, Minnesota, Montana, and Nebraska). However, states and jurisdictions that conducted their elections by mail typically also offered some form of in-person voting. For a more thorough look at the policies surrounding mail voting, please see Chapter 2, "Election Law and Procedure: The Policy Survey."

¹⁶ The 2020 EAVS did not collect information on which states used drop boxes, how many drop boxes were in use, or how many ballots were returned via drop boxes.

States reported that 69,486,968 ballots were cast using a mailed ballot and counted for the 2020 general election, more than double the number of ballots cast using a mailed ballot for the 2016 general election (33,140,080).¹⁷ The mailed ballot voting turnout rate increased by nearly 20 percentage points, from 24.5% in 2016 to 43.1% in 2020.

Table 1. Jurisdictions Saw Large Increases in Mail Turnout From 2018 to 2020

Type of Jurisdiction	2018 Average Mail Turnout	2020 Average Mail Turnout	Turnout Change
Jurisdiction was in a state that introduced a statewide all-mail election in 2020	9.9%	72.0%	62.1%
Jurisdiction was in a state that required an excuse for mail voting in 2018 but did not in 2020	5.9%	30.8%	24.9%
Jurisdiction was in a state that did not conduct all-mail elections in either 2018 or 2020	11.4%	30.6%	19.2%
Jurisdiction was in a state that did not change its excuse policy for mail voting from 2018 to 2020	10.2%	25.8%	15.6%

Source: The mail turnout rate for both 2018 and 2020 was calculated as $(F1d+F1g)/F1a \times 100$. Jurisdictions' classification on their state's all-mail election policy was based on their state's responses to Q9a of the 2018 Policy Survey and Q18a of the 2020 Policy Survey; jurisdictions in states that had all-vote-by-mail elections in select jurisdictions only were excluded from the analysis of mail voting policies. Jurisdictions' policies on whether to require an excuse for mail voting were based on their state's responses to Q8 of the 2018 Policy Survey and Q17 of the 2020 Policy Survey; jurisdictions in states that conduct all-mail elections, either statewide or in select jurisdictions, were excluded from the analysis of mail voting excuse policies. Casewise deletion was used at the jurisdiction level (only jurisdictions that reported data in F1d and/or F1g as well as reported data in F1a in both 2018 and 2020 were included in the analysis). All mail turnout increases from 2018 to 2020 were statistically significant at p < 0.001.

Jurisdiction-level analysis also shows large increases in mail voting from the 2018 to the 2020 general elections across a variety of policy configurations, particularly where mail voting was made more widely available. These increases are shown in Table 1. The largest increases occurred in states that did not have all-mail elections in 2018 but implemented this type of voting on a statewide level in 2020. Jurisdictions in these states had an average mail turnout level of 9.9% in 2018, which increased to 72% for the 2020 general election—an increase of 62.1 percentage points. The next largest increase occurred in jurisdictions whose states removed the requirement to provide an excuse in order to request a mailed ballot in 2020. These jurisdictions had an average mail turnout rate of 5.9% in 2018 and 30.8% in 2020, an increase of 24.9 percentage points. States that did not change their policies on all-mail elections or excuse-required mailed ballot voting also saw increases in their mail voting rates from 2018 to 2020, but these average increases were smaller, at 19.2 percentage points and 15.6 percentage points, respectively.

States reported transmitting a total of 90,687,978 mailed ballots to non-UOCAVA voters for the November 2020 general election, of which 70,551,227 were returned by voters. This means that 77.8% of the transmitted mailed ballots were returned by voters, and of the returned ballots, 98.8% were counted and 0.8% were rejected. Although the number of mailed ballots that were transmitted more than doubled since 2016—when 41,651,526 transmitted mailed ballots were reported—the mailed ballot return, count, and rejection rates were not significantly different between the 2016 and 2020 general elections at the national level. 19

Table 2 shows the most common reasons reported for rejecting mailed ballots in the 2020 general election. In this election, rejections for having a non-matching signature accounted for nearly one-third (32.8%) of the total rejected mailed ballots. The next most common reason (22.5%) was "other," which comprised reasons such as the voter was not eligible to vote in the jurisdiction, the ballot was missing an important document (such as an affidavit or certification), the document was incomplete or insufficient, there were identifying marks on the ballot, the ballot was missing a secrecy envelope or was outside of the secrecy envelope, or a combination of reasons. ²⁰ Other common reasons for rejection included that the voter had already voted in person (13.5%), the ballot was received after the state's deadline for submitting a mailed ballot (12.1%), and there was no voter signature on the mailed ballot or the mailed ballot envelope (12.1%).

Additional information about mail voting in the 2020 general election, including statistics by state, can be found in Appendix A of this chapter.

¹⁸ The mailed ballot return rate was calculated by dividing the total number of mailed ballots returned by voters (item C1b of EAVS) by the total number of mailed ballots transmitted (item C1a of EAVS). The mailed ballot count rate was calculated by dividing the number of counted mailed ballots (item C3a) by the total number of mailed ballots returned by voters (item C1b). The mailed ballot rejection rate was calculated by dividing the total number of mailed ballots rejected (item C4a) by the total number of mailed ballots returned by voters (item C1b). A total of 0.4% of the mailed ballots returned by voters (C1b) were not classified as having been either counted (C3a) or rejected (C4a). Alabama did not provide sufficient data to calculate the mailed ballot count and rejection rates. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations. The EAVS data also show that nationwide, 1.4% of the transmitted mailed ballots were returned as undeliverable (C1c/C1a); 3.6% were surrendered, spoiled, or replaced (C1d/C1a); 0.5% were surrendered at the polls, so the voter could cast a provisional ballot (C1e/C1a); 16.8% had an unknown status, which included voters who were transmitted a mailed ballot but chose not to vote (C1f/C1a); and 1% of mailed ballots recached some other status ([C1g+C1h+C1i]/C1a). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations.

¹⁹ The comparisons were statistically insignificant at p > 0.05.

²⁰ In the 2020 EAVS, states reported other reasons for rejecting mailed ballots in items C4p_Other, C4q_Other, and C4t_Other.

Table 2. The Most Common Reason for Rejecting Mailed Ballots Was for a Non-Matching Signature

Reason	Percentage of Rejected Ballots
Non-matching signature	32.8%

Ballot not received on time/missed deadline	12.1%
No voter signature	12.1%
No witness signature	5.6%
Ballot returned in an unofficial envelope	4.2%
Multiple ballots returned in one envelope	2.1%
First-time voter without proper identification	2.0%
Voter deceased	1.6%
Ballot missing from envelope	1.5%
Envelope not sealed	0.9%
No resident address on envelope	0.8%
No ballot application on record	0.6%
No election official's signature on ballot	0.1%

Source: Rejections for non-matching signature was calculated as C4e/C4a x 100. Rejections for other reasons was calculated as (C4p+C4q+C4r)/C4a x 100. Rejections because the voter already voted in person was calculated as C4m/C4a x 100. Rejections because the ballot was not received on time was calculated as C4b/C4a x 100. Rejections because the ballot lacked a voter signature was calculated as C4c/C4a x 100. Rejections because the ballot lacked a witness signature was calculated as C4d/C4a x 100. Rejections because the ballot was in an unofficial envelope was calculated as C4g/C4a x 100. Rejections because multiple ballots were returned in a single envelope was calculated as C4k/C4a x 100. Rejections because the first-time voter did not provide proper identification was calculated as C4n/C4a x 100. Rejections because the ballot was from a deceased voter was calculated as C4l/C4a x 100. Rejections because the ballot was missing from the envelope was calculated as C4h/C4a x 100. Rejections because the envelope was not sealed was calculated as C4i/C4a x 100. Rejections because there was no resident address on the envelope was calculated as C4j/C4a x 100. Rejections because there was no ballot application on record was calculated as C4o/C4a x 100. Rejections because there was no election official's signature on the ballot was calculated as C4f/C4a x 100. Casewise deletion was used at the state level (percentages for each rejection reason were calculated independently and only states that reported data for a given reason were included in the analysis), and because of this, percentages do not sum to 100%.

In-Person Voting Before Election Day

Most states allow some kind of in-person voting before Election Day. This type of voting generally falls into two categories:

• A voter may go to a polling place before Election Day, receive a ballot, vote their ballot while at the polling place, and place their completed ballot into a ballot box or tabulator.

A voter may go to an election office to pick up a ballot over the counter. In some states, the voter may be able to take their ballot home with them, whereas in other states, the ballot must be completed in the office. The ballot is then sealed in an envelope and tabulated along with ballots that are returned to the office by mail according to local procedures.

The type of in-person voting that takes place before Election Day and the populations that may use this method of voting are determined by state law. Different states use the terms "in-person early voting" and "in-person absentee voting" to describe both of the voting methods described above, although other terms exist as well (see Chapter 2 of this report).²¹ Some states offer both types of voting activities. For example, voters in Ohio may go to their county's designated early voting site, vote in person, and cast their ballot on a direct-recording electronic device or scan their ballot in a precinct scanner. Voters also have the option of completing a ballot request form, picking up a ballot from their county's election office, and returning their ballot in person, by drop box, or by mail at a later date.

Fifty-five of the states and territories (all but New Jersey) reported offering some form of in-person voting before Election Day to their population for the 2020 general election. Of these states, 12 required voters to provide an approved excuse to cast an early ballot, and 43 states allowed for no-excuse early voting. ²² Overall, three more states offered no-excuse early voting for the 2020 general election compared to the 2018 general election. Further details about state policies on early voting can be found in Chapter 2 of this report.

For the 2020 general election, states reported that 41,266,229 ballots were cast through in-person early voting and were counted, a 71.1% increase compared to the number cast by this method for the 2016 general election (24,124,466). Although the rate of early voting increased from 2016 to 2020, from 25.3% to 30.6%, the rate of increase was not as large as it was for mail voting.²³

It should be noted that some states may have reported mailed ballots returned via drop box with other early ballots. Currently, the EAVS does not collect data on the number of ballots returned via drop box, and some states' data collection practices do not distinguish between early ballots and ballots returned via a drop box.

²¹ The EAVS questions use the term "in-person early voting" to refer to all types of in-person voting that take place before Election Day. The question instructions specify that in-person absentee voting should be reported as in-person early voting in EAVS data. However, some states' data management systems do not distinguish in-person absentee voters from mail voters, so not all states with in-person absentee voting were able to report data on how many of their voters voted in this ²² The terminology a state used to refer to the process of allowing individuals to cast their ballots in person before Election Day was collected in item Q24 of the 2020 Policy Survey. Data on whether a state required a voter to provide an excuse to cast a ballot in person before Election Day was collected in item Q24a.

²³ The total number of in-person early ballots cast and counted was collected in item F1f of the EAVS. The early voting turnout rate was calculated by dividing this figure by the total number of ballots that were cast and counted (item F1a of the EAVS). Alabama, Connecticut, Iowa, Missouri, Mississippi, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Oregon, Pennsylvania, and Rhode Island did not report data in F1f, either because they did not offer in-person early voting (in the case of New Jersey) or because the number of in-person early voters could not be tracked separately from other modes of participation. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

Provisional Voting

HAVA introduced provisional voting as a way for a voter to cast a ballot when the voter's registration status cannot be verified at the time of voting, when there is some indication the voter may have already cast another ballot (for instance, by mail), or when the voter's eligibility to vote is challenged. Provisional ballots are kept separate from other election ballots and are later fully counted, partially counted, or rejected depending on whether the provisional voter's eligibility can be verified in the days following the election according to the state's rules for this process. The provisional ballot process helps ensure each qualified voter casts only one ballot that is counted and allows the voter additional time to prove their eligibility to vote if necessary. Certain states are exempt from HAVA's provisional ballot requirements because they allowed SDR at the time the law was enacted. In addition, North Dakota is exempt from this provision of HAVA because it does not require citizens to register to vote.

In the 2020 Policy Survey, 49 states and territories and the District of Columbia reported offering provisional ballots to voters. Five states and one territory—Idaho, Minnesota, North Dakota, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Puerto Rico—did not.²⁴ States reported that the most common reasons for offering a voter a provisional ballot included that an election official challenged a voter's eligibility to vote (46 states), the voter was not on the list of eligible voters (43 states), the voter lacked proper identification (40 states), the voter did not reside in the precinct in which they were attempting to vote (40 states), and another person (not an election officer) challenged a voter's eligibility to vote (28 states).²⁵ If a voter cast a provisional ballot in the wrong precinct, four states reported that they would fully count the entire ballot, 20 states would partially count the ballot (e.g., only count the items on the ballot for which the voter would have been eligible had they voted in the correct precinct), and 26 states would reject the entire ballot.²⁶ For more information on provisional voting policies, including the deadlines by which provisional ballots needed to be adjudicated, please see Chapter 2 of this report.

States reported 1,316,945 provisional ballots were cast and counted for the 2020 general election. This represents a slight decline from previous years: 1,483,708 provisional ballots had been cast in 2018 and 1,897,631 in 2016. Provisional voting as a percentage of turnout has continued its rate of decline in presidential elections, from 1.7% in 2012 to 1.4% in 2016 to 0.8% in 2020.²⁷ The rate of provisional voting declined twice as fast between the 2016 and the 2020 general elections as it did between the 2012 and the 2016 general elections.

²⁴ Information on states' use of provisional voting was collected in O32 of the 2020 Policy Survey.

 $^{^{25}}$ Information on the circumstances under which a state uses provisional ballots was collected in Q32a of the 2020 Policy Survey.

²⁶ Information on how a state would treat a provisional ballot cast in the wrong precinct was collected in Q32c. Percentages were calculated using the number of states who reported using provisional voting in Q32.

²⁷ The total number of provisional ballots cast and counted was collected in item F1e of the EAVS. The provisional voting turnout rate was calculated by dividing this figure by the total number of ballots that were cast and counted (item F1a of the EAVS). Idaho, Minnesota, North Dakota, New Hampshire, and Vermont did not report data on provisional ballots in the 2020 EAVS because, as confirmed in the Policy Survey, these states do not offer provisional ballots to voters. Puerto Rico reported in the Policy Survey that it does not offer provisional ballots but reported data on provisional ballots in the EAVS. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

Nationally, 78.3% of provisional ballots were counted,²⁸ either in full or in part, with 21.3% being rejected.²⁹ The most common reasons that states reported for rejecting provisional ballots included that the voter was not registered in the state (accounting for 54.8% of rejections), "other reasons" (21.2%), the voter attempted to vote in the wrong jurisdiction (12.4%), the voter had already cast a ballot through another mode of voting (5%), the voter attempted to vote in the wrong precinct (4.8%), the voter failed to provide sufficient identification (3.4%), the envelope or ballot was incomplete or illegible (3.3%), and the voter's signature did not match the signature on record (2.2%).³⁰ Furthermore, 0.9% of the provisional ballots reached another adjudication aside from being either counted or rejected: the largest numbers of these ballots came from Ohio, Texas, Missouri, and Illinois.³¹

UOCAVA and Other Modes of Voting

Absentee and mail voting have long been used to provide individuals in the military or U.S. citizens who live overseas or who are absent from their residence with a way to participate in federal elections. The distinct needs of members of the uniformed services and overseas citizens remain an area of critical concern in election administration, and these individuals are given special voting protections under UOCAVA and its amendments.³² UOCAVA voters are provided certain rights to fully

²⁹ The total number of rejected provisional ballots was collected in item E1d of the EAVS. The percentage of rejected provisional ballots was calculated by dividing this figure by the sum of all provisional ballot adjudications (items E1b, E1c, E1d, and E1e). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

³⁰ The number of provisional ballots rejected because the voter was not registered in the state was collected in item E2b of the EAVS. The number of provisional ballots rejected because the voter attempted to vote in the wrong jurisdiction was collected in item E2c. The number of provisional ballots rejected because the voter attempted to vote in the wrong precinct was collected in item E2d. The number of provisional ballots rejected because the voter did not provide sufficient identification was collected in item E2e. The number of provisional ballots rejected because the envelope and/or ballot were incomplete or illegible was collected in item E2f. The number of provisional ballots rejected because the voter's signature did not match the signature on record was collected in item E2i. The percentage of provisional ballots rejected for each of these reasons was calculated by dividing the figure by the total number of provisional ballots rejected (item E2a). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations.

³² The uniformed services are the armed forces—the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, and Coast Guard—as well as the U.S. Public Health Service Commissioned Corps, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Commissioned Officer Corps, and the U.S. Merchant Marine. Uniformed services members, their spouses, and their eligible dependents are, together, referred to as uniformed services voters. Overseas citizens are U.S. citizens living outside of the United States who are not uniformed services voters and are also protected by UOCAVA.

participate in federal elections and are given special considerations as to when their ballots are sent, how their blank ballots can be transmitted, and how and when they may return their voted ballots.

For the 2020 general election, states reported 938,297 UOCAVA ballots that were cast and counted. This total represents a sizeable increase from 2016 and 2018, when 649,427 and 358,137 UOCAVA ballots were cast, respectively. However, despite the increase in the number of voters who participated in the 2020 general election, UOCAVA voting as a percentage of the overall electorate stayed relatively the same in 2020. In 2016, 0.5% of voters were UOCAVA voters, and in 2020, UOCAVA voters comprised 0.6% of the electorate. 33 Nationwide, 97.6% of the UOCAVA absentee ballots that were returned by voters were counted, and 2.1% of the returned ballots were rejected.34

Chapter 4 of this report contains a complete discussion of the EAC's history of collecting data on voters covered by UOCAVA; a full analysis of the data collected about these voters and their ballots in 2020, including ballots transmitted, returned, counted, and rejected; and the use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB). Chapter 2 of this report contains a complete discussion of state policies regarding UOCAVA voting.

In addition to ballots that were cast at a physical polling place on Election Day, by mail, by in-person early voting, and by provisional voting, states had the opportunity to report data on any other modes of voting that were offered in the state in 2020.35 A total of 1,290,577 ballots were reported as cast and counted that could not be categorized according to one of the modes listed in the EAVS question. The highest numbers of these votes were reported in California (923,698 ballots), Florida (184,533 ballots), North Carolina (168,900 ballots), and Wisconsin (7,387 ballots). The most common reasons for reporting data in this item included mailed ballots that could not be distinguished as being from UOCAVA or non-UOCAVA voters, conditional voter registration (CVR) voters in California, curbside absentee voters in North Carolina, and "other," "unknown," or "not categorized" ballots.

Polling Places and Poll Workers

For an election, each voter is assigned to a precinct according to their residential address as listed in their voter registration record. A precinct is a contiguous, bounded geographic area that is the basis for determining the contests and issues on which the voters legally residing in that area are eligible to vote.³⁶ Precincts are then assigned to a polling place, which is a physical location where in-person voting takes place. As previously discussed, some states use an early voting or vote center model

³³ The total number of UOCAVA ballots that were cast and counted was collected in item F1c of the EAVS. The UOCAVA turnout rate was calculated by dividing this figure by the total number of ballots that were cast and counted (item F1a of the EAVS). Rhode Island did not report data in F1c. Their survey comment stated, "According to RI general law, all UOCAVA mail ballots are consolidated into one mail ballot category." Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this ³⁴ The total number of UOCAVA absentee ballots that were returned by voters was collected in item B9a of the EAVS. The number of UOCAVA ballots counted was collected in item B14a, and the number of UOCAVA ballots rejected was collected in item B18a. The UOCAVA ballot count rate was calculated by dividing B14a by B9a, and the rejection rate was calculated by dividing B18a by B9a. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation; this calculation also did not include returned UOCAVA ballots that were not categorized as either counted or rejected.

³⁵ Ballots cast by another mode that were counted were recorded in item F1h of the EAVS.

³⁶ Some states use the terms "ward" or "voting district" to describe their voting precincts.

that allows voters to vote at any polling location within their jurisdiction rather than at a specifically assigned polling place.

States reported 176,933 precincts that were used for the 2020 general election. States reported that 107,457 polling places were used on Election Day and that 25,099 polling places were used during the early voting period, for a total of 132,556 polling places for the 2020 general election.³⁷ States also provided information on whether their polling places were located at election offices or at other sites, such as libraries, schools, or mobile voting locations. There continues to be differences in where states locate their early voting polling locations, as opposed to their Election Day polling locations. States reported that nationwide, 42.8% of early voting sites were located at election offices, and 57.3% were located at other sites.³⁸ However, for Election Day polling places, only 9.6% of polling places were located at election offices, and 93.8% were reported as being located at other sites.³⁹

Many of the laws, rules, policies, and procedures governing elections are enforced, in practice, by the poll workers who assist with elections.⁴⁰ These poll workers are typically not full-time election workers or employees of election offices; rather, they are recruited and trained to assist in the voting process during an election. Typical activities that poll workers assist in include verifying the identities

³⁷ The total number of precincts was collected in item D2a of the EAVS. The total number of Election Day polling places was collected in item D3a. The total number of early voting polling places was collected in item D4a. Kansas and Washington did not provide data on the number of Election Day polling places. Connecticut, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New Jersey, and Oregon did not provide data on the number of early voting polling places; several of these states noted that early voting opportunities are limited to special circumstances, so the number of early voting sites was not tracked. Before this report's finalization, Virginia notified the EAC that the statewide number of early voting polling places in D4a was 208, not 133. Data users should note that the question numbering in this section changed in 2020; these questions were numbered differently in the 2016 and 2018 EAVS. However, a year-over-year analysis of polling places as reported in the EAVS is cautioned against, as these items have been underreported in previous years. 38 The number of early voting polling places located at election offices was collected in item D4c of the EAVS. The number of early voting polling places located at other sites was collected in item D4b of the EAVS. The percentage of early voting polling locations located at each type of site was calculated by dividing the EAVS item by the sum of D4b and D4c. This denominator was used instead of the reported total number of early voting polling locations (item D4a), because some states provided a total in D4a but not a breakdown in D4b and D4c. Of the states that reported offering in-person early voting, Connecticut, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Oregon, and Wisconsin did not provide any data on early voting polling places in D4a, D4b, or D4c. Several of these states noted in their survey comments that early voting was offered only in very limited circumstances. Georgia and Rhode Island provided data on the total number of early voting polling places in D4a but did not provide a data breakdown in D4b and D4c. New Jersey did not provide data because it did not offer in-person early voting. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations, and because each category was calculated independently, the percentages do not sum to 100%.

³⁹ The number of Election Day polling places located at election offices was collected in item D3c of the EAVS. The number of Election Day polling places located at other sites was collected in item D3b of the EAVS. The percentage of Election Day polling locations located at each type of site was calculated by dividing the EAVS item by the sum of D3b and D3c. This denominator was used instead of the reported total number of Election Day polling locations (item D3a), because some states provided a total in D3a but not a breakdown in D3b and D3c. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations, and because each category was calculated independently, the percentages do not sum to 100%. Of the states that reported offering in-person early voting, Kansas and Washington did not provide any data on Election Day polling places in D3a, D3b, or D3c: Washington noted that data were not provided because the state votes almost entirely by mail. The District of Columbia, Georgia, Idaho, Massachusetts, Maine, Minnesota, Missouri, the Northern Mariana Islands, Ohio, Puerto Rico, Tennessee, and the U.S. Virgin Islands provided data on the total number of Election Day polling places in D3a but did not provide a data breakdown in D3b and D3c.

of those who come to vote, assisting voters with signing documents required to cast a ballot, providing ballots and setting up voting equipment, and performing other functions as dictated by the state or local election authority.

States reported the number of early voting and Election Day poll workers separately, and they also reported the total number of poll workers who assisted with the 2020 general election. States reported that a total of 775,101 poll workers assisted with the 2020 general election. This included 690,346 poll workers who assisted with Election Day voting and 135,105 poll workers who assisted with early voting. Among states that reported data on poll workers for both the 2016 and the 2020 EAVS, there was no statistically significant change in the number of poll workers reported.

Thirty-six states also reported information on the ages of their poll workers.⁴³ Among these states, the majority of poll workers were over the age of 40 in the 2020 general election, with nearly half of them over 60 years old. However, Figure 4, which compares the age distribution of poll workers in the 2016 general election to those in the 2020 general election, shows slight but statistically significant shifts in the age categories over time. In 2020, the percentage of poll workers who were ages 18 to 25 and 26 to 40 increased, and the percentage of poll workers who were ages 61 to 70 and 71 or older decreased compared to 2016.⁴⁴ Notably, the percentage of poll workers who were ages 26 to 40 nearly doubled, from 8% in 2016 to 15% in 2020.

⁴¹ The total number of poll workers who assisted with the 2020 general election was collected in item D7a of the EAVS. The total number of poll workers who assisted with Election Day voting was collected in item D5. The total number of poll workers who assisted with early voting was collected in item D6. D7a does not match the sum of D5 and D6, because in D7a, each poll worker was to only be counted once even if they assisted with both early voting and Election Day voting. Oregon, Pennsylvania, Puerto Rico, Vermont, Washington, and Wisconsin were unable to provide poll worker data. Alabama, Connecticut, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Missouri, Mississippi, New Jersey, and North Dakota did not provide data on the number of early voting poll workers. North Dakota did not provide data on the number of Election Day poll workers. New Hampshire provided data on the minimum number of poll workers required at each polling location by law but noted that it may not reflect the number of poll workers who actually assisted.

 $^{^{42}}$ T tests conducted on the national number of poll workers in 2016 and 2020 were statistically insignificant at p < 0.05. 43 Poll worker age data were reported in item D7 of the EAVS for 2020, with D7a corresponding to the total number of poll workers who assisted with the 2020 general election and items D7b–D7g corresponding to age categories. The denominator used in this calculation was the sum of the age categories in D7b–D7g. Poll worker age data were reported in items D3 and D4 for 2016, with D3a corresponding to the total number of poll workers and items D4a–D4f corresponding to age categories. The denominator used in this calculation was the sum of the age categories in D4a–D4f. In 2020, South Carolina only reported poll workers who were under the age of 18 and did not provide data for any other age categories. South Carolina was excluded from the calculations of the percentage of poll workers by age. Connecticut, Georgia, Hawaii, Illinois, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, the Northern Mariana Islands, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, and Wisconsin were unable to provide data on the ages of their poll workers. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations.

 $^{^{44}}$ T tests conducted that compared the percentage of poll workers in the 18 to 25, 26 to 40, 61 to 70, and 71 or older age categories between 2016 and 2020 were statistically significant at p < 0.05, with most being p < 0.01. Other age groups did not have a statistically significant change.

Toll Worker Age Odlegory

Source: The percentage of poll workers under age 18 was calculated as D7b/(D7b+D7c+D7d+D7e+D7f+D7g) \times 100 for 2020 and D4a/(D4a+D4b+D4c+D4d+D4e+D4f) \times 100 for 2016. The percentage of poll workers ages 18–25 was calculated as D7c/(D7b+D7c+D7d+D7e+D7f+D7g) \times 100 for 2020 and D4b/(D4a+D4b+D4c+D4d+D4e+D4f) \times 100 for 2016. The percentage of poll workers ages 26–40 was calculated as D7d/(D7b+D7c+D7d+D7e+D7f+D7g) \times 100 for 2020 and D4c/(D4a+D4b+D4c+D4d+D4e+D4f) \times 100 for 2016. The percentage of poll workers ages 41–60 was calculated as D7d/(D7b+D7c+D7d+D7e+D7f+D7g) \times 100 for 2020 and D4d/(D4a+D4b+D4c+D4d+D4e+D4f) \times 100 for 2016. The percentage of poll workers ages 61–70 was calculated as D7e/(D7b+D7c+D7d+D7e+D7f+D7g) \times 100 for 2020 and D4e/(D4a+D4b+D4c+D4d+D4e+D4f) \times 100 for 2016. The percentage of poll workers ages 71 or older was calculated as D7g/(D7b+D7c+D7d+D7e+D7f+D7g) \times 100 for 2020 and D4f/(D4a+D4b+D4c+D4d+D4e+D4f) \times 100 for 2016. Casewise deletion was used at the state level (percentages for each age category were calculated independently and only states that reported data for a given age category were included in the analysis), and because of this, percentages do not sum to 100%.

The survey comments many jurisdictions provided indicated that this age shift was partially attributable to the COVID-19 pandemic. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) stated that older adults are at greater risk of severe illness from COVID-19, with adults 65 years or older in the highest risk category. This risk category overlaps with the group of adults who typically make up the majority of poll workers in federal general elections. The 2020 EAVS data confirm that a number of older poll workers did not assist with the 2020 general election and that many younger adults took their places.

SSISTANCE COMMISSION AND SIGNATURE COMMISSION

The COVID-19 pandemic also affected state and local efforts to obtain a sufficient number of poll workers to assist with the 2020 general election. Although poll worker recruitment remains a challenge, with 52% of jurisdictions reporting that it was either very difficult or somewhat difficult to obtain a sufficient number of poll workers, Figure 5 shows that poll worker recruitment has gotten less difficult since the 2016 general election.⁴⁵ In their survey comments, many jurisdictions cited cross-cutting effects on their recruitment efforts. Some long-time poll workers who had served in previous elections were unable to do so for the 2020 general election; some were unable to work because of age-related COVID-19 risks, and in many cases, jurisdictions needed to replace workers who called out sick close to the election to quarantine after COVID-19 exposure. On the other hand, many jurisdiction officials praised the efforts of the EAC and state election offices that encouraged

Ease of Recruiting Poll Workers

Source: Ease of recruiting poll workers was collected in item D8 in the 2020 EAVS and D5 in the 2016 EAVS. For both years, jurisdictions that responded, "not enough information to answer," "data not available," "does not apply," or left this item blank were excluded from this analysis.

 $^{^{45}}$ Data on the ease of recruiting poll workers were collected in item D8 of the 2020 EAVS and item D5 of the 2016 EAVS. In 2020, 3,436 of 6,460 jurisdictions (53.2%) responded "not enough information to answer," "data not available," "does not apply," or left this item blank. The comparison between 2016 and 2020 data was statistically significant at p < 0.01.

qualified individuals to sign up as poll workers. Some jurisdictions noted that they had overwhelming interest from those who view assisting with elections as a way to help their community and recruited more poll workers than they had available slots to fill.

Notably, ease of poll worker recruiting appears to be highly correlated with the size of the jurisdiction. Jurisdictions that had 10,000 or fewer registered voters reported having an easier time recruiting poll workers than did jurisdictions with more than 10,000 registered voters.⁴⁶

Election Technology

The use of technology in polling places and vote tally locations varies widely across and within the states. The EAVS collects data on the type of voting equipment that is used and the type of voting that the equipment is used for, the specific makes and models of the equipment and how many are deployed, and whether electronic poll books (or e-poll books) are used to assist at polling places. The voting equipment landscape continues to evolve with each election.

Voting Equipment

The EAVS collects data on the use of six types of voting equipment that voters can use to cast their ballots:⁴⁷

- Direct-recording electronic (DRE) voting equipment, not equipped with a voter-verified paper audit trail (VVPAT)⁴⁸
- DRE voting equipment, equipped with a VVPAT⁴⁹
- Electronic system that produces a paper record but does not tabulate votes. These are often referred to as ballot marking devices (BMD)⁵⁰
- Scanner (optical/digital) that tabulates paper records that voters mark by hand or via a ballot marking device⁵¹

⁴⁶ For this comparison, jurisdictions were classified according to the total number of registered voters as reported in item A1a of the EAVS. This comparison was statistically significant at p < 0.001.

⁴⁷ Two jurisdictions in Arkansas and 21 jurisdictions in Kansas did not provide any information about their voting equipment in the EAVS. Two jurisdictions in Missouri did not provide responses on the use of DREs with VVPAT (F6 in the EAVS), and an additional jurisdiction in Missouri did not provide responses on the use of ballot marking devices (BMD; F7 in the EAVS) or scanners (F8 in the EAVS). Five jurisdictions in Texas did not provide responses on the use of DREs without VVPAT (F5 in the EAVS), DREs with VVPAT, BMDs, or scanners. Twenty-six jurisdictions in Utah responded "data not available" to questions about BMDs, and one responded "data not available" to questions about scanners (F8 in the EAVS). In Vermont, 101 jurisdictions responded "does not apply" to questions about scanners, and 145 jurisdictions did not provide responses to questions about hand counting ballots (F11 in the EAVS). No jurisdictions in Kansas provided responses to questions about the use of BMDs or hand counting ballots. Two jurisdictions—Maine – UOCAVA and Kalawao County, Hawaii—responded "does not apply" to all of these questions; however, that is because these jurisdictions report EAVS data with other jurisdictions in their state (see Chapter 5 for more details).

⁴⁸ Data on DREs without VVPAT were collected in items F5a, F5b, F5c, and F5d of the EAVS.

⁴⁹ Data on DREs with VVPAT were collected in items F6a, F6b, F6c, and F6d of the EAVS.

⁵⁰ Data on BMDs were collected in items F7a, F7b, F7c, and F7d of the EAVS.

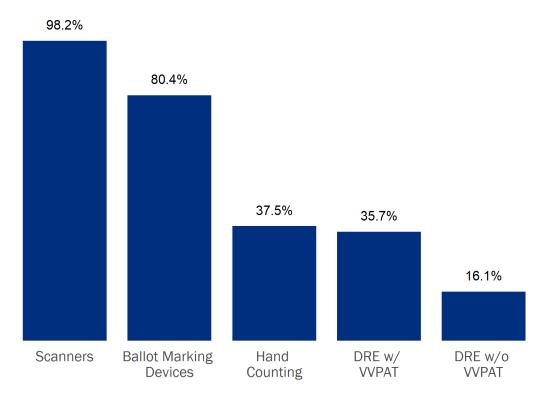

⁵¹ Data on scanners were collected in items F8a, F8b, F8c, and F8d of the EAVS.

- Punch card machines⁵²
- Lever machines⁵³

The EAVS also collects information on whether jurisdictions hand count paper ballots without the use of an optical or digital scanning system.⁵⁴

Figure 6. Scanners and BMDs Were the Most Commonly Used Voting Methods in 2020

Percentage of States with At Least One Jurisdiction Using the Voting Method in the 2020 General Election

Source: The use of scanners was collected in item F8a of the 2020 EAVS. Use of BMDs was collected in item F7a. Use of hand counting was collected in item F11a. Use of DRE with VVPAT was collected in item F6a. Use of DRE without VVPAT was collected in item F5a. States in which at least one EAVS jurisdiction reported using the voting equipment are included in this graph. Kansas did not respond to F7a or F11a.

⁵² Data on punch card machines were collected in items F9a, F9b, F9c, and F9d of the EAVS. No jurisdictions have reported using this equipment since before the 2016 EAVS.

⁵³ Data on lever machines were collected in items F10a, F10b, F10c, and F10d of the EAVS. No jurisdictions have reported using this equipment since before the 2016 EAVS.

⁵⁴ Data on hand counting paper ballots were collected in items F11a and F11d of the EAVS.

Nationally, states reported deploying 369,366 pieces of voting equipment to cast and tabulate votes for the 2020 general election.⁵⁵ Figure 6 shows the number of states that reported using voting equipment in at least one jurisdiction. Most jurisdictions and states used more than one type of equipment. The most commonly used types of equipment were scanners (used in 55 states) and BMDs (used in 45 states). Twenty-one states reported hand counting ballots without using any equipment to assist, and 20 states used DREs equipped with a VVPAT.

The use of DREs without VVPAT has been a particular concern to some experts, because these machines do not include a paper record of the votes that are cast, which raises security issues and can make it difficult to conduct certain types of post-election audits. In the 2018 EAVS, 14 states reported using DREs without VVPAT in at least one of their jurisdictions. The 2020 EAVS data show that only nine states now use this equipment in at least one of their jurisdictions: Arkansas, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Jersey, Tennessee, and Texas. Of these states, Louisiana reported using DREs without VVPAT in each of its jurisdictions. Five states that reported using DREs without VVPAT in 2018 discontinued using those machines by the 2020 general election (Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Pennsylvania, and South Carolina).

State	Number of Jurisdictions	Percentage of Jurisdictions	Number of Jurisdictions	Percentage of Jurisdictions
Arkansas	1	1.3%	0
Indiana	16	17.4%	12	13.0%
Kansas	7	6.7%	0
Kentucky	5	4.2%	0
Pennsylvania	50	74.6%	0
Tennessee	6	6.3%	1	1.1%
Texas	32	12.6%	19	7.5%

Source: The number of jurisdictions that reported using only DRE without VVPAT voting machines was based on responses to items F5a, F6a, F7a, and F8a of the 2018 and 2020 EAVS. The percentage of jurisdictions using only DRE without VVPAT was calculated by dividing by the total number of jurisdictions in the state. One county in Florida that reported using a DRE without VVPAT in 2018 was not included in this table, because the county had listed a make and model of a scanner in item F5b_1 in its 2018 data, which indicates a possible data entry error. None of the counties in Kansas that did not provide voting equipment information for the 2020 EAVS reported using DREs without VVPAT in the 2018 EAVS.

⁵⁵ The number of voting machines deployed was reported in items F5c_1, F5c_2, F5c_3, F6c_1, F6c_2, F6c_3, F7c_1, F7c_2, F7c_3, F8c_1, F8c_2, F8c_3, F9c_1, F9c_2, F9c_3, F10c_1, F10c_2, and F10c_3 of the EAVS. These items were summed for each jurisdiction to arrive at this total. American Samoa did not report the number of voting machines deployed, because this territory only uses hand-marked paper ballots that are manually counted. Oregon and Wisconsin reported that they do not track the number of voting machines deployed. Before this report's finalization, Virginia notified the EAC that the statewide number of BMDs in F7c_1, F7c_2, and F7c_3 was 2,533, not "data not available."

The number of jurisdictions that reported using only DREs without VVPAT and not using any other type of voting equipment also declined between 2018 and 2020. Table 3 shows that for the 2020 general election, only three states reported having jurisdictions that used only DREs without VVPAT as their voting equipment, and in each of those states, the percentage of their jurisdictions that used only DRE without VVPAT has also decreased since 2018.

Electronic Poll Books

When voters go into polling places, their identity is checked against voter registration information that is contained in poll books to ensure they are registered to vote and did not already cast a ballot during in-person early voting or with a mailed ballot. These poll books can be paper based and printed before the election, or they can be electronic. The use of e-poll books has steadily increased in recent elections. For the 2016 general election, 1,146 jurisdictions (17.7%) reported using e-poll books; this number rose to 1,684 (26.1%) in 2018 and to 1,991 (30.8%) in 2020. The number of jurisdictions that used e-poll books in 2020 represents an 18.2% increase from 2018.

As of the 2020 general election, 38 states reported using e-poll books in at least one of their jurisdictions, and 16 states and territories (Arizona, Delaware, Georgia, Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, South Carolina, and the U.S. Virgin Islands) and the District of Columbia reported using e-poll books in all of their jurisdictions. Of the jurisdictions that reported using e-poll books, the most common usages were to sign voters in at polling places (98.9%), update voter history (87.8%), and look up polling places (79.5%), and 20.7% of jurisdictions reported using e-poll books for other uses as well.⁵⁶

The 2020 Policy Survey also collected information on whether states have a testing or certification process in place for e-poll books.⁵⁷ Of the 39 states that provided a response to this question, 12 states (30.8%) indicated that the testing and certification process is required by statute, 10 states (25.6%) indicated that the testing and certification process is required by a formal administrative rule or as guidance, and 17 states (43.6%) indicated that testing and certification of e-poll books is not required.⁵⁸ The EAC does not currently provide testing or certification of e-poll books; any testing that states perform on their equipment is performed to the state's specifications.

⁵⁶ Use of e-poll books to sign voters in was reported in item F3a of the EAVS. Use of e-poll books to update voter history was reported in item F3b. Use of e-poll books to look up polling places was reported in item F3c. Use of e-poll books for other purposes was reported in item F3d. A jurisdiction was considered to have used e-poll books in 2020 if it responded "yes" to at least one of these items.

⁵⁸ Q16a of the 2020 Policy Survey collected information on what kind of testing or certification is required for e-poll books. Illinois did not provide a response to this question.

Overview Table 1 Calculation Notes:

Total Jurisdictions uses a count of Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS) code by state.

Total Active Registered Voters uses question A1b.

Total CVAP uses the 2019 1-year estimate of the CVAP from the U.S. Census Bureau.

Total Voter Turnout uses question F1a.

Turnout as % of Active Registration uses question F1a divided by A1b.

Turnout as % of CVAP uses question F1a divided by the CVAP estimate.

Total In-Person Election Day Ballots Cast and Counted uses question F1b.

Total Mailed Ballots Cast and Counted uses the sum of questions F1d and F1g.

Total In-Person Early Ballots Cast and Counted uses question F1f.

Total Polling Places uses the sum of questions D3a and D4a.

Total Poll Workers uses question D7a.

Overview Table 1 Data Notes:

General Notes:

Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation. For example, since there was no CVAP estimate for most U.S. territories, their turnout data (F1a) were not used for the calculation of "Turnout as % of CVAP" at the national level.

- The CVAP is an estimate of the number of U.S. citizens 18 years of age or older in the state. This report used the 1-year American Community Survey (ACS) state estimate for 2019 instead of the 5-year estimate to ensure that the CVAP was as current as possible. The estimate for the year 2020 was not available by the time this report was finalized. The 2019 1-year CVAP does not include data that were collected as part of the decennial Census conducted in 2020. Some states may have reported more active registered voters than CVAP because the 2019 CVAP is being compared to 2020 data.
- The Total Voter Turnout column includes voters who cast a ballot that was counted. The Total Mailed Ballots Cast and Counted column does not include UOCAVA voters.
- [1] Alabama, Connecticut, Iowa, Missouri, Mississippi, Montana, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island did not report data in F1f, because the number of in-person early voters could not be tracked separately from other modes of participation.
- [2] American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands did not have a CVAP available to use for the turnout as a percentage of CVAP calculation.
- [3] For Hawaii, the numbers reported for the City and County of Honolulu include all mailed ballot envelopes received and validated by the county. Certified turnout results were determined through subsequent ballot envelope processing and counting by the State of Hawaii, pursuant to Hawaii State Law.
- [4] Kansas did not provide data on polling places.
- [5] Michigan noted in its survey comments that "walk-in absentee voting prior to Election Day is considered early voting in [Michigan]. These absentee ballots are not tabulated until Election Day." Data on these walk-in absentee voters was reported in F1f.
- [6] New Hampshire provided information on the minimum number of early voting and Election Day poll workers required by law but noted that it may not reflect the number of poll workers actually deployed.
- [7] New Jersey did not report data in F1f, because the state did not offer in-person early voting.
- [8] North Dakota does not have voter registration.
- [9] Oregon is a vote-by-mail state and does not have traditional early voting or traditional polling places.
- [10] Pennsylvania reported that the state cannot systematically track data on poll workers.
- [11] Puerto Rico reported that data on poll workers are not available and that poll workers were volunteers, not PR-SEC employees (the abbreviation was not defined by the state).
- [12] Vermont did not provide data on the number of poll workers. Prior to this report being finalized, Vermont provided updated statewide totals for most items in F1 but was unable to provide jurisdiction-level data that could be incorporated into the EAVS. The statewide vote totals are:
 - Total number of voters who cast a ballot that was counted (F1a): 371,452
 - Voters who cast a ballot at a physical polling place on Election Day and whose ballots were counted (F1b): 91,079
 - UOCAVA voters who cast a ballot via an absentee ballot or FWAB and whose ballots were counted (F1c): 2,719
 - Voters who cast a mailed ballot and whose ballots were counted (F1d): 225,621
 - Voters who cast a ballot at an in-person early voting location and whose ballots were counted (F1f): 2,033
- [13] Before this report's finalization, Virginia notified the EAC that the statewide number of early voting polling places in D4a was 208, not 133.
- [14] Washington is a vote-by-mail state. Voters can register and vote on or before Election Day. The total in F1g (voters who cast a mailed ballot in a jurisdiction that conducts elections entirely by mail and whose ballots were counted) includes in-person voters that were issued a mailed ballot packet at a voting center that they could deposit into a ballot drop box or mail. Totals in F1f (voters who cast a ballot at an in-person early voting location and whose ballots were counted) include voters who used a disability access unit. [15] The number of jurisdictions in Wisconsin changed several times over the two-year period covered by the 2020 EAVS due to incorporations, mergers, and similar mechanisms. Wisconsin canvass data tracks individual contests, and therefore, the total ballots cast in any election is highly unlikely to match the total votes cast in any one contest. Wisconsin voters are not required to vote in each contest on the ballot and undervotes are the likely cause of total ballots cast data being higher than the number of votes in a contest.

Overview Table 2 Data Notes:

General Notes:

- Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.
- Because each percentage was calculated independently, the percentages of mailed ballots counted and rejected may not sum to 100% for some states or at the national level.
- The Total Mail Voters column reflects the number of voters who cast a ballot by mail that was counted. It does not include voters who cast a UOCAVA ballot or FWAB.

- The Total Mailed Ballots Transmitted column captures the total number of mailed ballots that states reported transmitting, regardless of whether the ballot was returned or not. The number of ballots transmitted typically exceeds the number of ballots returned because some voters who transmitted a mailed ballot choose to vote by another mode or to not vote at all. Total Mailed Ballots Returned typically exceeds Total Mail Voters because some returned mailed ballots are rejected for not meeting state requirements. Mailed Ballots Counted may not match Total Mail Voters because states may have different methodologies for calculating these numbers.
- The Total Mailed Ballots Returned column includes both counted and rejected ballots that were returned to election offices.
- [1] Alabama reported mail and early in-person voting data together as the Total Mail Voters (300,684). Both are considered absentee voting; thus, the data for transmission method are commingled and cannot be reported separately.
- [2] Data on rejected mailed ballots for Georgia include rejected ballots entered by counties into the state voter registration system as of February 2021, which does not necessarily include all ballots rejected by counties.
- [3] Butte County and Valley County in Idaho responded "Data not available" to the number of mailed ballots received (C1b) but reported data for the number of mailed ballots counted (C3a). Madison County and Valley County in Idaho reported more mailed ballots counted than mailed ballots received. Because of these responses, the total number of mailed ballots counted exceeds the number of mailed ballots received at the state level for Idaho, and the percentage of returned ballots that were counted exceeds 100%.
- [4] Kansas did not provide any survey comments to explain why the data reported in the Total Mail Voters column exceeds that of the Total Mailed Ballots Transmitted column, nor why the percentage of mailed ballots counted and rejected does not sum to 100%. Some jurisdictions that reported data on Total Mail Voters did not provide data for Total Mailed Ballots Transmitted.
- [5] The Northern Mariana Islands did not provide any survey comments to explain why the data reported in the Total Mail Voters column exceeds that of the Total Mailed Ballots Transmitted column, nor why the percentages of mailed ballots counted and rejected does not sum to 100%.
- [6] Puerto Rico reported "data not available" in question C4. In addition, this territory noted in a survey comment that the Total Mail Voters column may include ballots for non-federal elections and that its response in the Total Mail Voters and % Turnout by Mail columns includes "voters who [cast] their vote early but in their home, not in a polling location."
- [7] Local election officials in Wisconsin were still recording voter participation method at the time data was provided for this report; therefore, the Total Mail Voters data were incomplete. These data are currently available from the state.

Overview Table 3 Data Notes:

General Notes:

- Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.
- Question F1f includes all voters who participated in the election in person prior to Election Day.
 This includes in-person early voting, in-person absentee voting, and any other terminology the state used to refer to in-person early voting (as reported in question Q24 of the 2020 Policy Survey).

- Question F1h was not mandatory. States only reported data in this item if they offered another mode of voting aside from those listed in questions F1b-F1g or if there were counted ballots that could not be categorized in questions F1b-F1g.
- Because each percentage was calculated independently, the percentages of turnout by mode in this table and the previous table may not sum to 100% for some states or at the national level.
- [1] Alabama, Connecticut, Iowa, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island did not report data in F1f, because the number of in-person early voters could not be tracked separately from other modes of participation.
- [2] Alaska's F1h data included ballots transmitted by electronic transmission (online or fax) delivery.
- [3] Arkansas's F1h data included nursing home patients who refused their ballots and votes by bearer, "admin," or delivered by another person.
- [4] California's F1h data included conditional voter registration (CVR) voters, SDR voters, manual voter history updates, "confidentials," mailed ballots from domestic and UOCAVA voters that could not be separated by mode, and other counted ballots not reported in other F1 items.
- [5] Two counties in Florida—Duval and Indian River counties—combined their reported number of UOCAVA and domestic mailed ballots in F1h in lieu of reporting them separately within F1c and F1d, respectively.
- [6] Idaho, Minnesota, New Hampshire, and Vermont are exempt from the NVRA requirement to offer provisional ballots. North Dakota is exempt from offering provisional ballots because it does not require voter registration.
- [7] Massachusetts's F1h data included "non-UOCAVA AV [absentee voting] ballots not returned by mail."
- [8] Michigan's data in the In-Person Early Voters columns reflect those who voted absentee at the local clerk's office prior to Election Day.
- [9] New Jersey did not report data in F1f because the state did not offer in-person early voting.
- [10] New Mexico's F1h data included ballots cast because of "emergency (medical reasons)."
- [11] North Carolina's F1h data included curbside absentee voters.
- [12] Oregon is a vote-by-mail state and traditional early voting does not exist.
- [13] Pennsylvania reported that the state cannot systematically track data on poll workers. Pennsylvania's F1h data included ballots for which "vote method not identified in the system."
- [14] Rhode Island reported that data for question F1c is unavailable.
- [15] Washington is a vote-by-mail state. Voters can register and vote on or before Election Day. Totals in F1f (voters who cast a ballot at an in-person early voting location and whose ballots were counted) include voters who used a disability access unit.
- [16] Wisconsin reported that state statute does not require the state to track data on poll workers. Wisconsin's F1h data included ballots for which voter method data was not yet available.

Poll Workers % Age 71+ uses question D7g divided by the sum of questions D7b-D7g.

Overview Table 4 Data Notes

General Notes:

• Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.

- Because percentages for each age category were calculated independently, the percentages for each age category may not sum to 100% for some states or at the national level.
- In calculating percentages for poll worker age categories, the sum of questions D7b–D7g was used instead of D7a because some states did not report data in all age categories.
- [1] Alabama, Connecticut, Iowa, Mississippi, Missouri, and New Hampshire did not report complete data on early voting because some of this data could not be tracked separately from Election Day voting data.
- [2] Alaska, Georgia, Hawaii, Illinois, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, the Northern Mariana Islands, Pennsylvania, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Vermont do not track data on the ages of their poll workers.
- [3] Colorado did not distinguish between early voting and Election Day voting in collecting information on poll workers. Because Colorado counties automatically mail ballots to every active voter and most voters choose to vote the mail ballot, a large number of poll workers are needed to process the mail ballots. That work begins in the early voting period and continues through Election Day and the eight-day post-election period when military and overseas voters can return their ballot and voters with signature or ID issues can cure their ballots.
- [4] Connecticut provided data on the total number of poll workers in question D7a but was unable to provide the age breakdown in questions D7b-D7g.
- [5] In Hawaii, in-person voting locations are called Voter Service Centers and provide accessible in-person voting, SDR, and collection of voted ballots.
- [6] Kansas did not report data on the number of polling places in questions D3 and D4.
- [7] Louisiana reported both its early voting and Election Day poll workers in question D5.
- [8] Maine reported that data on the number of early voting poll workers in question D6 was not available.
- [9] The number of Election Day voting locations in Maryland for the 2020 general election was greatly reduced due to the COVID-19 pandemic and the lack of poll workers. The 320 Election Day voting locations reported in D3a all served as county-wide vote centers. In a typical election, the number of Election Day polling places generally corresponds to the numbers of precincts, and each polling place only serves the precinct(s) assigned to it.
- [10] Massachusetts reported that "Those who worked early voting were not called 'poll workers' and varied each day of early voting."
- [11] Michigan reported data in D4 and noted that "early voting takes place at a clerk's office or their satellite offices for in-person absentee voting only." All Michigan jurisdictions reported zero for the number of early voting poll workers in D6; regular office staff operated clerk's offices and satellite locations.
- [12] New Jersey did not report data in questions D4a nor D6 because the state did not offer in-person early voting.
- [13] Precinct, polling place, and early voting site counts are based on data that election officials entered into North Carolina's Statewide Election Information Management System (SEIMS) and may be marginally different than the number of sites that were actually open during early voting and Election Day voting.
- [14] North Dakota provided data on the total number of poll workers in question D7a but was unable to provide the totals for Election Day and early voting poll workers in questions D5 and D6 or the age breakdown in questions D7b-D7g.
- [15] Ohio reported zero early voting poll workers with a comment that regular office staff operated the early voting sites.
- [16] Oregon is a vote-by-mail state and does not have or track traditional poll workers for in-person voting. [17] Pennsylvania provides in-person absentee and mail-in voting at county election offices and satellite county election offices. Absentee and mail-in ballots cast in person are secured until Election Day to be tabulated by the county board of elections. Pennsylvania reported that the state cannot systematically track data on poll workers.

- [18] Puerto Rico reported that data on poll workers are not available and that poll workers were volunteers, not PR-SEC employees.
- [19] South Carolina only reported poll workers who were under the age of 18 and did not provide data for any other age categories. South Carolina's data on poll worker ages has been excluded from this table.
- [20] Vermont did not provide data on the number of poll workers.
- [21] Virginia does not capture or track information on the age of poll workers. Before this report's finalization, Virginia notified the EAC that the statewide number of early voting polling places in D4a was 208, not 133.
- [22] Washington is a vote-by-mail state and does not have traditional polling places. Washington has voting centers that are open for the entire voting period, not just a single day. Each county is required to have two certified election administrators and can hire election workers to assist with processing returned ballots.
- [23] Wisconsin state statute does not require the state to track data on early voting physical polling locations and poll workers. Partial data are available through the state.

Hand Counting (Total Jurisdictions) uses a count of the number of jurisdictions in each state that responded "yes" to question F11a.

Overview Table 5 Data Notes:

General Notes:

- Although other descriptive tables in this chapter used casewise deletion at the state level in calculating percentages, this table did not. When a state reported not using a type of equipment, the number of devices of that type was filled with zero to better capture at the national level the quantity and percentage that each voting technology accounted for in the 2020 general election.
- [1] American Samoa reported only hand counting ballots in the 2020 general election.
- [2] Kansas did not respond to question F7a on the use of BMDs or question F11a on the use of hand counting.
- [3] The data depicted in this table for Maine underreported the number of BMDs (accessible voting solution) deployed by the state's jurisdictions. Each voting place was provided with at least one BMD, and some larger jurisdictions used multiple devices. In the data previously provided to the EAC, Maine reported that each jurisdiction used only one device. The actual number of devices deployed statewide was 527.
- [4] The Northern Mariana Islands reported using BMDs in question F7a and provided a description of "pencils."
- [5] Oregon reported in question F8a that each of its jurisdictions used scanners, but for the purposes of this report, data on the number of scanners deployed was not tracked.
- [6] Vermont provided a response of "valid skip" for all jurisdictions in question F6a and provided a response of "does not apply" for 41.1% of its jurisdictions in question F8a.
- [7] Virginia reported using BMDs in all 133 of its jurisdictions, but initially did not report jurisdiction-level data on the number of BMDs deployed. Before this report's finalization, Virginia notified the EAC that the statewide number of BMDs in F7c_1, F7c_2, and F7c_3 was 2,533.
- [8] Wisconsin does not permit the use of DREs without a VVPAT. Wisconsin also does not permit the use of punch card machines or lever machines. The state tracks the machine types employed in each jurisdiction and not the number of machines deployed in each jurisdiction.

Chapter 2. Election Law and Procedure: The Policy Survey

Key Findings

The 2020 Election Administration Policy Survey (Policy Survey) asked states to identify the election laws and procedures that govern voter registration, election technology, voter eligibility, modes of voting, and election audits in their state. Notable findings from this survey include:

- In 2020, more states reported providing Election Administration and Voting Survey (EAVS) responses at the state level for every EAVS section compared to 2018.
- Fourteen states reported conducting all-mail elections for the 2020 general election, either statewide or in certain jurisdictions. This is double the number of states from the 2018 Policy Survey, but in some cases, all-mail voting was implemented in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, and it was not a permanent change.
- More states reported having an online voter registration system in the 2020 Policy Survey (45 states) compared to in the 2018 Policy Survey (40 states). In the majority of cases, individuals can use this system to register to vote and to update their registration.
- About half of the states reported allowing non-military voters residing in the United States to receive their ballots through an electronic format, such as email, fax, through an online voter registration portal, or through a mobile phone app, under certain circumstances.
- Roughly half of the states reported allowing permanent absentee status when a Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) voter registration is submitted via a Federal Post Card Application (FPCA), a decrease from 2018.
- Forty-four states reported requiring a post-election tabulation audit that verifies that voting equipment used during an election properly counts a sample of voted ballots after an election.

Introduction

Although quantitative data from state¹ and local election officials provide an important window into how the 2020 general election was run, these data must be understood in the context of state laws and policies. In 2008, the U.S. Election Assistance Commission (EAC) introduced a component of the EAVS that collects information on state election laws. Since 2018, this data has been collected through the Policy Survey, which uses closed-ended questions to capture states' broad policies. It is important to remember that state election laws are nuanced, and this report simplifies them for the purpose of providing an overview of election policies that offers important context to understanding the EAVS data. This report provides an overview and summary of the Policy Survey's findings.

¹ Throughout this report, unless otherwise specified, the term "state" can be understood to apply to the 50 U.S. states, the District of Columbia, and five U.S. territories (American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands) that submit Policy Survey and EAVS data.

Additional information about state responses is available in Appendix A of this chapter. The 2020 Policy Survey included updates to some of the 2018 items to better capture state policy nuances.

The 2020 Policy Survey collected data on states' election laws, policies, and practices that would be in place for the November 2020 general election. Most states submitted this information before the election. The Policy Survey was also used to validate 2020 EAVS data prior to states certifying their data as final. The goal of the 2020 Policy Survey was to create comparisons between states across broad policy categories and to provide context in understanding the EAVS data submitted by states. Because of the nature of the closed-ended survey questions, some of the nuances in state election policies could not be accounted for. States were encouraged to forward additional information and context behind their Policy Survey responses to allow their data to be interpreted as accurately as possible.

For further information about how the Policy Survey data were collected and used to validate EAVS data, please see Chapter 5 of this report.

Responding to the 2020 EAVS

The 2020 Policy Survey asked states to describe who provides the data to respond to the questions in each section of the EAVS: the state election office, local election offices, or both the state and local offices. Some states indicated that all sections are completed by the state election office, and some gather data for all sections from their local jurisdictions.² Many states answered certain sections at the state level and other sections at the jurisdiction level.

With the exception of sections A and F of the EAVS, roughly half of the states provided responses at the state level, whereas about one-fifth of states reported that responses are provided by local officials. For sections A and F, about 60% of states reported providing responses at the state level, and slightly less than 15% of states reported providing responses at the local level.3 Roughly onequarter to one-third of the responses for each section were provided by both state and local officials. In 2020, more states reported providing EAVS responses at the state level for every EAVS section compared to in 2018 (see Table 1).

The findings from this question illustrate the complexities that state and local election officials experience when answering the EAVS. Many states with a large number of jurisdictions reported providing EAVS data entirely at the local level. Furthermore, some states reported providing EAVS data for some sections at the state level while relying on local officials for other sections.

² What constitutes a jurisdiction for EAVS reporting is defined by how each state chose to provide data. For the 2020 EAVS, most states reported data on the county level (or county equivalent, such as parishes for Louisiana). Illinois, Maryland, Missouri, and Virginia reported data for independent cities in addition to counties. The territories, the District of Columbia, and Alaska each reported as a single jurisdiction. Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Wisconsin reported data on the township level. Maine also reported its UOCAVA data in Section B as a separate jurisdiction, because this information was only collected at the state level. Michigan reported data for the county level, but most election administration activities take place in the 1,520 local election jurisdictions in the state. ³ Information on how states answer Section A of the EAVS was collected in item Q3_1 of the Policy Survey. Information on how states answer Section B of the EAVS was collected in O3 2. Information on how states answer Section C of the EAVS was collected in Q3_3. Information on how states answer Section D of the EAVS was collected in Q3_4. Information on how states answer Section E of the EAVS was collected in Q3_5. Information on how states answer the Section F of EAVS was collected in Q3_6.

In almost all states, the chief state election official is responsible for certifying the state's EAVS data submission and/or receiving and certifying the spending of Help America Vote Act (HAVA) funds on behalf of the state. In 2020, 75% of states reported that the chief election official selects the state representative for and supervises local election officials' selection as representatives to the EAC Standards Board. The Standards Board consists of 55 state and 55 local election officials who assist the EAC in carrying out its mandates.5

Policies on Voter Registration and List Maintenance

The primary federal law governing voter registration in the United States is the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA), which became effective after the 1994 general election.⁶ The NVRA expands voter registration opportunities for voters by creating more standardized registration processes and by designating more places as voter registration agencies. It also requires that states conduct a uniform and nondiscriminatory general program to remove from their lists the records of individuals who are no longer eligible to vote.

Congress also passed HAVA in 2002, requiring states to adopt a computerized statewide voter registration list. That states use these registration lists to determine who is eligible to participate in elections. States also face the challenge of keeping these lists up to date, as voters commonly move to different jurisdictions or states, die, or become otherwise ineligible to vote. North Dakota is the only state that does not require voter registration.

⁴ Minnesota did not provide a response to Section E of this item for the 2020 Policy Survey.

⁶ Several states are not covered by the NVRA. North Dakota is exempt because it does not have voter registration. U.S. territories are also not subject to the NVRA, and the states of Idaho, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Wisconsin, and Wyoming are exempt because they had same-day registration (SDR) in 1994 and have continued to make this option available uninterrupted since that time.

Between 2018 and 2020, some states passed laws allowing individuals to register to vote online, register in person on Election Day, or register through an automated process. In 2020, states reported receiving a record number of registration applications. Further information on state registration data is included in Chapter 3 of this report.

Database Systems

States responded to the HAVA voter registration requirements in different ways. Some states adopted a single, central platform at the state level that connects to terminals in local jurisdictions. This type of system is typically referred to as a "top-down" voter registration system. Other states implemented a state voter registration database that gathers and aggregates information from their local jurisdictions' voter registration databases. This type of system is typically referred to as a "bottom- up" system.8 If a system has a mix of top-down and bottom-up characteristics, then it is referred to as a "hybrid" system. The specific characteristics of hybrid systems vary state by state.

The Policy Survey asks states to report the type of voter registration database they have and how often information is shared between states and local jurisdictions.9 Figure 1 shows that a majority of states (67.9%) reported having voter registration databases that function in a top-down manner.

About 20% of states reported having a bottom-up registration system that uploads jurisdiction-level information at regular intervals to form the statewide voter registration list, and only 10.7% of states reported having a hybrid system that combines elements of both. 10 In practice, these state registration system categories can be fluid. Some top-down registration systems may implement processes of the bottom-up registration system and vice versa.

States that reported having either a bottom-up or hybrid system were asked to report how often their jurisdictions transmit voter registration information to the statewide database. 11 For these two systems, real-time data transmissions were most common (reported in 58.8% of the states with bottom-up or hybrid systems), whereas 23.5% of the states reported that voter registration information is transmitted daily. 12 Texas reported that information is transmitted both ways: transmissions from "online" counties happen in real time, whereas in "offline" counties, it happens

⁸ For a bottom-up voter registration system to be considered a statewide system, the state database, the data, and the data flow must be defined, maintained, and administered by the state. daily.¹³ Similarly, in Illinois, if the jurisdiction vendor has web services, the information is uploaded in real time, whereas a batch is sent daily from those jurisdictions without web services. The Northern Mariana Islands reported that information is retrieved upon request.

Data Linkages

Election officials must accomplish two primary activities related to voter registration: adding individuals to the database who are eligible to vote and maintaining the accuracy of the database.

A state accomplishes these goals by accessing or "linking" to other databases to verify the voter ¹³ The 2016 Statutory Overview found that several Texas jurisdictions use the Texas statewide voter registration database to directly manage registration data, and other Texas jurisdictions manage their own voter registration data using a third-party vendor. Texas refers to these as "online" and "offline" jurisdictions. Although online counties transmit information in real time through an online voter registration system, offline jurisdictions transmit information in batches through a web browser application.

registration information in its database. The NVRA also outlines steps that states are required to take to keep voter registration information current and to remove ineligible voters and duplicate registrations from the voter lists. This task requires comparing voter lists to records in other databases to prevent duplicate registration records and to avoid adding individuals who are ineligible to register.¹⁵

As the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) notes, HAVA requires the chief election official in each state to attempt to verify the information for first-time voter registration applications against driver's license numbers in that state's motor vehicle licensing agency's database or against the Social Security Administration's database of social security numbers. If no match is found, election officials in most states attempt to contact the applicant for additional information, but they manage this process in various ways. HAVA requires that applicants who cannot be matched against one of these databases be allowed to vote on Election Day provided they present appropriate identification.¹⁶

The Policy Survey asks states how they share information electronically with other state and federal government entities.¹⁷ These linkages are illustrated in Figure 2. Most states reported that they link their voter registration data with the agency that handles their state's driver's licenses (85.7%) and with entities that maintain the death records (80.4%). The other most commonly reported linkages were with entities that maintain felony or prison records, such as state courts and parole agencies (62.5%). States that reported linking with the agency that handles driver's licenses most often reported transferring voter registration data daily (63.3%), followed by in real time (18.4%) and by some other measure of time that is neither weekly nor monthly (10.2%). Of the states that reported linking with entities that maintain death records, the most common type of data transfer was monthly (58.7%), followed by weekly (21.7%). States that reported linking registration data with entities that maintain felony records most often reported transferring data monthly (58.3%).¹⁸

Less commonly reported linkages included entities that maintain records of individuals who are declared mentally incompetent, state public assistance agencies, agencies for people with disabilities, other state agencies that are not required by the NVRA (e.g., public libraries or local government offices), federal agencies, and military recruiting offices.

Automatic and Automated Voter Registration

In 2020, 42.9% of states reported that voters may be registered to vote via an automated process, whether online or in person, during a transaction with a state government agency. ¹⁹ Examples of these automated processes included those that force a choice, such as when an individual cannot proceed with a transaction without selecting whether or not they wish to be registered to vote, or processes that register a person to vote as a default, after which the individual may choose to opt out. In the event that an individual wishes to decline to register, the vast majority of states reported that they allow the declination to occur at the point of service. About one-third of states reported that they allow declinations via a mailer sent to the individual after the transaction. ²⁰

¹⁹ Information on automatic and automated voter registration was collected in item Q6 of the Policy Survey.

²⁰ Information on when an individual can decline to register to vote was collected in item Q6b of the Policy Survey.

States that have some kind of automatic or automated voter registration process linked to a state agency transaction all reported that their state motor vehicle agency participates in this program, and about one-quarter of the states indicated that public assistance agencies also participate. Less common program participants included agencies for people with disabilities and other designated state agencies. Florida also reported linking their voter registration process with tax collector offices and any office that issues state ID cards. Colorado reported linking with the state's Department of Health Care Policy and Financing, and Alaska reported linking with the state's Permanent Fund Dividend Division. Maryland noted the state agencies that participate in the automatic or automated voter registration program are designated by the Maryland General Assembly.²¹

Preregistration

In the 2020 Policy Survey, most states (87.5%) reported allowing individuals under the age of 18 to preregister to vote and become automatically registered once they turn 18 years old. Over half of states that had a preregistration program reported that they allow individuals to preregister at age 17 (51%), whereas fewer states reported allowing individuals to preregister at age 16 (38.8%). Five states (10.2%) indicated that they allow individuals to preregister at age 17 and a half.²²

Online Voter Registration

Arizona became the first state to adopt online voter registration in 2002, and by 2016, the number of states that offered online voter registration jumped to 32.23 Online voter registration generally mirrors the process of registering to vote using a paper form, but the information that is necessary to process the registration application is completed and submitted electronically, without the need of a paper form to be submitted or created.

Forty-five states (80.4%, an increase from 72.7% in 2018) reported having an online voter registration portal in which individuals can register on their own, fully online, and without having to submit a paper form. In almost all of those states, individuals can both register to vote and update their registration via the system. Two states reported that individuals can only update their registration online and cannot use the online system to submit a new registration application. A majority of states with an online voter registration system (82.2%) reported that only individuals with a valid driver's license or state-issued ID card can use it.²⁴ Figure 3 shows the prevalence of online voter registration across states.

States were also asked to describe the technological and user experience features of their online, web-based voter registration system and how voters use it. The most common feature was the use of a motor vehicle agency signature to register to vote (84.4%), followed by mobile phone optimization (75.6%) and sending a confirmation email to each registrant (60%). Slightly less than half of all states reported having custom web page URLs to track where the voter came from to enter the online registration process (e.g., a state agency or third-party organization), providing a confirmation number to each registrant, and supporting languages other than English. About one-quarter of states also reported the use of a third-party application programming interface (API), which allows different software components to communicate with each other.²⁵

Same-Day Registration

Instead of requiring voters to register in advance of an election, some states reported allowing individuals to register to vote and to cast a ballot on the same day. Roughly half of the states reported having same-day registration (SDR) or a period of overlap between in-person early voting and the close of voter registration in which a person can register to vote and cast a ballot on the $^{^{25}}$ Information on the features of state online, web-based voter registration systems was collected in item Q7b of the Policy Survey.

same day (see Figure 4).26 Among states with SDR, it was most common to have SDR on Election Day (72.4%). Additionally, the majority of states indicated that they allow SDR during in-person early voting (69%).27

Twelve states reported having SDR during an overlap between the start of early voting and the close of voter registration. Some states noted that SDR only occurs in special cases, such as Alaska and Rhode Island for presidential elections. New residents who move to Nebraska after the close of voter registration can register to vote and can vote only for president in the general election; former residents who move to another state after the close of registration can also vote only for president in the general election. In North Carolina, citizens who have become eligible to vote between the "close of books" and Election Day may register on the same day as they vote.28

²⁸ North Carolina did not provide clarification on what was meant by "close of books."

State Election Office Website

The 2020 Policy Survey also asked states about which voter information search tools and other tools are available on each state's election office website. Almost all of the states indicated that voters can check their registration status and check their polling site location on the state election office website. Most states reported having tools that track ballot status, including UOCAVA ballots (87.5%), mailed ballots (82.1%), and provisional ballots (51.8%), and that check voter-specific ballot information (76.8%). Additionally, most states reported that their website allows voters to request to receive a mail or absentee ballot (67.9%).²⁹

List Maintenance

The NVRA establishes a process for states to keep their voter registration lists accurate. Under this law, a registrant can be removed from a state's list for the following reasons:

- The registrant requests to be removed;
- The registrant dies;
- The registrant is declared mentally incapacitated, if a state law requires it;
- The registrant is convicted of a specified crime, if state law requires it; or
- The registrant changes residences outside of the jurisdiction, in which case the removal process must be conducted in accordance with procedures set forth in the NVRA.³⁰

Under the process established by the NVRA, when a registrant appears to have moved outside of their jurisdiction due to returned or undeliverable mail, the state must follow a specific process to verify that the individual is no longer eligible to vote. An address confirmation procedure must be followed before removing the voter from the registration list.

The 2020 Policy Survey asked states whether they differentiate between active and inactive voters in their voter registration records. Active voters are individuals who require no additional processing before they can vote, whereas inactive voters will require address verification before being permitted to vote. Forty-six states, three territories, and the District of Columbia indicated that they differentiate between the two types of voters, although according to state comments, the definitions for an active and inactive voter vary widely. Guam, Idaho, North Dakota, New Hampshire, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Wyoming reported not distinguishing between active and inactive voters. Some states indicated using specific terminology: Nebraska uses "in NVRA" to refer to inactive voters, Texas uses the term "suspense voters," and American Samoa uses the term "purged voter." West Virginia indicated that inactive voters are those "flagged as moving and receiv[ing] a confirmation notice." According to the voter registration system keeps a historical record of previously registered voters.

 $^{^{29}}$ Information on state election office website lookup tools was collected in item Q8 of the Policy Survey.

^{30 52} U.S.C. § 20507

³¹ Information on whether states differentiate between active and inactive voters was collected in item Q11 of the Policy Survey. Minnesota is NVRA exempt and does not define inactive voters as "voters who remain eligible to vote but require address verification under the provisions of the National Voter Registration Act," as defined in the EAVS item A1c; therefore, the EAVS item A1c does not apply to the state. Additionally, North Dakota does not have voter registration but does define inactive voters in the state voter file. Inactive voters are defined as those who have never voted before or have not voted in the last two federal elections. Although Wyoming does not keep an inactive list of eligible voters, the statewide

NVRA, voters marked as inactive are still able to vote in elections unless they have not voted for two consecutive federal elections and have not updated their information.

Almost three-quarters (70%) of states that reported differentiating between active and inactive voters also reported that they will move an active voter to the inactive voter list if mail that is sent by an election office to the voter's residence is returned as undeliverable, whereas 62% of states reported that they will move an active voter to the inactive voter list if the voter fails to return a confirmation notice. Fifteen states commented with several additional actions, including change in address, not voting in a certain number of elections, determining a person is a felon, determining a person is deceased, and the existence of duplicate voter records.32

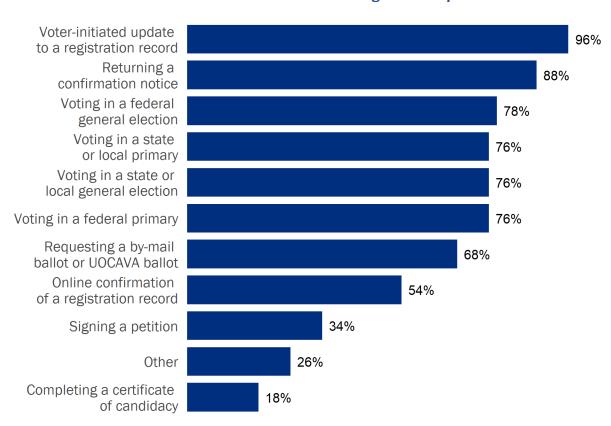

Figure 5. States That Differentiate Active and Inactive Voters Will Most Often Reactivate an Inactive Voter if the Voter Initiates a Registration Update

Source: Information on policy regarding reactivating inactive voters was collected in Q11b of the Policy Survey.

On the other hand, certain actions can result in moving an inactive voter to the active voter list. Figure 5 shows the reasons states report for reactivating inactive voters, if the state differentiates between active and inactive voters. reported that they will move an inactive voter to the active voter list if an individual initiates an update to their registration record (96%), returns a confirmation notice (88%), votes in a federal election (78% for general and 76% for primary), votes in a state or local primary or general election (both 76% respectively), and/or requests a mail or UOCAVA ballot (68%). Furthermore, roughly half of the states reported that they will move an inactive voter to the active voter list if there is an online confirmation of the voter's registration record. Less common reasons for moving an inactive voter to the active voter list included if a voter signs a petition or completes a certificate of candidacy. Thirteen states indicated some other reason, including providing documentation (e.g., appropriate identification or a signed affidavit) at a polling place, submitting a new registration, and receiving an address change through the state motor vehicle agency.³³

Thirty-five states indicated that only local officials are responsible for modifying or removing voter registration records, and 12 states reported that modifying voter registration records is done by both state and local officials.³⁴ Alaska, American Samoa, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Guam, South Carolina, and the U.S. Virgin Islands all indicated that they only modify records at the state level.³⁵ Table 2 illustrates data sources used to identify potentially ineligible voters. Across states, the most common data sources were the state vital statistics office, reports from other states indicating a former resident registered to vote, a voter request for removal, entities that maintain prison records, and any mail (not including ballots) sent from an election office that was returned as undeliverable.³⁶

Most states reported sending confirmation notices to voters to help identify individuals who may be ineligible to vote, but the reasons for sending confirmation notices differ by state. Of the states that send confirmation notices, 41 (85.4%) reported sending confirmation notices pursuant to Section 8 (d) (1) (B) and Section 8 (d) (2) of the NVRA, 31 states (64.6%) reported sending confirmation notices pursuant to a state statute, and seven states (14.6%) reported sending confirmation notices pursuant to a formal administrative rule or guidance. Eight states reported that they do not send confirmation notices.³⁷

States most commonly reported sending confirmation notices to voters whose mail from an election office was returned as undeliverable (81.3%), to voters whose addresses may have changed (72.9%), to voters who have not voted in two consecutive general elections (41.7%), to voters who have been convicted of a disqualifying felony (35.4%), and to voters who requested removal from the voter registration list (29.2%). Less than one-third of states reported sending confirmation notices to voters who have been declared mentally incompetent, voters who have obtained a driver's license in a new state, and voters who have not made contact with their state for a specified length of time.

³³ Information on moving an inactive voter to the active list was collected in item Q11b of the Policy Survey.

³⁴ The District of Columbia and American Samoa noted that they do not have local election officials; Puerto Rico noted that state and local officials have the same roles and responsibilities.

³⁵ Information on who is responsible for modifying or removing voter registration records was collected in item Q12 of the Policy Survey. Nevada did not provide a response, and North Dakota indicated that this question does not apply because the state does not have voter registration.

³⁶ Information on the data sources used to identify potentially ineligible voters was collected in item Q14 of the Policy Survey.

³⁷ Information on whether and how states send confirmation notices to help identify ineligible voters was collected in item Q13 of the Policy Survey.

Source: Information on the data sources used to identify ineligible voters was collected in Q14 of the Policy Survey. This question also collected information on whether states use commercial data sources, but no state selected that option.

Five states (10.4%) reported that all registered voters routinely receive a non-forwardable notice during a specified increment of time; this time frame ranges from one to four years. Just under 30% of states reported sending confirmation notices for some other reason.³⁸ For example, some states or certain jurisdictions within states indicated that they routinely send confirmation notices as part of their list maintenance procedures. States that are members of the Electronic Information Registration Center (ERIC) send confirmation notices to individuals who are eligible to vote but are unregistered. Other states indicated that notices are sent when there may be a change other than address (e.g., name). Washington, a state in which nearly all voters cast their ballots by mail, reported that the mailing information provided by a returned or forwarded ballot serves as the start of the confirmation process.

³⁸ Information on which voters states send confirmation notices to was collected in item Q13a of the Policy Survey.

Criminal Convictions and Voting

The NVRA allows states to remove voters from their registration lists if the voter receives a disqualifying criminal conviction or is incarcerated. The Policy Survey asks three questions about removing voters from registration lists due to disqualifying felony convictions and about the restoration of voting rights:

- Which populations have their voting eligibility suspended due to a criminal conviction?
- For how long does a person with a felony conviction lose their right to vote?
- How can a person with a felony conviction become an eligible voter again?

The District of Columbia, Guam, Maine, Puerto Rico, and Vermont reported that they do not limit a person's right to vote based on a criminal conviction. Conversely, 42 states reported that the conviction of any felony will limit a person's right to vote. About one-fifth of states reported that they limit the voting rights of individuals convicted only of certain felonies, and nine states reported that they limit the voting rights of individuals who are convicted of other crimes that are not felonies (e.g., election-related crimes).³⁹

There is variation in the disqualification time periods and in the processes for restoring voting rights. Of the states that have some form of felon disenfranchisement, most reported revoking the right to vote during the period of incarceration (90.4%) and/or any period of probation and parole (61.5%). Some states also reported revoking voting rights during an additional length of time (19.2%), such as a statutorily mandated waiting period and/or until the payment of outstanding fines, restitution, or penalties (25%).

The Policy Survey also asks states to indicate how disenfranchised individuals go about restoring their eligibility to vote. ⁴¹ Minnesota, Missouri, and the U.S. Virgin Islands reported automatically restoring the previous voter registration of persons with felony convictions once the period of disenfranchisement has passed, requiring no further action by the voter. ⁴² Of the 49 states that indicated requiring some type of action, 79.6% reported that a person is immediately eligible to vote and must reregister through the same process as the general public. Some states reported having other conditions, such as presenting documentation during the registration process that shows that the person has completed the voter registration requirements (12.2%) and having voting rights restored through a formal administrative process (16.3%). Thirteen states provided survey comments that further explained their policies.⁴³ In Louisiana, for example, if a person is under an order of imprisonment for a felony conviction but "has not been incarcerated pursuant to the order within the last five years," then that person is eligible to register. Florida and lowa reported that the type of felony conviction determines the restoration of voting rights. Arizona indicated that for a first felony conviction, civil rights are automatically restored upon the completion of the sentence, parole, probation period, and payment of restitution; otherwise, voting rights must be restored through a formal process.

³⁹ Information on state policies for suspending or revoking voting rights due to criminal convictions was collected in item Q37 of the Policy Survey. This item does not distinguish a felony conviction from the subsequent period of incarceration. ⁴⁰ Information on the length of time a disqualifying felony conviction will restrict voting rights was collected in item Q37a of the Policy Survey.

⁴¹ Due to North Dakota not having voter registration, a person who is no longer incarcerated is automatically eligible to vote without any further action needed. In Delaware, felony convictions result in permanent disqualification from voting.

Voting by Mail

All states and territories and the District of Columbia offer their citizens the opportunity to cast their ballots by mail in federal general elections.⁴⁴ Some states use the term "absentee voting" to refer to mail voting. The 2020 Policy Survey demonstrates that there were wide variations among the states in which voters are eligible to vote by mail, what documentation voters must provide in order to receive a mailed ballot, how mailed ballots may be returned to election officials, and the deadlines for mailed ballots to be postmarked and received by election offices for the 2020 general election. The COVID-19 restrictions pushed many states to expand their mail voting policies, and states reported more than double the number of mailed ballots cast in the 2020 general election compared to the 2016 general election. 45

In 2020, 39 states reported that they do not require voters to provide a reason for why they are requesting a mailed ballot and for why they cannot vote in person on Election Day; seven of those states reported requiring an excuse in 2018 but not in 2020. Conversely, one-third of states reported requiring voters to provide an excuse, a decrease from 40% in the 2018 Policy Survey responses.⁴⁶ Twenty-six states reported that voters can request to be on a permanent absentee list from which they will automatically receive ballots for all future elections. Either any registrant can request to be a permanent absentee voter (21.4% of states) or only individuals who meet specific criteria can request to be a permanent absentee voter (25% of states).⁴⁷

States have special criteria for individuals who make the request to be granted permanent absentee status.48 The most common requirement was that the requester must have a disability (78.6% of states that have permanent absentee voting); Delaware, 49 Massachusetts, New York, Tennessee, and Wisconsin reported that they will also grant permanent absentee status to those who are infirm, ⁴³ Information on state policies for restoring voting rights to persons with disqualifying felony convictions was collected in item Q37b of the Policy Survey.

⁴⁴ Some states use the term "in-person absentee voting" to refer to the process by which a voter visits an election office to request a mailed ballot, completes the ballot, and returns the ballot in one trip. However, EAVS considers this to be a form of in-person early voting and asks states to report their data as such.

⁴⁵ For more information, see Chapter 1 of this report.

⁴⁶ Information on whether states require an excuse for mail voting was collected in item Q17 of the Policy Survey.

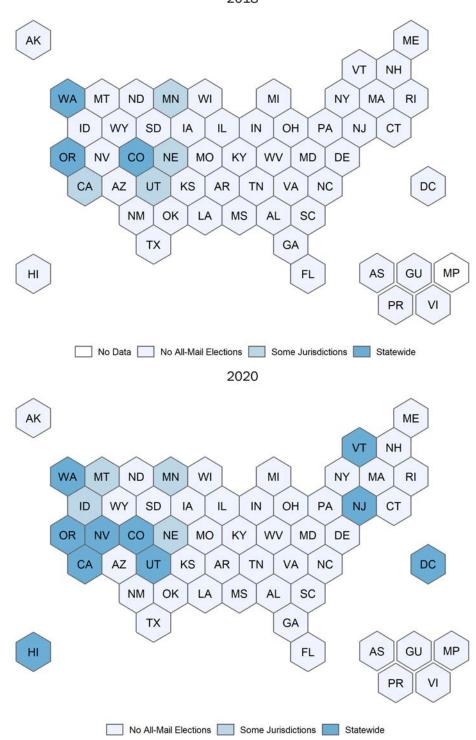

⁴⁷ Information on whether states have permanent absentee voting was collected in item Q19 of the Policy Survey.

⁴⁸ Information on who can become a permanent absentee voter was collected in item Q19a of the Policy Survey.

have a permanent illness, or can provide a note from a medical professional. West Virginia indicated allowing address confidentiality program participants to be permanent absentee voters, and Louisiana indicated requiring individuals to be over a specified age. Despite conducting all-mail elections, Oregon uses the term "absentee voter" for individuals who may be away from their residences when ballots are transmitted.

With 2020's overall shift toward mail voting, the number of states that conducted all-mail elections, in which all registered voters or all active registered voters are automatically sent a mailed ballot, doubled since the 2018 Policy Survey. Figure 6 shows the 14 states that have some type of vote-bymail system. Four states reported having some vote-by-mail jurisdictions. Ten states reported having statewide vote-by-mail systems, a significant increase from three states in 2018.50 The Policy Survey did not record whether the states that altered their all-mail voting policy between the 2018 and the 2020 general elections did so temporarily or permanently or whether the change was made in direct response to the COVID-19 pandemic. It should be noted that although these states mailed registered voters a ballot, most states also provided in-person voting options during early voting and/or on Election Day.

The Policy Survey also collected data on the circumstances under which voters could receive ballots through electronic means. This question applied specifically to non-military voters residing in the United States, as voters who are members of the uniformed services or who are overseas citizens who wish to receive ballots electronically are covered under UOCAVA. Twenty-nine states reported that they allow non-military voters residing in the United States to receive their ballots through an electronic format, such as email, fax, through an online voter registration portal, or through a mobile phone app. Alaska, Guam, Kentucky, Maryland, Oregon, and Washington reported that voters may receive a ballot electronically for any circumstance. 51 Other states reported having special circumstances.⁵² For example, 19 states indicated allowing voters with disabilities to receive ballots electronically, including seven states where voters must have specific disabilities and 12 states where voters may have any disability status. 53 Massachusetts specified that the voter must have a disability that prevents them from marking a paper ballot independently and privately, and Maine noted that the voter must self-identify as having a print disability.

Hawaii, Nevada, and the U.S. Virgin Islands reported that they allow electronic ballot transmission when a replacement ballot is need, and seven states reported that they allow electronic ballot transmission during emergency situations that hinder in-person voting, such as a natural disaster.⁵⁴

OCA-APPX-0945

⁵⁰ Information on which states have an all-vote-by-mail system was collected in item Q18 of the Policy Survey. Information on whether the state's all-vote-by-mail system is used only in certain jurisdictions or is statewide was collected in item 018a of the Policy Survey. California and Utah reported conducting all-mail elections statewide in 2020. In 2018, both states reported that only certain jurisdictions had all-mail elections.

⁵¹ California did not report that voters may receive a ballot electronically under any circumstance but commented that any voter may cast a ballot using a certified, remote-accessible vote-by-mail system regardless of disability status or whether they are an overseas or uniformed services voter.

⁵² Information on the circumstances under which voters may receive their ballots electronically was collected in item Q23 of the Policy Survey.

⁵⁴ Hawaii noted that a replacement ballot must be requested within five days of an election.

New York and Mississippi extended their requirements to emergency responders, and in Mississippi, according to the state UOCAVA statute, emergency responders qualify for an electronic ballot if they are deployed outside of their county of residence during an emergency.

Mailed Ballot Tracking and Deadlines

The 2020 Policy Survey asked states to report on their deadlines for mailed ballots from non-military voters residing in the United States. Ballot deadlines for voters covered by UOCAVA were reported in separate questions, as UOCAVA ballot deadlines are typically different from those for other mailed ballots. The postmark deadline is Election Day for just under half (46.4%) of states; however, Alabama, lowa, North Dakota, Ohio, and Utah reported having a postmark deadline one day before Election Day. The States, mailed ballots must be received by Election Day, and in 42.9% of states, mailed ballots must be received by a specified number of days after Election Day, with responses ranging from one to 20 days after Election Day. Louisiana reported that mailed ballots must be received by one day before Election Day.

States also reported how long mailed ballots that arrive past the above deadlines are tracked for reporting in Section C of the EAVS.⁵⁸ These mailed ballots are tracked indefinitely in 42.9% of states, or until canvassing is complete in 44.6% of states. Five states have a specific length of time for mailed ballot tracking; four of these states reported a date between November 17, 2020, and February 1, 2021.⁵⁹

States vary in what satisfies postmark requirements for mailed ballots.⁶⁰ In states that require postmarks, the most commonly reported required feature was a physical postmark (76.7%),⁶¹ followed by hand cancellation or a private express delivery service date stamp (both 44.2% respectively) and postal processing markings (41.9%). Less commonly required features were intelligent barcodes (23.3%) and a date on a voter affidavit (14%).⁶² Some states specified other ways of satisfying postmark requirements.⁶³ Additionally, Ohio indicated accepting an ID tag date, and Kansas indicated accepting any other indicia from the U.S. Postal Service. In California, if the postmark is missing or damaged and no additional information is provided by the U.S. Postal Service or other mail delivery service, the ballot identification envelope will be date stamped upon receipt by an election official on or before Election Day. The District of Columbia Board of Elections reported ⁵⁵ Twenty-two states indicated that the item asking for a postmark deadline for voters does not apply to them.

⁵⁶ States that reported having a ballot receipt deadline after Election Day require ballots to be postmarked by Election Day.

⁵⁷ Information on deadlines for returning mailed ballots was collected in item Q20 of the Policy Survey.

⁵⁸ Two states did not provide a response to this item.

⁵⁹ Information on the length of time that ballots are tracked for reporting in EAVS Section C was collected in item Q21 of the Policy Survey. Maine reported tracking until November 3, 2022.

⁶¹ Florida specified that physical postmarks are only required for 10-day overseas ballots. See https://dos.myflorida.com/elections/for-voters/voting/military-and-overseas-citizens-voting/ for more detail on these ballots.

⁶² In Washington, the postmark requirement may be met by a date on a voter affidavit for UOCAVA ballots that lack a postmark.

⁶³ Information on mailed ballot postmark requirements was collected in item Q22 of the Policy Survey.

that they make ballot drop boxes available to voters through Election Day, which satisfies postmark requirements.

UOCAVA Voting

UOCAVA requires that all states offer uniformed services members, their eligible family members, and overseas citizens the ability to vote absentee in all federal elections. UOCAVA-protected citizens have the option of using the FPCA, which serves as both a registration and ballot request application and is accepted in all U.S. states and territories. All states accept FPCAs submitted by postal mail. In addition, the Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment (MOVE) Act amended UOCAVA, requiring that all states offer an electronic means for FPCA submission. UOCAVA voters may submit their FPCA by fax, online (either by email or through the state's online voter registration portal), or by other modes, as allowed by state law.

All states are required to accept FPCAs by postal mail. In 2020, the most common additional methods for accepting FPCAs were email and fax; both modes were allowed in over 90% of states. Twenty-four states (42.9%, an increase from 36.4% in 2018) reported accepting FPCAs submitted through the state's online voter registration portal.⁶⁴ Some states reported that FPCAs can be submitted by some other method; South Carolina and Colorado indicated allowing in-person returns, and Louisiana indicated allowing returns by commercial carrier. Oklahoma reported allowing UOCAVA voters to email their ballot materials to FVAP's electronic transmission service, after which the email is converted to fax and sent to the appropriate county election board. Maine specified allowing UOCAVA voters to request an absentee ballot through the state's online absentee ballot request service. A voter registration submitted via FPCA is considered permanent in 53.6% of states (a decrease from 72.7% in 2018) and temporary in 46.4% of states (an increase from 25.5% in 2018).65

States differ in the length of time an FPCA absentee ballot request remains valid; that is, the period of time or number of elections for which a voter can retain their UOCAVA status and have an absentee ballot transmitted to them. 66 Almost half (46.4%) of states reported that the length of time the FPCA will serve as a ballot request mechanism is a specified number of calendar years; in most of those states, the length of time is one year, although in North Dakota, Utah, and Virginia, it is two years. In other states, the length of time is measured by the number of general election cycles (12.5%); most of those states specified a length of one general election cycle, although Minnesota and Oklahoma specified two general election cycles. Some states (8.9%) reported that they will use the FPCA as a ballot request mechanism until the voter moves from their residence.⁶⁷

⁶⁴ Maryland reported allowing the three listed options if the voter is already registered and is using the FPCA to request an absentee ballot. If the FPCA is used to register, it must be submitted by mail or through Maryland's online voter registration portal. In Wisconsin, non-military UOCAVA voters cannot submit registrations, including the FPCA, by email or fax. 65 Information on the methods by which UOCAVA voters can submit an FPCA, other than by postal mail, was collected in item Q26 of the Policy Survey. Information on whether a voter registration submitted through an FPCA is permanent or temporary was collected in item Q27 of the Policy Survey.

⁶⁶ Information on how long UOCAVA voters remain eligible to receive absentee ballots was collected in item Q28 of the Policy Survey.

⁶⁷ This information is provided by the U.S. Postal Service or the voter.

SSISTANCE COMMUNICATION OF STATES

About one-third (32.1%) of states provided a description of another length of time that was unlisted in the Policy Survey question, with some states making distinctions between general and primary elections and others reporting a time linked with either a specific election timeline or a length of time tied to the submission of the FPCA. Nevada reported that voters retain their status until the end of the following calendar year, and Maine reported that the status remains eligible for 18 months. American Samoa, Oregon, and Washington specified a timeline based on changes to a voter's registration record. California, New Jersey, and North Carolina reported that eligibility remains permanent. Voters also continue to remain eligible in Pennsylvania, as long as they are registered to vote and they reapply for an absentee ballot each election cycle. The Northern Mariana Islands also reported that they require all registered voters to request their absentee ballots each election year.

UOCAVA Voting Deadlines

In addition to reporting deadlines for mailed ballots from non-UOCAVA voters, the 2020 Policy Survey asked states to report deadlines for ballots submitted by both uniformed services voters residing in the United States and overseas UOCAVA voters. States provided information on both postmark deadlines and ballot receipt deadlines, as applicable. In 2020, the postmark deadline was Election Day in about half of the states (48.2%) for domestic uniformed services voters; however, in Iowa, North Dakota, and Pennsylvania, the postmark deadline was one day before Election Day. ⁶⁸ Just under half of the states (41.1%) reported that ballots had to have been received by Election Day, and 58.9% of the states indicated that the ballots must have been received by a specified number of days after Election Day, with responses ranging from two to 20 days after Election Day. ⁶⁹

For overseas UOCAVA voters, Election Day was the postmark deadline in half of the states. The three states mentioned above also reported having a postmark deadline one day before Election Day for these voters. ⁷⁰ Ballots in 39.3% of the states were required to be received by Election Day; in the remaining 60.7% of states ballots could arrive after Election Day and still remain eligible to be counted, with the deadlines ranging from two to 20 days after Election Day. The majority of states (83.7%) reported that they have the same postmark requirements for UOCAVA ballots and mailed ballots from non-UOCAVA voters. ⁷¹ Eight states indicated that the requirements are different. ⁷²

For more information about how UOCAVA voters participated in the 2020 general election, including ballots transmitted, returned, counted, and rejected, and the use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB), see Chapter 4 of this report.

In-Person Voting

The traditional image of voting in America involves voters physically traveling to a polling location and casting their ballots in person. In some cases, however, an individual may vote in person without having to go to a polling place on Election Day.

In-Person Voting Before Election Day

Most states reported that they allow individuals to cast their ballots in person before Election Day (not including the hand delivery of mailed ballots). 73 This type of voting generally falls into two categories:

- A voter may go to a polling place before Election Day, receive a ballot, vote their ballot while at the polling place, and place their completed ballot into a ballot box or tabulator.
- A voter may go to an election office to pick up a ballot over the counter. In some states, the voter may be able to take their ballot home with them, whereas in other states, the ballot must be completed in the office. The ballot is then sealed in an envelope and tabulated along with ballots that are returned to the office by mail according to local procedures.

Different states use the terms "in-person early voting" and "in-person absentee voting" to describe both of the voting methods above, although other terms exist as well. Some states offer both types of voting activities.

Table 3. Examples of Unique Descriptions of In-Person Early Voting

State	Description of In-Person Early Voting
American Samoa	Local absentee voting
Connecticut	Can request an absentee ballot, vote on the spot, and not return it by mail
Georgia	Advance voting
Hawaii	In-person voting
Kansas	In-person advance voting
North Carolina	One-stop and early voting
Oregon	Some populations can go to county elections office and receive a ballot, which they can then use to vote
Pennsylvania	Mailed ballots can be completed over the counter at an election office
Puerto Rico	Voting in their houses via USPS mail
Washington	In-person voting

Source: Information on the descriptions of in-person early voting was collected in Q24 of the Policy Survey.

⁷³ New Jersey does not have in-person voting before Election Day.

Twenty-nine states (51.8%) reported having in-person early voting, and 27 states (48.2%) reported having in-person absentee voting.⁷⁴ Ten states specified unique descriptions for early voting, as seen in Table 3. Twelve states (21.4%) reported requiring an excuse to vote in person before Election Day, a decrease from the 15 states that reported this policy in 2018.⁷⁵

Vote Centers

The EAC describes vote centers as centralized, consolidated polling sites that serve as alternatives to traditional polling places. ⁷⁶ Jurisdictions that use vote centers allow voters to cast their Election Day ballots at any vote center in their jurisdiction, rather than needing to vote at a specifically assigned polling place. The 2020 Policy Survey asked whether any of the state's jurisdictions allow voters to cast ballots at any polling place or vote center in their jurisdiction and to describe how vote centers operate.

Over one-third of states (37.5%) reported having vote centers or allowing voters to cast ballots at any polling place in the voter's jurisdiction. Eight of those states (38.1%) indicated that they require the use of vote centers statewide. Another eight reported having vote centers, but jurisdictions have the option not to implement them. Alabama, Arkansas, Missouri, Tennessee, and Texas (comprising 23.8% of the states) reported having vote centers, but only in jurisdictions that meet specific requirements.⁷⁷

Voter Identification

Under HAVA, Congress established minimum identification standards that an individual must meet in order to register to vote:

- Individuals who register to vote at their state's motor vehicle agency, another government agency, or using an online registration portal are typically authenticated by presenting appropriate documentation to the government agency and by the state matching the person's driver's license number or last four digits of their social security number to an existing state record.
- Individuals who register by mail and who have not voted before for federal office in their state of residence are required to present, at some point before voting, either a current and valid photo identification or a copy of a utility bill, bank statement, government check, paycheck, or other government document that shows the person's name and address.

⁷⁴ Information on the terminology used to describe the process of voting in person before Election Day was collected in item Q24 of the Policy Survey. States were able to select multiple response options.

⁷⁷ Information on whether any jurisdictions within a state will allow voters to cast ballots at any polling location or vote center in their jurisdiction was collected in item Q25 of the Policy Survey. Information on how vote centers operate was collected in item Q25a of the Policy Survey.

 Individuals who are entitled to vote by absentee ballot under UOCAVA or entitled to vote other than in person under the Voting Accessibility for the Elderly and Handicapped Act or other federal law are exempt from HAVA's identification requirements.

The definition of voter identification varies by state. In some states it can mean a government-issued document with a photograph, whereas in other states, it can mean a voter-executed affidavit affirming identity. For in-person, non-first-time voting whether before or on Election Day, most states (53.6%) reported that they require voters to present a government-issued photo identification as proof of their identity. 78 Twenty states (35.7%) reported allowing voters to present a governmentissued, non-photo identification, and 24 states (42.9%) reported allowing non-government-issued, non-photo identification. Some states reported allowing a proof of residence (32.1%), a signed affidavit affirming identity with no further action required (37.5%) or with the requirement of presenting proper identification before a provisional ballot is counted (23.2%), or in some cases, voters may have a person registered to vote within that jurisdiction vouch for their identity (12.5%). Five states (8.9%) reported that they do not have identification requirements for in-person voting.⁷⁹

Provisional Voting

The EAC has provided best practices on the development of provisional voting procedures and notice to voters to ensure provisional voting procedures are fair, transparent, effective, and consistently applied to all voters in the state. The EAC states in its Best Practices on Provisional Voting report:

Section 302 of the Help America Vote Act (HAVA) creates the right for potential voters to cast provisional ballots in the event their names do not appear on the registration list or the voters' eligibility is challenged by an election official. The issuance of a provisional ballot is best described as a safety net or fail safe for the voter, in that:

- It maintains the person's intent to vote and selections until election officials determine that the person does or does not have the right to cast a ballot in the election.
- It allows the determination of the voter's eligibility to be made at a time when more perfect or complete information is available either from the voter or from the election jurisdiction.⁸⁰

HAVA specifies minimum requirements for notice to voters and provides opportunities for voters to resolve eligibility issues. Within the federal framework, states have different methods of complying with the provisional notification to voter requirements, using different technology and different timetables. State and local election officials ultimately apply their policies, procedures, and state legal requirements when making a determination as to whether or not to count a provisional ballot. For example, a state that has a stricter standard for the identification of voters than is contained in HAVA would apply its standard to determine if a given provisional ballot meets the state's ID standard.

⁷⁸ Two states did not provide a response to the item asking about identification requirements.

⁷⁹ Information on establishing a voter's identity during in-person voting was collected in item Q36 of the Policy Survey.

Fifty states reported using provisional ballots for different reasons. The most common reason was an election official has asserted an individual is not eligible to vote.⁸¹ Table 4 provides a full list of reasons the states use provisional ballots.

If a voter casts a provisional ballot as a result of not having acceptable identification during voting, the deadline by which they must present appropriate identification to election officials to verify their identity and to have their provisional ballot accepted was most commonly reported as a specified number of days after Election Day. The 11 states that have this policy reported a range of one to nine days after Election Day. However, in Massachusetts and Wisconsin, the deadline for adjudicating provisional ballots for the 2020 general election was a specified date: November 6, 2020.82

 ⁸¹ Information on whether states use provisional ballots was collected in item Q32 of the Policy Survey. Information on the circumstances under which a state will use provisional ballots was collected in item Q32a of the Policy Survey.
 82 Information on deadlines for presenting appropriate identification to have a provisional ballot counted was collected in item Q36a of the Policy Survey.

After the election, many states have a limited amount of time in which to adjudicate provisional ballots and decide whether the ballots will be counted (either in full or in part) or rejected.83 Twentysix percent of the states that use provisional ballots reported that the deadline is by a specified date; for the November 3, 2020, general election, these dates ranged from November 3, 2020, to November 24, 2020. Most states (70%) indicated that this deadline is specified as a number of days after Election Day, with responses ranging between one day and 28 days.84

Eight percent of the states that use provisional ballots reported provisional ballots cast in the wrong precinct would be fully counted, and 40% of the states reported that they would be partially counted.85 Slightly more than half of the states (52%) reported that these ballots would be rejected.86

Election Technology

Voting system testing and certification are required in the majority of states (83.9%) by statute, and a few states (10.7%) indicated that they require testing and certification through a formal administrative rule or guidance. American Samoa, Mississippi, and Oklahoma reported that voting system testing and certification before the system's approval for purchase is not required. The 2020 Policy Survey then asked states to describe their policies regarding the role of the EAC and federal testing and certification. States most commonly reported requiring testing by an EAC-accredited Voting System Test Laboratory (VSTL; 45.3%), certification to the EAC-adopted Voluntary Voting System Guidelines (VVSG; 43.4%), and/or state and federal certification (41.5%; see Figure 7).87

Some states provided clarifying comments: The District of Columbia reported that it requires that voting systems must meet or exceed HAVA standards and/or be federally certified. Similarly, Oregon reported that the system must be EAC certified or examined by a federally accredited VSTL. New York indicated that a secondary source code review is performed by an independent security expert.

Alaska reported that it may approve a voting system upon consideration by an election administrator,88 and Guam indicated having an independent entity that conducts testing to determine the integrity of voting machines as deemed appropriate by election commissioners. Wisconsin reported having the statutory authority to certify systems without federal certification, but in practice, state testing typically does not start until federal certification is acquired.

Although there is no testing or certification of electronic poll books, sometimes called e-poll books, on the federal level, many states have their own process for testing or certifying these machines

⁸³ One state did not provide a response to this item. In Maine, provisional ballots are automatically counted unless a recount results in a contested election and the number of challenged ballots can affect the outcome.

⁸⁴ Information on the deadlines for adjudicating provisional ballots is collected in Policy Survey item Q32b.

⁸⁵ For example, a state might only count items on the ballot for which the voter would have been eligible had they voted in the correct precinct.

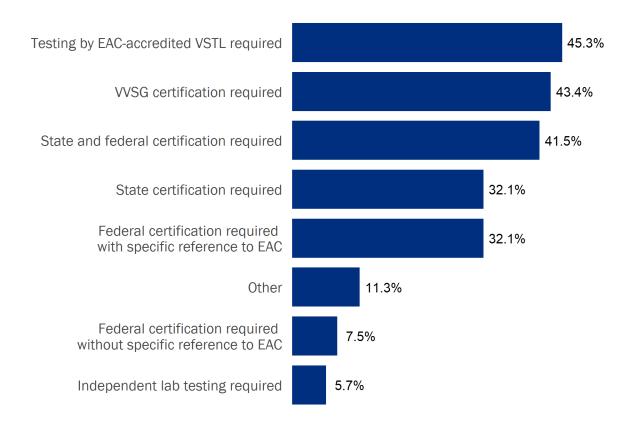

⁸⁶ Information on what happens to provisional ballots cast in the wrong precinct is collected in Policy Survey item Q32c.

⁸⁷ Information on voting system testing and certification policies was collected in items Q15 and Q15a of the Policy Survey.

before approving them for purchase. Of the 40 states (71.4%) that reported using e-poll books either statewide or only in certain jurisdictions, 42.5% indicated that they do not require testing or certification before the e-poll books' approval for purchase.⁸⁹ In about one-third of the states that reported having e-poll book requirements, the testing and certification are required by statute, whereas in one-fourth of the states, testing and certification are required by formal administrative rule or guidance.⁹⁰

The 2020 Policy Survey asked whether any jurisdictions in the state use e-poll books and whether testing and certification are required before e-poll books' "approval for purchase." The Policy Survey and EAVS did not collect data on other procedures a jurisdiction may require before authorizing the use of e-poll books, including but not limited to pre-election testing, secure physical storage, contingency planning, chain-of-custody practices, and poll worker training.

⁸⁹ Colorado, Hawaii, and Massachusetts reported in the Policy Survey that they use e-poll books but did not report data on the usage of e-poll books in item F3 of the EAVS. Puerto Rico reported data on the usage of e-poll books in the EAVS but reported not using e-poll books in the Policy Survey.

⁹⁰ Information on poll books was collected in items Q16 and Q16a of the Policy Survey. Illinois did not provide a response to this item.

Recounts, Audits, and Election Certification

Before local election officials certify the results of an election, they take steps to verify that all established election procedures were followed and that all voting equipment functioned properly. Many states require additional post-election verification that the counting process was accurate. These additional verifications may take the form of a partial recount (in which ballots in randomly selected precincts are counted a second time to ensure that the initial tabulation of votes was accurate) or a more detailed audit (in which the entire voting process is reviewed and key steps are verified).

Recounts

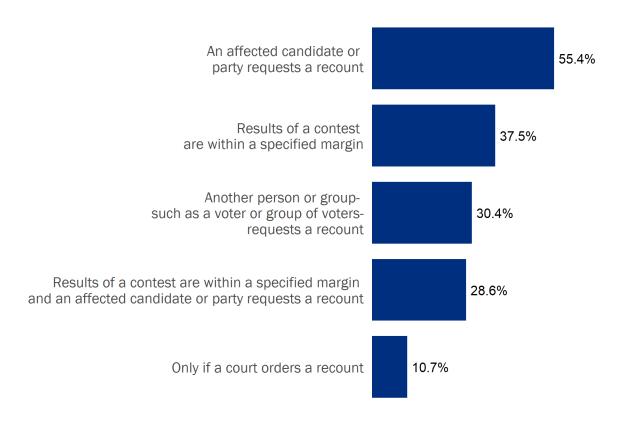

An election recount is a repeat tabulation of all votes cast in an election, and it is used to determine the accuracy of an initial count. The EAVS Policy Survey did not ask if the reasons for a recount were automatic, mandatory, or triggered. The information collected in these questions quantifies what is generally allowed by law in a specified state. Figure 8 displays the reasons why states may have conducted an election recount for the 2020 general election. States reported that the most common reason a recount may be conducted is at the request of an affected candidate or party (55.4%). Less common reasons were if the results of a contest are within a specified margin (37.5%), another person or group requests a recount (30.4%),91 or if the results of a contest are within a specified margin and it is requested by an affected candidate or party (28.6%). Arizona, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, the Northern Mariana Islands, and Tennessee reported that recounts are only authorized if a court orders it.92

⁹¹ Based on state comments, this reason can include voters or groups of voters, a county board of canvassers, a county election commission, a political party chair, or a person opposing a state or local measure. Washington specified that a group of five or more voters may request a recount for an issue, and Nevada specified that any person or group could request a recount of a ballot measure by November 18, 2020.

⁹² Information on state policies regarding election recounts was collected in item Q34 of the Policy Survey.

Post-Election Tabulation Audits

A post-election tabulation audit verifies that the voting equipment used to count ballots during an election properly counts a sample of voted ballots after an election. The majority of states (78.6%) indicated requiring some form of post-election tabulation audit, with some variation. 93 States most commonly indicated that a post-election audit is conducted as a statutory requirement, but Missouri and Nebraska stated that they conduct an audit as required by a formal administrative rule or guidance. Tennessee indicated only requiring a post-election tabulation audit for jurisdictions using optical scan voting systems. In Oklahoma, the secretary of the state election board can direct the secretary of a county election board to conduct post-election audits to ensure that voting devices and software correctly tabulated votes. Louisiana reported that it does not statutorily require tabulation audits, but audits are conducted in all parishes. The Policy Survey did not collect information on whether these audits were mandatory, triggered, or conducted only in certain circumstances.

⁹³ Information on whether a state requires a post-election tabulation audit was collected in item Q35 of the Policy Survey. Louisiana is not included in this calculation because it reported that "Our state does not statutorily require audits, but they are conducted in every parish."

The 2020 Policy Survey asked states to report which of the following post-election tabulation audits would be required for the 2020 general election. States could select multiple options as applicable:

- A traditional tabulation audit that comes from a fixed percentage of randomly selected voting districts or voting machines and is compared to the results produced by the voting system;
- A risk-limiting tabulation audit that is a protocol designed to limit the risk of certifying an incorrect election outcome by using statistical methods to select the audit sample size; or
- Another type of audit.

Roughly three-quarters of the states reported requiring a traditional tabulation audit, and about onefifth of the states reported requiring a risk-limiting tabulation audit.94 Thirteen states (28.9%) provided comments detailing alternative procedures.95 For example, California stated that a jurisdiction may choose to conduct a risk-limiting audit instead of a traditional tabulation audit, and Nevada noted that after an initial pilot tabulation audit conducted after the 2020 general election, the state will require risk-limiting tabulation audits starting after the 2022 primary election. Pennsylvania also reported that it piloted a risk-limiting tabulation audit after the 2020 general election in addition to their statutory requirement.

Some states reported having additional steps in their tabulation audit processes. For example, Maryland stated that it conducts a traditional manual audit as well as a completely automated tabulation audit using ballot images. Louisiana noted that its tabulation audit includes a comparison between the number of times a machine was used for voting, the number of voters that signed a precinct register, the names written in the precinct poll books, and the voters who were given credit for voting in the statewide database. Washington reported that local election officials can choose among three methods to meet the state post-election tabulation audit requirement, including the option for a risk-limiting audit.

Election Certification

Although some local jurisdictions might have earlier deadlines for finalizing election results, elections are not officially certified until the state provides a final result. The 2020 Policy Survey asked states to provide their election certification deadlines for the 2020 general election.96 The range was broad,97 with 41 states reporting a date between November 10, 2020, and November 30, 2020.98

⁹⁴ Information on the type of post-election tabulation audit that states require was collected in item 035a of the Policy Survey. States were able to make multiple selections in this item's response options.

⁹⁶ Hawaii does not have an election certification deadline; results are certified within 20 days of the election unless the Supreme Court has contested an election.

⁹⁷ The range was as early as November 4, 2020, in Puerto Rico and as late as December 11, 2020, in California.

⁹⁸ Information on deadlines for certifying the November 2020 general election results was collected in item Q33 of the Policy Survey.

States provided clarifying comments on their specific policies regarding their certification deadline. For example, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, and Rhode Island reported not having a specific state certification deadline, ⁹⁹ and the District of Columbia and Guam noted that their reported dates were tentative deadlines. Additionally, Alaska commented that their reported date was a target deadline, and North Carolina noted their reported deadline was barring recounts or protests in individual races.

⁹⁹ Tennessee and Pennsylvania noted that their reported deadlines apply to county officials, not state officials.

[1] Alaska reported that electronic information sharing with other, non-NVRA-required state agencies occurs after the March 31 deadline to apply for the Permanent Fund Dividend has passed. This typically involves one data file transfer.

- [2] Connecticut reported sharing electronic information with entities that maintain records of individuals declared mentally incompetent on an as-needed basis.
- [3] Delaware reported that information is transmitted to state public assistance agencies at the moment the information is submitted to the voter portal by a client.
- [4] The District of Columbia reported that information is shared with entities that maintain death records on a quarterly basis.
- [5] Hawaii reported that voter information is shared with its motor vehicle agency upon request.
- [6] Kentucky reported that it shares voter information with military recruiting offices as requests occur.
- [7] Maryland reported that it is notified as needed by the Maryland Judiciary when a person is declared mentally incompetent by order of the courts.
- [8] Nebraska conducts real-time checks of driver's license, state identifications, and SSN information on file with the motor vehicles agency. Daily transfers are conducted with the motor vehicle agency for voter registrations that occur at the agency, surrendered IDs, changed IDs, or SSNs needing verification from the Social Security Administration.
- [9] New Hampshire reported that it shares voter information with the motor vehicles agency, federal agencies, and entities that maintain felony records in a one-way exchange from the agencies to the election office.
- [10] The Northern Mariana Islands did not provide a response to these items.
- [11] Oklahoma reported that offices that have converted to the Department of Public Safety's (DPS) new system share data daily. Offices that have not yet converted to the new system can only send address change data, and that data is sent weekly. Information regarding Oklahoma driver's licenses surrendered in another state is received monthly.
- [12] Oregon reported that information is exchanged with the motor vehicles agency Monday through Friday.
- [13] The U.S. Virgin Islands reported that information is exchanged with other state agencies at the request of the court.
- [14] Utah reported that information is exchanged with entities that maintain death records on a bimonthly basis and entities that maintain records of individuals declared mentally incompetent as needed.
- [15] Wisconsin receives competency data electronically from the courts.

- The Policy Survey did not collect information on whether changes in states' laws regarding all-voteby-mail elections for 2020 were permanent or temporary or whether the changes were made in direct response to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- [1] Although Oregon is a vote-by-mail state, there are still individuals who are considered absentee voters. Anyone who is registered as an Oregon voter but is away from their Oregon residence when ballots are available can request to be a permanent absentee voter if Oregon remains their primary residence.
- [2] Pennsylvania provides both absentee and mail voting options. Voters who apply for an absentee ballot must give a reason for voting absentee. Voters who apply for a mailed ballot are not required to give a reason.

- [2] In Massachusetts, in-person absentee voting before Election Day requires an excuse but early voting does not.
- [3] Oregon reported that members of specific populations (e.g., those who will not be in Oregon or have access to a regular mailing address when ballots are available) can receive and return a ballot at their county election office. They may choose to cast their vote then and there or take it with them and return via mail or drop box.
- [4] Pennsylvania's 2019 election reforms allow for absentee and mail-in ballots to be completed over the counter at an election office.

- [5] Puerto Rico reported that in addition to in-person early voting, voters may cast their ballot from their residence via mail.
- [6] South Carolina requires an excuse for in-person absentee voting; however, this requirement was temporarily suspended for elections held in 2020.
- [7] Washington is a vote-by-mail state. In-person voters were issued a vote-by-mail ballot packet at a voting center that they could deposit into a ballot drop box or mail. Alternatively, voters could use a disability access unit to vote in person before Election Day.

Policy Survey Table 8 Data Notes:

General Notes:

- States were able to specify a calendar date for item Q33, select multiple responses to item Q34, and only a single response to item Q35. Selecting Q34_5 excluded all other responses to Q34.
- [1] Alaska reported that the certification deadline is the target date for the Alaska Division of Elections to certify the election. According to Alaska statute, a defeated candidate or 10 qualified voters who believe there has been a mistake in counting votes in an election may file an application for a recount of votes for any precinct or house district and for any office, proposition, or question. This application must be filed within five days after the completion of state review. However, the application may only be filed within three days after the completion of the state review after the general election for a recount of votes cast for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor. A recount is required if a contest is tied.
- [2] Arkansas reported that the County Election Commission may also come to a decision to recount an election.
- [3] California reported that anybody who is allowed by state law can request a recount.
- [4] The Delaware Boards of Canvass convene at 10:00 a.m. on the Thursday immediately following the federal general election.
- [5] The District of Colombia included the November 24 date in a public calendar as a tentative date for certifying results rather than a set deadline.

- [6] Florida specified that the state Elections Canvassing Commission meets at 9:00 a.m. on the ninth day after a primary election and at 9:00 a.m. on the 14th day after a general election to certify the election. For the November 3, 2020, federal general election, the deadline for jurisdictions to certify their results to the state fell on November 15, 2020.
- [7] Georgia reported that "In Georgia precincts where paper or scanning ballots have been used, the superintendent may, either of their own motion or upon petition of any candidate or political party, order a recount of ballots for a particular precinct for one or more offices in which it appears an error has been made. In precincts where voting machines were used, if there appears to be a discrepancy or error in the returns recorded for any voting machine, the superintendent may, either of their own motion or upon sworn petition of three electors of any precinct, order a recanvass of the votes shown on that particular machine or machines. This recanvass may be conducted at any time prior to the certification of the consolidated returns by the superintendent."
- [8] Guam reported that the certification deadline was a tentative date. The Guam Election Commission (GEC) cannot certify a general election until all administrative complaints received within 15 days after the election have been addressed.
- [9] Hawaii explained that there is no set deadline for certifying election results. If there are no election contests filed with the Supreme Court within 20 days of the election, the results will be certified.
- [10] Idaho reported that the county board of canvassers must certify results within 10 days of the general election, prior to the state board of canvassers meeting within 15 days of the general election. Idaho reported that a person supporting or opposing a state, jurisdiction, or city measure may request an election recount.
- [11] The Indiana Election Division (IED) tabulates final results for all federal, statewide, state legislative, and judicial offices and completes that tabulation no later than the last Tuesday of November (i.e., November 24, 2020). The Secretary of State certifies results immediately after receiving IED's tabulation. For presidential electors, the Secretary of State's part of the 2020 Indiana Election Commission would be signed by that date. Since the governor is required to issue commissions to each presidential elector by noon on the first Tuesday of December (i.e., December 1, 2020), and in order to issue those commissions the governor must certify his part of the 2020 Indiana Election Commission certificate of ascertainment, the certification of the presidential election results and Indiana electors also occurs on the first Tuesday of December. Indiana reported that a candidate's political party chair (state chair for federal and statewide candidates or county chair for a state legislative candidate from any jurisdiction where the legislative district is located) may file a recount if the candidate does not file the recount by the candidate recount filing deadline.
- [12] Kansas county board of canvassers can request a recount within their jurisdictions of any race if there are manifest errors.
- [13] Louisiana reported that election results are final after compilation and promulgation by the Secretary of State. Louisiana voters that voted in the proposition election may request a recount if the number of absentee and early ballots would make a difference in the outcome of the proposition election. Louisiana does not statutorily require audits, but they are conducted in every parish.
- [14] Maine reported that the Secretary of State must submit the official tabulation to the governor by the 20th day after the election.
- [15] Massachusetts local election officials must certify their election results and transmit to the Secretary of the Commonwealth within 15 days after the election. Thereafter, the Secretary of the Commonwealth tabulates the totals and presents them to the governor and the council for certification. Any registered Massachusetts voter can petition for a recount of ballot questions.
- [16] Michigan specified that recounts are conducted automatically if the statewide vote margin is less than 2,000 votes. Candidates can request a recount regardless of the margin. Groups may request a recount of ballot proposals. The voted ballots in at least one statewide contest must be reviewed as part of an audit (MCL 168.31a[2]). Separate audit procedures are used to complete both a traditional tabulation audit and a risk-limiting audit. Precincts are randomly selected for audit and all ballots for one statewide race were hand counted and compared to the tabulator totals to complete a traditional tabulation audit. Additionally, ballots for a statewide race are randomly selected from ballot containers statewide using a risk-limiting audit formula, and ballots were reviewed and compared to statewide totals.

- [17] Minnesota did not specify the other person or group who may request a recount of votes.
- [18] Nebraska specified that if there is a state-level recount, it would be conducted on December 2, 2020, at 9:00 a.m.
- [19] In Nevada, any person or group was able to request a recount of a ballot question by November 18, 2020.
- [20] New Hampshire specified that its certification dates vary depending on the office. For presidential electors, United States senators, representatives in Congress, state senators, and state representatives, the deadline was December 2, 2020. For governor, executive council, and county officers, the deadline was January 6, 2021.
- [21] North Carolina specified that their reported date is barring recounts and/or protests in individual races.
- [22] North Dakota specified that a defeated candidate or 10 qualified electors may contest the nomination or election of any person or the approval or rejection of any question or proposition submitted to a vote of the electorate, pursuant to chapters 16.1-04, 16.1-05, 16.1-06, 16.1-07, 16.1-08.1, 16.1-09, 16.1-10, and 16.1-11.
- [23] Ohio specified that issue groups may request an election recount.
- [24] The Oklahoma County Election Boards certify final election results in their jurisdictions at 5:00 p.m. on the Friday following the general election. In 2020, that was 5:00 p.m. on November 6. The State Election Board certifies final statewide results at 5:00 p.m. on the Tuesday following the general election. In 2020, that was 5:00 p.m. on November 10. The secretary of the state election board shall have the authority to direct the secretary of a county election board to conduct a post-election audit of election results, for the purpose of maintaining the security of the election system by ensuring that voting devices and software used in a particular election correctly tabulated votes.
- [25] Oregon reported that any voter can request a recount on a measure. The county clerk may also request a recount of a candidate contest or measure.
- [26] Pennsylvania reported that the November 23, 2020, certification deadline was imposed on jurisdiction officials and not on the Secretary of the Commonwealth. Pennsylvania reported that a group of voters may request a recount of specific precincts.
- [27] The Puerto Rico Electoral Code does not establish a certain date for certification. However, it does establish partial result certification for the next day. If an election does not require a recount, the winner can be certified by the Puerto Rico State Election Commission.
- [28] Rhode Island does not have a specified certification deadline but certified all elections, with the exception of three local races that were awaiting write-in ballots to be tallied on November 20, 2020.
- [29] South Carolina reported that post-election hand count audits are required by State Election Commission mandate.
- [30] Tennessee's reported deadline applies to the certification of election results by county election commissions. There is no specified deadline for the state to certify results.
- [31] The Texas governor's canvass must be performed between 18 and 33 days after the election.
- [32] The Virginia State Board of Elections meets on the third Monday in November as required by state law.
- [33] In Washington, in addition to the mandatory recounts, if a contest is within a specified margin, a group of five or more voters may request a recount for an issue or question.

- [34] Wisconsin law permits a recount within specified margins and by a qualified party who makes a request, or when ordered by a court of law.
- [35] The Wyoming State Canvassing Board meeting was set at 10:00 a.m. on November 10, 2020. Wyoming reported that the post-election tabulation uses the same sample ballots used for the logic and accuracy testing before the election. The county clerk conducts a random audit of ballots by processing the pre-audited group of test ballots on 5% of the automated tabulating equipment for that jurisdiction, but on not less than one machine, within 30 days of any election in which the tabulating equipment was used.

Chapter 3. Voter Registration: The NVRA and Beyond

Key Findings

The Election Administration and Voting Survey (EAVS) collected data on voter registration between the 2018 and the 2020 general elections in Section A of the survey. Election officials were asked a variety of questions relating to registration and list maintenance, including the number of persons registered and eligible to vote in the 2020 general election, the number of registration forms processed, the number of confirmation notices sent pursuant to the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA) and for other purposes, and the number of records removed from the voter registration rolls. Notable findings from Section A of the 2020 EAVS include:

- The number of registrations received between the 2018 and the 2020 general elections reached 103,701,513, a 33.8% increase in registrations received compared to the period leading to the 2016 general election.
- The states' departments of motor vehicles (DMV) were once again the most commonly used registration source and accounted for 39.3% of the total registrations received between the 2018 and the 2020 general elections.
- Online registration continued to be the second-most used registration method, accounting for 28.2% of the total registrations received, and it was the registration method with the largest growth in the two-year period leading to the 2020 general election.
- The total number of reported active registrants reached 209,441,338 nationwide. The total number of active registrations for the 2020 general election increased 8.3% compared to the 2016 general election.
- States reported removing 18,781,054 voter records from voter registration rolls between the 2018 and the 2020 general elections. More than half of these removals occurred because a registrant failed to return a confirmation notice and did not vote in the following two general elections, or because the registrant moved out of the voting jurisdiction.

Introduction

Voter registration is required in 49 states, ¹ all of the U.S. territories, and the District of Columbia, making registration the first step toward election participation for most voters. ² Registration serves multiple purposes: It allows election officials to confirm if a person is eligible to vote; permits officials to efficiently allocate resources such as ballots, poll workers, and voting equipment, depending on the number of registrants per precinct and jurisdiction;³ and allows the tracking of voter participation.

¹ Throughout this report, unless otherwise specified, the term "state" can be understood to apply to the 50 U.S. states, the District of Columbia, and five U.S. territories (American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands) that submit Election Administration Policy Survey and EAVS data.

² North Dakota is the only state that does not require voter registration.

Congress passed the NVRA in 1993 to "establish procedures that will increase the number of eligible citizens who register to vote in elections for federal office." This act, commonly known as the "Motor Voter Law," requires that states offer the opportunity to register to vote at their motor vehicle licensing offices (known as the DMV in many states). The law also requires states to offer voter registration at offices that provide public assistance or state-funded programs that primarily engage in providing services to persons with disabilities, and at armed services recruitment offices. The NVRA also provides guidelines on registration list maintenance and sets limits on how voters can be removed from the rolls.⁵

The Help America Vote Act (HAVA) of 2002 charged the U.S. Election Assistance Commission (EAC) with collecting data on voter registration and list maintenance procedures. The EAC meets its statutory requirement to report to Congress on the impact of the NVRA via Section A of the EAVS. This chapter of the EAVS report not only fulfills this requirement, but also provides insight about the changes in the registration behaviors of Americans in federal general elections and about the changes in the state policies affecting the registration process.

Federal Laws Regulating Voter Registration

The National Voter Registration Act of 1993

The NVRA is the primary federal law governing voter registration in the United States. In this law, Congress provides a clear statement regarding the importance of voter registration:

- (1) the right of citizens of the United States to vote is a fundamental right;
- (2) it is the duty of the Federal, State, and local governments to promote the exercise of that right; and ³ What constitutes a jurisdiction for EAVS reporting is defined by how each state chose to provide data. For the 2020 EAVS, most states reported data on the county level (or county equivalent, such as parishes for Louisiana). Illinois, Maryland, Missouri, and Virginia reported data for independent cities in addition to counties. The territories, the District of Columbia, and Alaska each reported as a single jurisdiction. Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Wisconsin reported data on the township level. Maine also reported its UOCAVA data in Section B as a separate jurisdiction, because this information was only collected at the state level. Michigan reported data for the county level, but most election administration activities take place in the 1,520 local election jurisdictions in the state.

4 52 U.S.C. § 20501.

⁶ Before 2016, the EAC administered a separate survey called the NVRA Survey, which collected similar information. This survey was consolidated with the EAVS for the 2016 general election. Before the creation of the EAC, the NVRA Survey was administered by the Federal Election Commission.

(3) discriminatory and unfair registration laws and procedures can have a direct and damaging effect on voter participation in elections for Federal office and disproportionately harm voter participation by various groups, including racial minorities.⁷

The primary purposes of the NVRA are:

- (1) to establish procedures that will increase the number of eligible citizens who register to vote in elections for Federal office;
- (2) to make it possible for Federal, State, and local governments to implement this Act [NVRA] in a manner that enhances the participation of eligible citizens as voters in elections for Federal office;
- (3) to protect the integrity of the electoral process; and
- (4) to ensure that accurate and current voter registration rolls are maintained.8

The NVRA's first purpose is to expand opportunities for voters to register by creating more uniform processes for voter registration and designating more places and methods to register to vote. The NVRA requires that states allow multiple methods and places to register to vote, including (1) motor vehicle departments when a person obtains, renews, or updates the address on their driver's license; (2) through the mail, using a standard registration form; (3) at all state offices providing public assistance (e.g., the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program [SNAP]); (4) at all offices that provide state-funded programs focused on services to people with disabilities; (5) at armed forces recruitment offices; and (6) at other state designated offices such as public libraries and local government offices. All these offices are mandated under the NVRA to provide their users with information on voter registration and assistance in the registration process when required.

The NVRA was fully implemented after the 1994 general election. Several states are not covered by the NVRA. North Dakota is exempt because it does not have voter registration. The U.S. territories are also not subject to the NVRA, and the states of Idaho, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Wisconsin, and Wyoming are exempt because they had same-day registration (SDR) in 1994 and have continued to make this option available uninterrupted since that time.

The NVRA also sets some fundamental guidelines that states must follow. For example, states may set their own deadline for citizens to register to vote in a general election for federal offices, but that deadline can never be more than 30 days before the date of the election. The NVRA also sets the process that states need to follow to maintain their voter registration rolls and to conduct removal processes.

Help America Vote Act of 2002 (HAVA)

HAVA was enacted with the goal of updating the voting administration system in the United States and creating a commission to assist in the administration of federal elections. In addition to legislating the update of the administration process for federal elections in the United States, HAVA mandates that states create and maintain a "computerized statewide voter registration list" that serves as "the official voter registration list for the conduct of all elections for Federal office in the State." 10 The computerized registration list must be centralized and "defined, maintained and administered at the State level."11 However, although the registration list is administered at the state level, local election officials must be able to access the registration list and are required to enter any updated voter registration information in the computerized system. HAVA also specifies that the maintenance of the implemented computerized registration list will be carried out according to the NVRA's mandates and that duplicate names or registrations will be removed from the state's registration list.

State Voter Registration Policies

States have wide latitude on how to conduct their voter registration activities, as long as the state policies do not interfere with federal laws such as the NVRA and HAVA. This flexibility allows states to adapt their laws as they see appropriate to better serve the interests of their citizens. During the period between the 2018 and the 2020 general elections, a number of states changed their laws regarding voter registration, such as implementing online voter registration, allowing voters to register at the polls on Election Day, or implementing automatic registration. 12

These types of laws usually take years between when they are first proposed and when they are fully implemented. However, states can make short-term changes to their registration policies with the aim of addressing unforeseen circumstances. For example, the state of Massachusetts changed its registration deadline to allow its citizens an additional 10 days to register given the extraordinary circumstances caused by the COVID-19 pandemic.¹³ Additionally, some states briefly extended their registration deadlines due to issues with their online registration sites that made it impossible to register to vote in the hours before the end of the registration period-these issues were in some cases caused by an unprecedented volume of attempted visits.14

¹² These registration policies will be covered in more detail in the following section of this chapter. More information on state's voting and registration policies can be found in Chapter 2 of this report.

¹³ Elections Division of the Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. (2020, September 23). Important Elections Updates. https://www.sec.state.ma.us/ele/covid-19/covid-19.htm.

¹⁴ For example, Florida extended the deadline from October 5 to October 6, 2020, for a web malfunction before the deadline (https://dos.myflorida.com/communications/press-releases/2020/public-notice-secretary-of-state-laurel-m-leeprovides-update-about-voter-registration-in-florida/), and a federal court extended Virginia's registration deadline from October 13 to October 15, 2020, because of an accidentally severed fiber optic cable that disabled the Department of Elections' website hours before the registration deadline (https://www.elections.virginia.gov/news-releases/virginia-voterregistration-deadline-extended-by-federal-court.html).

The Registration Process

The typical voter registration process is depicted in Figure 1. Citizens in the United States can register to vote using different methods, some of them mandated by federal law and others offered at the discretion of the state. Once a registration form is completed and submitted, the state or local election office must confirm the eligibility of the applicant. Eligible applicants are added to the voter registration rolls and are notified of their registration status, whereas applicants who submitted ineligible or incomplete applications are contacted for further information to complete their applications.

Note: Figure 1 does not represent automatic registration, in which the voter does not submit a registration application.

Voter registration also serves to assign each voter to a precinct—a bounded geographic area to which voters are assigned according to their residential address as listed in their voter registration record—so that voters receive the correct ballot. The voter registration system tracks each voter's electoral participation so that an individual can be given credit for voting in an election, which helps ensure each person casts only one ballot per election.

Every person with a valid registration is considered an active, registered voter. However, at times, a question arises as to whether a person still resides at the address at which they are registered. The election official may receive notification via the U.S. Postal Service national change of address from the voter of a new resident address. In these situations, the state or local election office may send the registrant a confirmation of address notice. In many states, if the person fails to return the form or the form is returned to the election office as undeliverable, the person is placed on a list of inactive voters. Inactive voters are still part of the voter registration rolls and are included in the registration totals in most jurisdictions. ¹⁵ However, before they can vote, inactive voters are typically required to show approved documentation of their eligibility (most commonly, proof of living at an address within the voting jurisdiction). In some cases, inactive voters may be required to cast a provisional ballot when their eligibility cannot be established at the polls.

The NVRA also requires states to maintain their voter registration rolls by removing registrants who are no longer eligible to vote. For example, the NVRA provides that if a registrant fails to return a confirmation notice and does not vote in two subsequent federal general elections, the registrant can be removed from the voter registration roll of the jurisdiction that sent the confirmation notice. In addition, a registrant can be removed for other reasons such as death, upon the registrant's request, or due to a disqualifying criminal conviction or mental incompetence, as provided by a state's laws. This process is referred to as "list maintenance." When an individual is removed from the voter registration roll because of a change in residence of the voter under the NVRA process, this is called "address list maintenance." Election offices may share data with other state agencies or entities that maintain death records or felony and prison records for the purposes of identifying potentially ineligible voters. ¹⁶

How Americans Registered to Vote for the 2020 General Election

Between the close of registration for the 2018 general election and the close of registration for the 2020 general election, states and territories reported receiving a record 103,701,513 registration applications—26,184,917 more applications than were received in the same period leading up to the 2016 general election. The most used method of registration was the motor vehicle departments, which accounted for 39.3% of the total registrations received (39,705,812 registration applications). ¹⁸ Registration by mail accounted for 12.9%, in-person registration accounted for 8.3%, and online registration accounted for 28.2% of the total registration applications. ¹⁹ The rest of the registration applications that were received during this period were from sources such as registration drives (2.2%), public assistance offices (1.6%), and armed forces recruiting offices (0.1%) among other sources. ²⁰

¹⁵ According to the 2020 Policy Survey, six states (Guam, Idaho, North Dakota, New Hampshire, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Wyoming) reported that they do not distinguish between active and inactive voters in their registration records. In the survey comments in the EAVS, Oregon reported, "Do not track number of inactive voters," and Minnesota stated, "Minnesota is NVRA exempt. Minnesota does not classify voters as inactive per NVRA."

¹⁶ More information about state policies on voter registration database linkages is found in Chapter 2 of this report.

¹⁷ The total number of registration applications received during the two-year period leading to a federal general election was reported in item A3a in the 2020 EAVS and item A5a in the 2016 EAVS.

The primary sources of registration have remained fairly consistent throughout multiple elections. For instance, motor vehicle departments have been the most common source of voter registration for over a decade, accounting for more than 30% of the received registrations since at least 2006. Figure 2 shows that other sources for filing registration applications, such as in person at election offices, by mail/fax/email, and other means (e.g., public assistance offices, registration drives), were used at very similar rates as for the 2018 general election.

Online registration has been the second-most popular registration mode since 2016 and accounted for a proportionately larger share of registration applications for the 2020 general election. In 2020, online applications increased 12.1 percentage points compared to the registration period leading to ¹⁸ The percentage of registrations received by the motor vehicle department was calculated by dividing the number of registration applications received at motor vehicle departments (item A4d of the EAVS) by the total number of registration applications received (item A3a of the EAVS). American Samoa, Idaho, New Hampshire, North Dakota, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Wisconsin, and Wyoming were not included in the calculation because they did not report data on item A4d. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation. ¹⁹ The percentage of registrations received by mail, in person, and online used items A4a, A4b, and A4c of the EAVS respectively, and were divided by the total number of registration applications received (item A3a of the EAVS). Guam, North Dakota, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, and the U.S. Virgin Islands were not included in the calculation of the percentage of registrations received by mail because they did not report data on item A4a. North Dakota and Rhode Island were not included in the calculation of the percentage of registrations received in person because they did not report data on item A4b. American Samoa, Arkansas, Maine, Mississippi, Montana, New Hampshire, New York, North Dakota, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, South Dakota, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Wyoming were not included in the calculation of the percentage of registrations received online because they did not report data on item A4c. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations.

²⁰ The percentage of registrations received from registration drives, public assistance offices, and armed forces recruiting offices used items A4i, A4e, and A4g of the EAVS respectively, and were divided by the total number of registration applications received (item A3a of the EAVS). American Samoa, Georgia, Guam, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, the Northern Mariana Islands, Oklahoma, Oregon, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, the U.S. Virgin Islands, West Virginia, and Wyoming were not included in the calculation of the percentage of registrations received from registration drives because they did not report data on item A4i. American Samoa, Guam, Idaho, Maine, Minnesota, New Hampshire, North Dakota, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Vermont, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming were not included in the calculation of the percentage of registrations received at public assistance offices because they did not report data on item A4e. American Samoa, Guam, Hawaii, Idaho, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New York, North Dakota, the Northern Mariana Islands, Oregon, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Vermont, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming were not included in the calculation of the percentage of registrations received at armed forces recruiting offices because they did not report data on item A4g. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations. The instructions for this question noted that registration applications should be classified according to the mode used to submit it. For example, if the voter submits a registration form online using the state's online voter registration portal, this is considered an online voter registration. If the voter accessed the online voter registration system at a state public assistance office or at the office of an agency that primarily serves individuals with disabilities, this would also be considered an online registration.

the 2018 general election and was the registration source with the largest growth. Some of this growth in online registration applications could have been because of the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic, as many of the typical in-person modes of registration were restricted starting in March 2020. The percentages of registrations received at motor vehicle departments and in person at election offices saw small decreases from 2018 to 2020.

Another explanation for the growth in the use of online registration between 2018 and 2020 is that three states (Minnesota, New Jersey, and Oklahoma) began to offer online registration.²² This resulted in a total of 43 states that allowed voters to submit new registration applications online for the 2020 general election.²³ These registrations are typically reviewed electronically, and data from other state databases are used to verify a person's identity, address, and eligibility. Most of the states (81.4%) using online registration reported that applicants must have a driver's license issued by the state to register online.²⁴ Two more states (Mississippi and Texas) reported that they allow voters to update their registration records online, but voters may not submit new registration applications online.

States reported receiving 27,681,700 online registrations during the 2018–2020 registration period. Nineteen states reported receiving more than 30% of their registrations online in 2020 (see Table 2 of the Appendix). Among states that reported receiving online registrations in 2018 and 2020, only lowa and Connecticut reported a decrease in the percentage of their registrations received online (a 5.2- and 3.6-percentage-point decrease, respectively), and 26 states reported an increase of 10 percentage points or more. As in 2018, Massachusetts (67.4%) was the state with the highest percentage of online registrations. The first state to implement online registration, Arizona, also remained among the states with the highest levels of registrations received online (45.2%).

Same-Day Voter Registration

Same-day registration (SDR) allows voters to register to vote and cast their ballot on the same day. SDR can be offered on Election Day, in which case it may be referred to as Election Day registration, or it can be offered during in-person early voting.²⁸ SDR depends on local laws and, thus, is only allowed in some states and territories. Some states reported allowing SDR in narrow circumstances, such as only for particular elections (e.g., Alaska and Rhode Island reported only allowing SDR for voting for the U.S. President and Vice President) or particular cases (e.g., North Carolina reported

²² Information was collected from responses to items Q7 in the 2020 Policy Survey and Q6 in the 2018 Policy Survey. The states of Minnesota, New Jersey, and Oklahoma reported using online registration for the 2020 general election, but not in 2018. Mississippi and Texas reported offering an online option only to update registrations and did not report any online registration in item A4c of the EAVS.

²³ More information about state policies on online registration is found in Chapter 2 of this report.

²⁵ The total number of online registration applications received during the two-year period leading to a federal general election was reported in item A4c in the 2020 EAVS.

²⁶ The percentage of registrations received online in 2020 used item A4c of the 2020 EAVS divided by the total number of registration applications received (item A3a of the 2020 EAVS). The calculation of online registrations received in 2018 used the same item number from the 2018 EAVS data set. The comparison subtracted the percentage of registrations received online in 2020 from the percentage of registrations received online in 2018 to obtain the percentage point difference. Texas was not included among the states that received online registrations in 2018 and 2020, because they reported zero as the response for A4c in all of the counties.

²⁸ Some states may have an overlap between their mail voting period and the close of their voter registration, during which it is possible for a person to register on the same day that they cast a mailed ballot; however, this is not considered SDR for purposes of the EAVS, and many states have noted in the past that it is not possible to track the number of mail voters who register to vote on the same day that they cast their mailed ballot.

allowing SDR to citizens who became eligible to vote due to naturalization or who had their voting rights restored after a conviction or felony and only if they became eligible between the close of books and Election Day).

In 2020, 29 states reported allowing some form of SDR. Twenty-one states reported allowing voters to register to vote on Election Day. Twelve states reported allowing SDR during an overlap between the start of early voting and the close of voter registration, 20 states reported allowing for SDR during in-person early voting, and four states reported allowing for SDR in very specific cases.²⁹ The states that indicated allowing SDR were mostly the same as in 2018, with the exception of South Carolina, which allowed SDR for the 2018 general election but not in 2020, and American Samoa, Massachusetts, Michigan, and Nevada, which did not allow for SDR in 2018 but did for the 2020 general election.30

The total number of SDRs recorded in 2020 was 1,634,346 and accounted for 3.5% of the total registrations received among states allowing for SDR.31 For the first time, the 2020 EAVS asked states to break down SDRs between those that were received before and on Election Day. Election Day SDRs added up to 934,238, and early voting SDRs summed to 665,108 registrations.³² There was a wide variability in how the two types of SDRs were distributed among states that reported both, with Election Day SDRs accounting for between 5.9% and 100% of the total SDRs that states reported.33

The use of SDR varied considerably, and similar to previous elections, the five NVRA-exempt states which gained NVRA exemption for allowing SDR continuously since 1994³⁴—were among the states where SDR accounted for the largest percentages of registration applications. In Wyoming, 55.6% of the registration applications were SDR, followed by Idaho with 40.7% and Wisconsin with 30.4%.35 The NVRA states where SDR accounted for the largest portions of their registration applications received were Vermont (24.4%) and Maine (24%). However, for most of the NVRA states, SDR accounted for less than 5% of registration applications.

²⁹ These results were obtained from item O9a of the 2020 Policy Survey. More information about state policies on SDR is found in Chapter 2 of this report.

³⁰ These results were obtained from item 09 of the 2020 Policy Survey and item 07 of the 2018 Policy Survey.

³² The total number of Election Day SDRs was reported in item A2b in the 2020 EAVS, and the total number of early voting SDRs was reported in item A2c in the 2020 EAVS. The sum of Election Day SDRs and early voting SDRs does not add up to the total SDRs reported because some states either did not break down SDR by type (Alaska) or their submissions in A2b and A2c did not sum to A2a (California, Illinois, and Utah).

³³ The percentage of SDRs that were Election Day SDRs was calculated by dividing the number of Election Day SDR applications received (item A2b of the EAVS) by the total number of SDR applications received (item A2a of the EAVS). 34 North Dakota is also NVRA exempt because it does not require voter registration, and the U.S. territories are also NVRA exempt.

³⁵ The percentage of registration applications that were SDRs was calculated by dividing the number of SDR applications received (item A2a of the EAVS) by the total number of registration applications received (item A3a of EAVS).

Automatic Voter Registration

Beginning in 2016, states started implementing laws allowing for automatic voter registration (AVR). These laws allow for non-registered persons to be added to the voter registration rolls during or after an interaction with a designated state agency, such as the motor vehicle department, unless the person specifically declines to be registered. The most common differences between the types of AVR policies were the point at which the individual must decline or "opt out" of being registered—either at the point of service or at a later time through a mailer sent to the individual—and which state agencies participate in the AVR program.

In 2016, Oregon was the first state to implement AVR at the state level. Since then, 23 states have also started using some form of AVR.³⁶ For the most part, states reported that individuals must opt out of AVR at the point of service. A very common example is that a person is provided the opportunity to register to vote while completing a transaction at their local motor vehicle department and is asked to provide a response of "yes" or "no" to be able to continue with the voter registration transaction. Only the states of Colorado and Oregon reported not asking individuals during their transactions and later requiring that they actively respond to a mailer if they do not want to be included in the voter registration rolls.³⁷ All states that reported allowing AVR did so at least through the state's motor vehicle department, with nine states reporting additional agencies (e.g., agencies for people with disabilities, public assistance offices) participating in the AVR program in their state.³⁸

The EAVS does not include any questions about the number of AVRs processed by states. However, the EAVS data show an increase in registrations submitted through motor vehicle departments (which data from the 2020 Policy Survey show is the most common state agency that processes AVRs) between 2016 and 2020. Although the increase of 14.3 million voter registrations processed through the motor vehicle department in this time span is likely the result of multiple factors, AVR may be one of them.³⁹ When comparing the change in motor vehicle department registrations recorded between 2016 and 2020 among states with and without AVR, states with AVR reported an increase of 80% in the number of registrations received at the motor vehicle department, whereas states without AVR reported a 10.1% increase.⁴⁰ These increases may be, in part, driven by the fact that there was a 33.8% increase in the total number of registrations received between 2016 and

124 | Voter Registration: The NVRA and Beyond

³⁶ The number of states with AVR was obtained through item Q6 in the Policy Survey. More information about states with AVR is found in Chapter 2 of this report.

³⁷ Information on the point at which the individual has the opportunity to opt out of AVR was obtained through item Q6b in the Policy Survey.

³⁸ Information on state agencies participating in the AVR program for each state was obtained through item Q6a in the Policy Survey.

³⁹ Total registrations received at motor vehicle departments was obtained through items A4d in the 2020 EAVS and A6d in the 2016 EAVS.

⁴⁰ The percentage change in total number of registrations received at the motor vehicle department between 2016 and 2020 was calculated by dividing the number of registration applications received at the motor vehicle department in 2020 (item A4d of the 2020 EAVS) by the number of registration applications received at the motor vehicle department in 2016 (item A6d of the 2016 EAVS) for states that did and did not allow for AVR as reported in item Q6 of the Policy Survey. Classification of states as having AVR and not having AVR used item Q6 of the 2020 Policy Survey. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

2020.⁴¹ However, the trend of AVR states having an increase in motor vehicle department registration holds when comparing the percentage of registration applications received through motor vehicle departments in states with and without AVR for the 2016 and 2020 elections. Figure 3 shows that among states without AVR, motor vehicle department registrations accounted for a similar portion of the total registrations in 2016 and 2020. There has been a notable increase among the states that have implemented AVR in recent years.

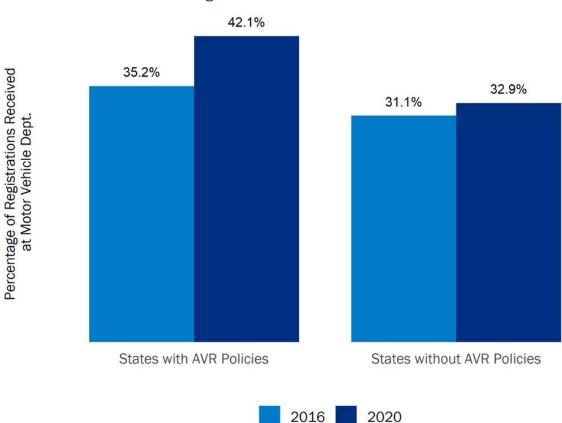

Figure 3. Motor Vehicle Department Registrations Accounted for a Larger Portion of Total Registrations Received in AVR States

Source: The percentage of registrations received at motor vehicle departments was calculated as A4d/A3a \times 100 for the 2020 EAVS and A6d/A5a \times 100 for the 2016 EAVS. Classification of states as having AVR and not having AVR used item Q6 of the 2020 Policy Survey. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

Alaska is the only state that reported AVRs as a separate category in its EAVS data, as this state processes most of its AVRs through the Permanent Fund Dividend program. Alaska reported in its survey comments that in 2016, the state approved a ballot initiative requiring AVR through the Permanent Fund Dividend. Since the implementation of the initiative, the total number of registration applications that the state reported receiving increased from 259,227 in 2016 to 1,079,008 in 2020.⁴² AVRs through the Permanent Fund Dividend program accounted for 68.1% of Alaska's total registrations in 2020 and 59.8% in 2018.⁴³

⁴¹ The percentage change in the total number of registrations received between 2016 and 2020 was calculated by dividing the number of registration applications received in 2020 (item A3a of the 2020 EAVS) by the number of registration applications received in 2016 (item A5a of the 2016 EAVS). North Dakota was not included in this calculation because it does not have voter registration. American Samoa and the Northern Mariana Islands were not included in this calculation because they did not complete the 2016 EAVS. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

Other Modes of Registration

In addition to in-person, online, mail/fax/email, and motor vehicle department registrations, states reported data on registration applications received from other sources, which in 2020 accounted for 12.9% of the applications received at the national level.⁴⁴ Some of these modes of registration are NVRA mandated, such as registrations through armed forces recruitment offices, public assistance offices, and state-funded agencies serving persons with disabilities. These NVRA-mandated modes of registration accounted for 1.8% of the national registrations in 2020.⁴⁵ States also reported registrations completed through other modes that are not required by the NVRA and that are authorized at the discretion of the state, such as at registration drives (2.2%) and other agencies required by the state (3%).⁴⁶

Voter Registration Rates for the 2020 General Election

The NVRA requires each state to report its total number of registered and eligible, active, and inactive registrants for each federal general election. ⁴⁷ Most states reported the total "registered and eligible" voters as the sum of active and inactive registrants. However, data on registered and eligible voters as reported in the EAVS should be used with caution, as these totals can include registrants who were no longer eligible to vote in that state but who had not been removed from the voter registration rolls because the removal process from the inactive list laid out by the NVRA can take up to two election cycles to be completed. ⁴⁸ In addition, preliminary data from the 2020 U.S.

⁴² The number of total registrations received was obtained from item A3a in the 2020 EAVS and from item A5a in the 2016 EAVS.

⁴⁴ The percentage of registrations received by other sources different than in person, online, mail/fax/email, and the motor vehicle department was calculated as (A4e+A4f+A4g+A4h+A4i+A4j+A4k+A4l)/A3a x 100 for the 2020 EAVS. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in these calculations.

⁴⁵ The percentage of registrations received from NVRA-mandated sources different than in person, mail/fax/email, and the motor vehicle department was calculated as (A4e+A4f+A4g)/A3a x 100 for the 2020 EAVS. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in these calculations.

⁴⁶ The percentage of registrations received from registration drives and from state agencies not mandated by the NVRA used items A4i and A4h of the 2020 EAVS, respectively, and were divided by the total number of registration applications received (item A3a of the EAVS). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations.

⁴⁷ Twelve states (American Samoa, Guam, Idaho, Minnesota, New Hampshire, the Northern Mariana Islands, Ohio, Oregon, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Wisconsin, and Wyoming) reported only active registrants. North Dakota does not have voter registration and, thus, did not have any data to report.

⁴⁸ California, Florida, Kansas, and New York reported more "registered and eligible" voters in their state than the sum of the active and inactive registrants, resulting in 13,704; 13,384; 11,199; and 776 uncategorized registrants, respectively. New Hampshire reported zero registrations in 18 of its 320 jurisdictions. Two jurisdictions in Wisconsin reported zero registrations because they changed their status from town to village and/or merged with other jurisdictions where they reported the corresponding registration data. Kalawao County in Hawaii reported zero registrations because Maui County administers Kalawao County's elections.

Census show that the U.S. population increased by more than 20 million people since the 2010 Census, resulting in a change of apportionment for congressional seats in 13 states;⁴⁹ this population increase and mobility may be a contributing factor to the increase of records that states reported having on their voter registration rolls for the 2020 general election.

For the 2020 general election, states reported that 228,004,364 citizens were registered to vote, either as active or inactive voters.⁵⁰ This represents a 6.5% increase compared to the number of people who were registered to vote for the 2016 general election.⁵¹ Nationally, 91.9% of all registrants were designated as active, and 9.1% of registrants were designated as inactive.⁵² In 2020, the total number of active registrants exceeded the 200 million mark for the first time in EAVS history and accounted for 88.2% of the 2019 citizen voting age population (CVAP).⁵³ The number of active registrants in 2020 increased 8.3% compared to what states reported for the 2016 EAVS. In 2020, the majority of states reported active registration rates of 80% or more of their 2019 CVAP (see Table 1 in Appendix A of this chapter).⁵⁴ Compared to the active registration rates in 2016, 82% of the states reported a higher active registration rate in 2020.⁵⁵

⁵⁰ The total number of registered voters was obtained from item A1a in the 2020 EAVS.

⁵² The percentage of active and inactive registrants used items A1b and A1c, respectively, of the 2020 EAVS and divided these items by the total number of registered voters (item A1a of the EAVS). North Dakota was not included in these calculations because it does not have voter registration. Guam, Idaho, Minnesota, New Hampshire, the Northern Mariana Islands, Ohio, Oregon, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Wisconsin, and Wyoming were not included in the percentage of inactive voters because they did not provide data about inactive voters in item A1c of the 2020 EAVS. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations. The percentages of active and inactive registrants do not add to 100 because of the use of state casewise deletion to calculate percentages at the national level, as discussed in Chapter 5. 53 The total number of active registrants was obtained from item A1b in the 2020 EAVS. The active CVAP voter registration rate was calculated by dividing the number of active registrants (item A1b in the 2020 EAVS) by the estimated CVAP provided by the U.S. Census Bureau. North Dakota was not included in the calculation because it does not have voter registration. American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands were not included in the calculation because there is no CVAP information from the Census Bureau for these territories. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in these calculations. This report uses the 1-year American Community Survey (ACS) state CVAP estimate for 2019 instead of the 5-year estimate to ensure that the CVAP is as current as possible. The CVAP estimates for 2020 were not available by the time this report was finalized. In calculating the percentage change in the total number of active registrants from the 2016 EAVS to the 2020 EAVS, casewise deletion has been used at the state level. 54 The percentage of active CVAP voter registration was calculated by dividing the total active registrants (item A1b in the 2020 EAVS) by the total CVAP.

⁵⁵ The percentage of active CVAP voter registration change was calculated as the 2020 percentage of active CVAP voter registration ([A1b/CVAP] x 100) for the 2020 EAVS divided by the 2016 percentage of active CVAP voter registration ([A3a/CVAP] x 100) for the 2016 EAVS. One unit was subtracted from the result of the division, and the result was multiplied by 100 to obtain the percentage change. North Dakota was not included because it does not have voter registration. Pennsylvania was not included because it did not report total active registrants in 2016, as the state commented that it could not "differentiate between active and inactive from our point in time snapshot of the voter registration numbers." The U.S. territories of American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands were not included because the U.S. Census Bureau does not provide an estimate for their CVAP.

Calculating Registration Rates

Estimating the percentage of the population that is registered to vote for an election can be approached in different ways using a variety of metrics. There are multiple potential numerators and denominators that can be used.

Registration Rate Numerator:

- Total Registrants. The number of people that states reported as being registered and eligible to vote (A1a in the EAVS). This total includes active and inactive registrants. This metric overrepresents of the actual number of registrants within a state, since some of the people included (particularly inactive registrants) may not be eligible to vote in that jurisdiction.
- Active Registrants. The number of people that states reported as being eligible to cast a ballot without the need to provide additional eligibility evidence at the polls (A1b in the EAVS). This total excludes inactive registrants.

Registration Rate Denominator:

- Voting Age Population (VAP). The estimate of the number of persons ages 18 or older provided by the Census Bureau.
- Citizen Voting Age Population (CVAP). The estimate of the number of American citizens ages 18 or older provided by the Census Bureau. This estimate is more accurate than the VAP in that it restricts the inclusion criteria to being a U.S. citizen, which is mandatory to vote.
- Voting Eligible Population (VEP). The estimate created by subtracting from the CVAP the citizens that are ineligible to vote (e.g., persons with disqualifying felony convictions) and persons who are in the military or citizens living overseas. This estimate is provided by the U.S. Elections Project and is available at the state level but not at the jurisdiction level like the VAP and the CVAP estimates.

The combination of active registrants and the CVAP to calculate the registration rate in the EAVS provides a higher level of accuracy than using the total registrations and/or the VAP to calculate the rate at the jurisdiction level when needed, as opposed to the use of the VEP. This calculation, however, has some limitations, such as the potential overrepresentation of total registrants in the active registrant list due to the challenges for states to keep voter registration rolls fully up to date. When analyzing EAVS data, the EAC recommends using the following method to calculate voter registration rates:

$$\frac{A1b \ of \ EAVS}{CVAP} \times 100 = Active \ CVAP \ Voter \ Registration \ Rate$$

See Chapter 2 of this report for a discussion of state policies on voter registration list maintenance.

There was a 3.6-percentage-point increase in the active registration rates at the national level (from 84.6% in 2016 to 88.2% in 2020). ⁵⁶ At the state level, Georgia and Texas reported the largest increases in active registration rates between 2016 and 2020 (24.5% and 18.8%, respectively), and New York and Puerto Rico reported the largest drops in active registration rates (24.3% and 14.4%, respectively).⁵⁷ Figure 4 shows the change in the active CVAP voter registration rate among states from the 2016 general election to the 2020 general election.

⁵⁶ The percentage of active CVAP voter registration for 2020 was calculated as the total active voters (A1b in the 2020 EAVS) divided by the 2019 CVAP. The percentage of active CVAP voter registration for 2016 was calculated as the total active voters (A3a in the 2016 EAVS) divided by the 2015 CVAP. The percentage point change between the 2016 and 2020 active CVAP voter registration rates was calculated by subtracting the 2015 active CVAP voter registration percentage from the 2019 active CVAP voter registration percentage.

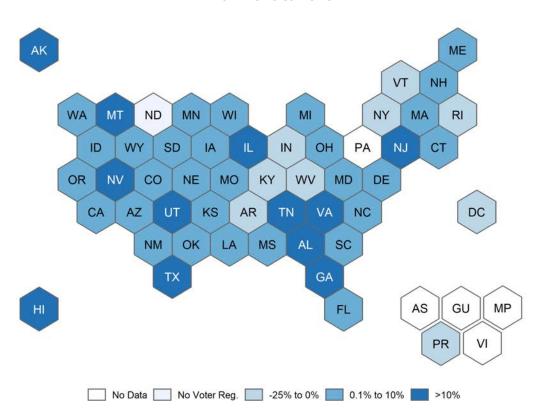

Figure 4. Most States Had an Increase in the Active CVAP Voter Registration Rate From 2016 to 2020

Source: The percentage of active CVAP voter registration change was calculated as the 2020 percentage of active CVAP voter registration ($[A1b/CVAP] \times 100$) for the 2020 EAVS divided by the 2016 percentage of active CVAP voter registration ($[A3a/CVAP] \times 100$) for the 2016 EAVS. One unit was subtracted from the result of the division, and the result was multiplied by 100 to obtain the percentage change. North Dakota does not have a change rate because it does not have voter registration. Pennsylvania does not have a change rate, because it did not report total active registrants in 2016, as the state commented that they could not "differentiate between active and inactive from our point in time snapshot of the voter registration numbers." The U.S. territories of American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands do not have a change rate because the U.S. Census Bureau does not provide an estimate for their CVAP. Cutoff points in the graph were selected to reflect states that decreased, that slightly increased, and that notably increased in terms of the active CVAP registration rate from 2016 to 2020.

⁵⁷ New York reported an uncharacteristically high number of active and total registrations in the 2016 EAVS compared to the registrations reported in the general elections of 2014, 2018, and 2020, which led to the drop in active registrants noted in the 2020 EAVS. The percentage of active CVAP voter registration was calculated by dividing the total active registrants (item A1b in the 2020 EAVS) by the total CVAP.

Types of Registrations Received for the 2020 General Election

When a person submits a registration form, it is processed by the state and can reach one of several outcomes. Valid applications from persons who are eligible and not already registered are considered new applications and are added to the voter registration rolls. Applications submitted by persons already registered to vote at the same address with the same name and personal information are considered duplicates. Applications from already-registered persons wishing to change their name, party affiliation, or address are processed as updates to existing registrations. Applications that do not meet the requirements of eligibility are considered invalid or rejected. When allowed by state law, applications submitted by persons under 18 years old are processed as preregistrations so that they will be registered when they become of voting age.

All registration forms received are processed and scrutinized by election officials to ensure that the information is correct, that only eligible voters are added to the registration rolls, and that duplicate registration records are not created. After the application's review by election officials and following the NVRA's guidelines, states must notify the applicant with the result of their application. For example, a successful application may be notified in the form of a registration card mailed to the applicant or a notice of rejection may be mailed to unsuccessful applicants.

Valid Registrations

Table 1 displays information on the result of the registration applications that were received by states. Of the more than 100 million registration applications received between the 2018 and the 2020 federal general elections, the most common type of registration was an update to an existing record that did not involve a cross-jurisdiction change of address.⁵⁸ These updates usually involve a change of name (such as after a marriage or divorce), party affiliation, or within-jurisdiction change of address; these updates accounted for 49.4% of the registrations processed at the national level.⁵⁹ New valid registrations—a registration application received from an eligible person in a jurisdiction where they were not previously registered and that resulted in a new registration record being added to the voter registration roll—made up 32.2% of the registrations received.⁶⁰

Other types of valid registrations reported in the EAVS included a change of address that crossed local jurisdiction borders but was still within the state, which accounted for 9.5% of the total registration applications filed.⁶¹ Some states reported allowing for underage citizens to preregister to vote so that they are automatically added to the voter registration rolls when they turn 18 years old.

⁵⁸ The number of total registration applications was reported in item A3a of the EAVS. The number of registration applications that were a change of name, party, or within-jurisdiction change of address was reported in item A3f of the EAVS.

⁶⁰ The percentage of registration applications that were a new registration was calculated by dividing the number of such registration applications received (item A3b of the EAVS) by the total number of registration applications received (item A3a of the EAVS). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

⁶¹ The percentage of registration applications that were a cross-jurisdiction change of address was calculated by dividing the number of such registration applications received (item A3g of the EAVS) by the total number of registration applications received (item A3a of the EAVS). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

These preregistrations accounted for 1.2% of the total registrations among states that allowed them. 62 Finally, 14.7% of the registrations were labelled as "Other." This category in the EAVS is used by states to report registrations that were not covered among the standard categories, or in most cases, to report registrations that could not be broken down into the categories provided, such as a change to existing records that some jurisdictions could not determine whether it involved a within or cross-jurisdictional change of address. 63

Table 1. Most Registration Applications Were New Applications or Within-Jurisdiction Changes

Type of Registration Form Received	Percentage of Total Registration Forms Received
Change of name, party, or address (within jurisdiction)	49.4%
New valid registrations	32.2%
Other	14.7%
Duplicate registrations	9.7%
Cross-jurisdiction change of address	9.5%
Invalid or rejected	2.9%
Preregistrations from persons under 18 years of age	1.2%

Source: The percentage of registrations received that were a change of name, party, or within-jurisdiction change of address received was calculated as $(A3f/A3a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations received that were a new valid registration was calculated as $(A3b/A3a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations received that were a duplicate registration was calculated as $(A3d/A3a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations received that were a cross-jurisdiction change of address was calculated as $(A3g/A3a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations received that were labelled as "Other" registrations was calculated as $((A3h+A3i+A3j)/A3a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations received that were invalid or a rejected registration was calculated as $(A3e/A3a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations received that were a preregistration of persons under 18 years of age was calculated as $(A3c/A3a) \times 100$. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in these calculations (percentages for each type of registration were calculated independently and only states that reported data for a given type were included in the analysis), and because of this, percentages do not sum to 100%.

Rejected and Duplicate Registrations

Some of the registration forms received by states do not result in the creation or the update of a registration record. The two types of invalid registration applications that the EAVS collects data on are rejected applications and duplicate applications. The first group includes applications that contain incorrect information, information that cannot be validated against existing state records, or applications from persons who do not meet eligibility requirements. In the period between the close 62 The percentage of registration applications that were a preregistration of persons under 18 years of age was calculated by dividing the number of such registration applications received (item A3c of the EAVS) by the total number of registration applications received (item A3a of the EAVS). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

 63 The percentage of registration applications that were categorized as "other" was calculated by dividing the total number of such registration applications received (sum of items A3h, A3i, and A3j of the EAVS) by the total number of registration of the percentage of registration applications that were categorized as other was calculated by dividing the total number of such registration applications received (sum of items A3h, A3i, and A3j of the EAVS) by the total number of registration applications received (item A3a of the EAVS). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation. Not all the applications accounted for in the "other" category may be valid; however, they were included in this section because they cannot be fully identified as rejected or duplicate either.

of registration for the 2018 general election and the close of registration for the 2020 general election, states reported rejecting 2,840,590 applications, accounting for 2.9% of the total registration applications received. This percentage is comparable to the percentage of registrations that were rejected in 2018 (3.4%) and 2016 (3.2%).⁶⁴

Duplicate registrations include applications that are exact matches to existing registration records; these can be applications submitted by persons who did not realize they were already registered to vote or who submitted multiple applications through different modes (e.g., submitted an application with the exact same information through the mail and online). States reported receiving 8,827,089 duplicate applications between the 2018 and the 2020 federal general elections, which accounted for 9.7% of the total registrations received.⁶⁵ As with rejected applications, the percentage of duplicate registrations registered in 2020 was comparable to those in 2018 (10.2%) and 2016 (7.9%).⁶⁶

A majority of states provided a breakdown of the total, rejected, and duplicate registrations they received and the source of those registrations (e.g., mail, in person). As expected, most registration sources had rejection and duplicate percentages that were similar to the national averages; however, there were a few outliers. For duplicate registrations, the overall percentage at the national level was 9.7%, and most sources reported duplicate percentages similar to the national level, ranging from 5.3% to 13.3%. However, there were exceptions, such as state-designated offices not mandated by the NVRA, that reported lower levels of duplicate registrations (3%). At the other side of the spectrum, registrations received by mail, fax, or email had notably higher levels of duplicate registrations received (19.1%) compared to the national average.

⁶⁴ The number of total registration application rejections was obtained from item A3e of the EAVS. The percentage of registrations received that were invalid or rejected registrations in 2020 was calculated as the total applications rejected in 2020 (item A3e in the 2020 EAVS) divided by the total registration applications received (item A3a in the 2020 EAVS). The percentage of registrations received that were invalid or rejected registrations in 2018 was calculated as the total applications rejected in 2018 (item A3e in the 2018 EAVS) divided by the total registration applications received (item A3a in the 2018 EAVS). The percentage of registrations received that were invalid or rejected registrations in 2016 was calculated as the total applications rejected in 2016 (item A5e in the 2016 EAVS) divided by the total registration applications received (item A5a in the 2016 EAVS). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.
⁶⁵ The number of total duplicate registration applications was obtained from item A3d of the EAVS. The percentage of registrations received that were duplicate registrations in 2020 was calculated as the total duplicate applications in 2020 (item A3d in the 2020 EAVS) divided by the total registration applications received (item A3a in the 2020 EAVS). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

⁶⁷ Thirteen states did not provide the application source breakdown for duplicate registrations, and 14 states did not provide the application source breakdown for rejected registrations. Data from these states were not included in the ensuing calculations in the paragraph.

 $^{^{68}}$ The percentage of registration applications received from a source and categorized as duplicate was calculated as follows for each registration source included in the range: in person = $(A6b/A4b) \times 100$; online = $(A6c/A4c) \times 100$; motor vehicle department = $(A6d/A4d) \times 100$; public assistance offices = $(A6e/A4e) \times 100$; state-funded agencies serving persons with disabilities = $(A6f/A4f) \times 100$; armed forces recruitment offices = $(A6g/A4g) \times 100$; registration drives = $(A6i/A4i) \times 100$; Other = $((A6j+A6k+A6l)/(A4j+A4k+A4l)) \times 100$. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

 $^{^{69}}$ The percentage of registration applications that were duplicates was calculated as follows for each registration source mentioned: state-designated offices not mandated by the NVRA = (A6h/A4h) x 100; mail/fax/email = (A6a/A4a) x 100. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

represented 2.9% of registrations at the national level, and most sources reported a rejection percentage close to that, ranging from 1.7% to 4.2% of registrations rejected, 70 except for registration drives (10.1%), and NVRA-mandated public assistance offices (9.1%) that had notably higher levels of applications classified as rejected or invalid. 71

Registration List Maintenance

The NVRA requires states to maintain an "accurate and current voter registration roll" to "protect the integrity of the electoral process." To facilitate this maintenance, the NVRA requires that any change of address submitted to a motor vehicle department must serve as notification of a change of address for voter registration, unless the individual indicates that the change is not for voter registration purposes. The law also requires states and territories to conduct a uniform and nondiscriminatory general program to remove the records of ineligible voters. States and territories have considerable freedom to choose when, where, and how these functions are performed, but must follow the guidelines listed in the NVRA, which describe the need to use confirmation notices and to complete (with few exceptions) systematic removal programs "not later than 90 days prior to the date of a primary or general election for Federal office," 3 as well as to keep a detailed list of instances in which it is appropriate to remove a record from the voter registration rolls.

Confirmation Notices

One tool that states may use to keep their voter registration rolls up to date are confirmation notices. These are postage pre-paid and pre-addressed return cards that are sent to registrants who a state suspects are no longer eligible to vote in the jurisdiction in which they are registered. If the registrant does not return the confirmation notice, they can be added to the inactive registrant list and would be asked to provide proof of residence before voting. If the registrant fails to return the confirmation notice and does not participate in the subsequent two consecutive federal elections, then the NVRA grants the state the ability to remove the registrant from the voter registration roll. If the registrant has not moved out of the voting jurisdiction, they must complete and return the confirmation notice no later than the registration deadline of the next election to remain on the list of active registrants.

 $^{^{70}}$ The percentage of registration applications received from a source and categorized as invalid or rejected was calculated as follows for each registration source included in the range: mail/fax/email = $(A7a/A4a) \times 100$; in person = $(A7b/A4b) \times 100$; online = $(A7c/A4c) \times 100$; motor vehicle department = $(A7d/A4d) \times 100$; state-funded agencies serving persons with disabilities = $(A7f/A4f) \times 100$; armed forces recruitment offices = $(A7g/A4g) \times 100$; state-designated offices not mandated by the NVRA = $(A7h/A4h) \times 100$; and Other = $((A7j+A7k+A7l)/(A4j+A4k+A4l) \times 100$. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

 $^{^{71}}$ The percentage of registration applications received from a source and categorized as invalid or rejected was calculated as follows for each registration source mentioned: registration drives = $(A7i/A4i) \times 100$; public assistance offices = $(A7e/A4e) \times 100$. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

Figure 5. Almost Two-Thirds of Confirmation Notices That Were Sent Had an Unknown Status

Source: Status unknown (A8e) refers to any notice that was sent to a voter but was not received back confirming registration, confirming invalidation, or returned as undeliverable. This percentage was calculated as $(A8e/A8a) \times 100$. The percentage of confirmation notices sent and returned confirming valid registration was calculated as $(A8b/A8a) \times 100$. The percentage of confirmation notices sent and returned undeliverable was calculated as $(A8d/A8a) \times 100$. The percentage of confirmation notices sent and returned confirming registration should be invalidated was calculated as $(A8c/A8a) \times 100$. The percentage of confirmation notices sent and not categorized was calculated as $(1 - ((A8b+A8c+A8d+A8e+A8f+A8g+A8h)/A8a)) \times 100$. The percentage of confirmation notices sent and labeled as other was calculated as $((A8b+A8c+A8d+A8e+A8f+A8g+A8h)/A8a) \times 100$. Casewise deletion was used at the state level (percentages for each category were calculated independently and only states that reported data for a given category were included in the analysis), and because of this, percentages do not sum to 100%.

Nationally, 28,010,094 confirmation notices were sent between the 2018 general election and the month before the 2020 general election, accounting for 14.3% of the active voters reported by states in 2020.⁷⁴ This percentage is slightly higher than what was reported by states in 2018

⁷⁴ The total number of confirmation notices sent was reported in item A8a of the EAVS. The number of confirmation notices sent as a percentage of the active registrants was calculated using total confirmation notices sent (item A8a of the EAVS) divided by total active registrants (A1b of the EAVS). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation. In 2020, 49 states and territories reported the number of confirmation notices sent during the period of registration for the 2020 general election. North Dakota does not require citizens to register to vote and, thus, does not use confirmation notices. Minnesota, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Wyoming are NVRA exempt. Alabama reported that they did "not have a report that has the total number of confirmation notices sent." Indiana did not provide this information

(11.6%) and in 2016 (10.9%).⁷⁵ Figure 5 shows that confirmation notices with an unknown status accounted for 65.8% of the total. The unknown status notices generally included confirmation notices that were sent and never returned to the jurisdiction—allowing states to move the addressees of these notices to the inactive registration list if the state uses that designation. States reported 12.1% of confirmation notices were returned confirming the voter's continued eligibility, and 8.1% were returned confirming the voter was no longer eligible to vote in the jurisdiction or no longer wanted to be registered to vote.

Removing Voters From Voter Registration Rolls

The NVRA mandates that registrants may only be removed from the voter registration rolls in these circumstances:

- Upon the death of the registrant;
- Upon the registrant's written confirmation that their address has changed to a location outside the registrar's jurisdiction;
- On the request of the registrant;
- For mental incapacity of the registrant, as provided in state law;
- On criminal conviction of the registrant, as provided in state law; or
- On the registrant's failure to respond to certain confirmation mailings along with failure to appear to vote in two consecutive federal general elections subsequent to the mailing.

Because some of the states' processes to remove a registrant from the voter registration rolls can take up to two federal general election cycles to complete, it is inevitable that voter registration rolls will contain some number of voter records for individuals who are no longer eligible to vote.

Between the close of registration for the 2018 general election and the close of registration for the 2020 general election, states reported removing 18,781,054 records from their voter registration rolls. ⁷⁶ This was equal to 8.2% of the total number of voters who were registered in the United States as of the close of registration for the 2020 general election. ⁷⁷ Almost two-thirds of the states and territories reported removing a number of registrants that added up to between 3% and 10% of their total registered voters. There were some exceptions to this trend: Connecticut's removals accounted because it "does not send the removal notices referenced by the EAC survey." Forty-four states reported the status of the confirmation notices sent. In addition to the states that did not report on confirmation notices, Delaware, Kentucky, Louisiana, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island did not break down the number of confirmation notices sent by status.

The number of confirmation notices sent as a percentage of the active registrants in 2018 was calculated using total confirmation notices sent (item A8a of the 2018 EAVS) divided by total active registrants (A1b of the 2018 EAVS). The number of confirmation notices sent as a percentage of the active registrants in 2016 was calculated using total confirmation notices sent (item A10a of the 2016 EAVS) divided by total active registrants (A3a of the 2016 EAVS). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

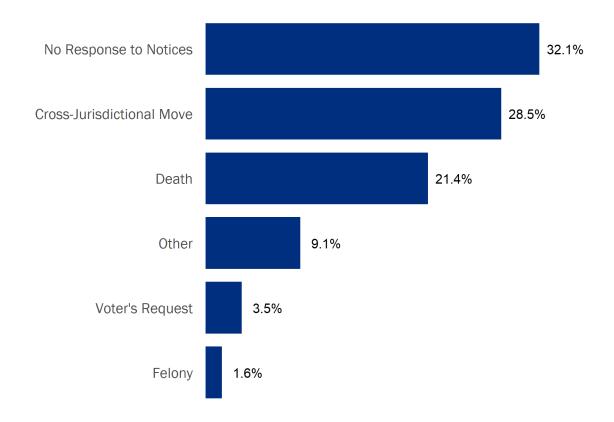

⁷⁶ The total number of registrants removed from the voter registration rolls was reported in item A9a of the EAVS. All states and territories reported data for the items related to voter removal, except for North Dakota, which does not require citizens to register to vote.

⁷⁷ The number of registrants removed as a percentage of total registrants was calculated using total registrants removed from the voter registration rolls (item A9a of the EAVS) divided by total registrants (A1a of the EAVS). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

for the lowest percentage of total registrants at 2.1%, and Puerto Rico reported the highest percentage of removals at 32.3% (see Table 5 of Appendix A in this chapter).

States also reported the reasons for removing records from their voter registration rolls. These reasons for removal are shown in Figure 6. The most common reason was failure to both respond to a confirmation notice and to vote in two consecutive federal general elections, which accounted for 32.1% of removals. Cross-jurisdiction change of address and death of the registrant were the other two major reasons for states' removal of registrants from their rolls (28.5% and 21.4%, respectively).

Figure 6. Almost One-Third of Removed Registration Records Were a Result of Failure to Respond to a Confirmation Notice

Source: The percentage of registrations removed because of no response to confirmation notices (and not voting in the following two general elections) was calculated as $(A9e/A9a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations removed because of a cross-jurisdiction change of address was calculated as $(A9b/A9a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations removed because of death was calculated as $(A9c/A9a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations removed because the voter was declared mentally incompetent or because of other reasons was calculated as $((A9f+A9h+A9i+A9j)/A9a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations removed because the voter requested to be removed was calculated as $(A9g/A9a) \times 100$. The percentage of registrations removed because of disqualifying felony conviction was calculated as $(A9d/A9a) \times 100$. Casewise deletion was used at the state level (percentages for each category were calculated independently and only states that reported data for a given category were included in the analysis), and because of this, percentages do not sum to 100%.

The majority of states reported that a registrant could be removed from the voter registration rolls if the registrant received a disqualifying criminal conviction and/or was incarcerated, 78 but only 1.6% of the removals were the result of a disqualifying felony conviction. 79 Two states, however, reported that more than 10% of their registration removals happened due to criminal convictions or incarceration. Georgia reported that 10.8% of registrants were removed for this reason, and Kentucky (13.3%) reported the largest percentage of this type of removal. Kentucky also reported criminal conviction as a common reason for registration removal in the 2018 EAVS.80

⁷⁸ Maine, Vermont, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the District of Columbia reported criminal conviction and/or incarceration was not a reason for voter removal in item Q37 of the 2020 Policy Survey.

 $^{^{79}}$ The percentage of registrations removed because of a disqualifying felony conviction was calculated as (A9d/A9a) x 100. Casewise deletion was used at the state level.

⁸⁰ The percentage of registrations removed because of a disqualifying felony conviction in 2018 was calculated as the total registrants removed from the voter registration rolls for this reason (item A9d of the 2018 EAVS) divided by total registrants removed from the rolls (item A9a in 2018).

Voter Registration Table 1 Calculation Notes:

CVAP Total uses the 1-year ACS CVAP estimate. The 2020 data uses the 2019 CVAP, the 2018 data uses the 2017 CVAP, and the 2016 data uses the 2015 CVAP.

Reported Registrations uses question A1a for 2020, 2018, and 2016.

Active Registrations uses question A1b for 2020 and 2018 and question A3a for 2016.

Active Registrations (% of CVAP) uses question A1b divided by CVAP for 2020 and 2018 and question A3a divided by CVAP for 2016.

Active Registrations (% of Total) uses question A1b divided by A1a for 2020 and 2018 and question A3a divided by A1a for 2016.

Inactive Registrations uses question A1c for 2020 and 2018 and question A3b for 2016.

Inactive Registrations (% of Total) uses question A1c divided by question A1a for 2020 and 2018 and question A3b divided by question A1a for 2016.

Voter Registration Table 1 Data Notes:

- Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.
- Because each percentage was calculated independently, the active registration (% of total) and inactive registration (% of total) rates may not sum to 100% for some states or at the national level.
- The citizen voting age population (CVAP) is an estimate of the number of U.S. citizens ages 18 years or older in the state. This report uses the 1-year American Community Survey (ACS) state estimate for 2019 instead of the 5-year estimate to ensure that the CVAP was as current as possible. The estimate for the year 2020 was not available by the time this report was finalized. The 2019 1-year CVAP does not include data that were collected as part of the decennial Census conducted in 2020. For consistency, the CVAP for the 2018 and 2016 general elections was the 1-year ACS state estimate for 2017 and 2015, respectively.
- Some states may report an active CVAP registration rate of 100% or more. This is because the 2019 CVAP was used to calculate the 2020 registration rate and because due to federal law, some ineligible voters may take up to two full election cycles to be removed from the voter registration rolls.
- The Reported Registrations column includes both active and inactive voters (if the state uses such a distinction).
- [1] The U.S. Census Bureau does not calculate a CVAP for the territories of American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands.
- [2] American Samoa, Guam, Idaho, Minnesota, New Hampshire, the Northern Mariana Islands, Ohio, Oregon, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Wisconsin, and Wyoming reported having only active registered voters.
- [3] American Samoa did not provide data for the 2016 EAVS.
- [4] California adjusted their number of total registrations (A1a) in 2018 after the data were initially released, so the total in this table does not match the total reported in the 2018 EAVS Comprehensive Report. California reported 63,659 fewer registrants in Riverside County in their correction of the 2018 EAVS data.
- [5] Kentucky reported having only active voters in the 2016 EAVS and reported having zero inactive voters in the 2018 EAVS.
- [6] Maryland reported having only active voters in the 2016 and the 2018 EAVS.
- [7] Michigan noted in a survey comment that "Voters reported in A1 are eligible to vote. Those defined as 'inactive' need only to confirm their address before receiving a ballot. Participation in past elections is not a factor in defining eligibility."
- [8] Minnesota noted in a survey comment that "Minnesota is NVRA exempt. Minnesota does not classify voters as inactive per NVRA."

- [9] Montana noted in a survey comment that in A1a, the "total registered/eligible voters consists of active and inactive. Montana reports total registered/eligible voters of 752,538. The difference is provisional, late registration and pending."
- [10] Nebraska noted in a survey comment that the state "does not have 'inactive' voters. The numbers in line [A1c] reflect the number of voters who were sent a section 8(d)(2) notice and have not responded."
- [11] New Hampshire began a rigorous 10-year verification of the checklist beginning April 1, 2021.
- [12] New Mexico's 2018 EAVS data on the number of active registrations contained an error; the correct number is 1,261,532.
- [13] New York reported having only active voters in the 2016 EAVS. This state also reported an uncharacteristically high number of active and total registrations in the 2016 EAVS compared to the registrations reported in the general elections of 2014, 2018, and 2020.
- [14] North Dakota does not have voter registration and does not provide data in Section A of the EAVS.
- [15] The Northern Mariana Islands did not participate in the 2016 or the 2018 EAVS. For 2020, the Northern Mariana Islands reported in a comment in A1 that "Voter[s] are taken out of the roster once inactive as per our Election Statute."

- [17] Oregon noted in a survey comment that they "do not track number of inactive voters."
- [18] Pennsylvania reported in the 2016 EAVS that the state could not "differentiate between active and inactive from our point in time snapshot of the voter registration numbers."
- [19] Puerto Rico did not participate in the 2018 EAVS because the territory did not hold federal elections in that year.
- [20] Wisconsin is exempt from the NVRA and does not classify inactive voters per NVRA definitions.

Voter Registration Table 2 Data Notes:

- Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.
- States have latitude in which registration application sources are offered to their citizens, so long as they do not conflict with federal law. Not all states offer each of the application sources that the EAVS collects data for.
- Questions A4j, A4k, and A4l were not mandatory. States and jurisdictions only reported data in these items if they offered another application source aside from those listed in questions A4a–A4i or if there were registration applications that could not be categorized in questions A4a–A4i.
- Negative numbers in the Not Categorized application source indicate that the sum of registrations received for each source account for more than the total number of registrations reported received by the state.
- Because each percentage was calculated independently, the percentage of applications received through each source may not sum to 100% for some states or at the national level.
- [1] Alabama noted in a survey comment that the state's A3a data come from an Election Systems & Software (ES&S) election survey. In addition, unknown applications sources were not identified.
- [2] Georgia noted in a survey comment that "Election Day registrations listed in A4j, A5j, A6j, and A7j represent applications submitted to poll workers on Election Day. Georgia law does not allow 'same day' registration. Changes made through applications turned in on Election Day are effective for future elections."
- [3] Idaho noted in survey comments for multiple counties that the state switched to a new voter registration system between the 2018 and the 2020 elections, which made it difficult to track some data for these questions.
- [4] Indiana noted in survey comments that "The data reported in A4a-I consists of data from county surveys (A4a-b, A4i) and SVRS [statewide voter registration system] (A4c-h, A4j, A4k, A4I). Counties do not always manually track the information requested in A4a-b and A4i and therefore aren't included in the sums that should match up to A3a."
- [5] Kentucky noted in a survey comment that "[D]rives by advocacy groups or political parties' is used for high school registrations."
- [6] Louisiana noted in a survey comment that "[V]oters submit registration applications for new registrations as well as for updates or changes to existing registrations. A4 totals reflect both new registrations and changes to registrations."
- [7] Michigan noted in a survey comment that "2020 is the first EAVS since Michigan implemented automatic voter registration and online voter registration, and became a member state of ERC [sic, likely referring to the Electronic Registration Information Center]."
- [8] Montana noted in a survey comment that in A4k, online preregistration indicated that a voter still needed to sign and submit a registration form to the county elections office.
- [9] Nebraska noted in survey comments that "[0]nline registrations via DMV website are currently in the DMV section; unable to split. Registrations received from drives by advocacy groups or political parties A4i are not separately categorized and are included in A4a."

- [10] New Hampshire noted in survey comments that it is not subject to the NVRA and does not have online voter registration.
- [11] New York noted in survey comments that "NYS DMV [New York State Department of Motor Vehicles] does allow voters to submit their registration data online, however it does not automatically register voters. After submittal to the DMV, the information is forwarded to the appropriate county board of elections to approve or deny the voter registration data. NYS BOE [New York State Board of Elections] used the term 'does not apply' instead of 'data not available' since online voter registration has been passed as law, but the statewide system was not available for the 2020 election year."
- [12] North Dakota does not have voter registration and does not provide data in Section A of EAVS.
- [13] Rhode Island reported "data not available" for all modes of registration. The state noted in a survey comment that "[D]ata for this section is unavailable. We rolled out a new voter registration system in December, 2019 so half of the voter registration records were processed in the old system and half in the new system."
- [14] Tennessee noted in survey comments that, for most of its counties, "[D]ata for agencies serving persons with disabilities in [A4]f is included with data for public assistance offices in [A4]e."
- [15] Wisconsin is exempt from the NVRA and does not classify inactive voters per NVRA definitions, receive registrations from NVRA agencies, or collect data on rejected registrations.

Voter Registration Table 3 Data Notes:

- Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.
- Questions A3h, A3i, and A3j were not mandatory. States and jurisdictions only reported data in these items if there was another registration category aside from those listed in questions A3b-A3g or if there were registration applications that could not be categorized in questions A3b-A3g.
- Negative numbers in the Not Categorized registration category indicate that the sum of registrations received for each category account for more than the total number of registrations reported received by the state.
- Because each percentage was calculated independently, the percentage of applications in each category may not sum to 100% for some states or at the national level.
- Not all states track data to be able to provide responses for each registration category.
- [1] Alabama noted in a survey comment that "Totals are from ES&S [Election Systems & Software] election survey. A3c: we do not have pre-registration. A3f: due to the way we track data for changes to records, the number of changes resulting directly from registration forms could not be separated from the total number of changes made to voter's records."
- [2] Colorado noted in a survey comment that "[T]he increase in registrations is attributable to multiple factors. Colorado has seen a significant increase in population since 2016. The state conducted three elections in 2020, including the first presidential primary in 20 years. In addition, record turnout for the November 2020 general election contributed to the increased number of registrations. Another factor adding to the increase is the implementation of automatic voter registration in May 2020 in partnership with the Colorado Department of Revenue (CDOR). Automatic update to voter registration through CDOR was also implemented in 2019. This may also contribute to a somewhat inflated number as the addition of a ZIP+4 is counted as an update. Finally, with changes in personnel and as different perspectives are applied to data, queries tend to shift in an effort to obtain more accurate and inclusive data for reporting purposes."
- [3] Connecticut noted in a survey comment that the data necessary to respond to question A3 "is not retained in the system."
- [4] The District of Columbia noted in a survey comment that "A3b and A3c ([preregistrations] under 18, who turned 18) are total new registrations."
- [5] Idaho noted in survey comments for multiple counties that the state switched to a new voter registration system between the 2018 and the 2020 elections, which made it difficult to track some data for these questions.
- [6] lowa noted in a survey comment that "[A]II other sources category is due to limitation on system to report transaction source of update if it is not a change from previous listed source."
- [7] Louisiana noted in a survey comment that "[A]ddress changes across jurisdictions are counted as new registrations. 16- and 17-year-old citizens can apply to register to vote, but cannot vote until they are 18."
- [8] Maryland noted in a survey comment that "[T]he total of A3a is the sum of A3b, A3[c], A3d, and A3e. Maryland does not consider the registration changes listed in A3f and A3g as registrations, and therefore, the source of these changes is not recorded. For A3c, individuals can register to vote starting at age 16, however they are not considered 'pre-registered.' 16- and 17-year-olds are considered registered voters, they just cannot vote until their 18th birthday."

- [9] Mississippi noted in survey comments that duplicate and rejected registrations are not tracked.
- [10] Missouri noted in a survey comment that "[C]hanges of names and address report as separate transactions. In addition to that anytime the LEA [local election administrator] does an address library cleanup process or any change to the voting record it will record as an address change but may not be indicated by the voter. Therefore, we are not including the registration forms for change of name and address is [sic] the total for this section."
- [11] Nebraska noted in a survey comment that "Nebraska law does not allow for pre-registrations for people not of voting age."
- [12] New Hampshire noted in survey comments that "NH uses voter registration forms for name, party, and address changes."
- [13] New Mexico noted that the data for these items are not consistently captured across counties at this time. The Secretary of State's office is exploring options to capture and include this information in future reports.
- [14] North Dakota does not have voter registration and does not provide data in Section A of the EAVS.
- [15] In Oregon, the number of cross-jurisdiction address changes is included in the number of overall changes to registrations. The state does not track the number of invalid/rejected registrations.
- [16] South Carolina noted in survey comments that for the state's A3d and A3e responses, "SC has no process to collect data on duplicate registrations or rejected registrations."
- [17] The U.S. Virgin Islands noted in survey comments that "A3c: the data was not tracked. A3d: before any individual is registered to vote, the individual['s] information is checked in the system to ensure the individual was not previously registered. A3e: a voter will not be registered to vote unless the individual provides the required information (birth paper, U.S. passport, etc.). Before the process begins, the prospective voter is informed what document and information is required to begin the process."
- [18] Washington noted in survey comments that the data reported in this question covered the period "between 2018-10-08 and 2020-11-03."
- [19] West Virginia noted in survey comments that "[D]uplicate registrations are based on DMV and online registrations."
- [20] Wisconsin is exempt from the NVRA and does not classify inactive voters per NVRA definitions.
- [21] Wyoming noted in survey comments that "[M]ultiple changes may have occurred on the same form. A3a includes a total, but the total could be less. For example, a voter could have submitted one form to change their party and address. The data currently reflects that change as 2 forms. A3g. Counties do not receive forms for out-of-county address changes. Those numbers are reflected in new jurisdictions as new registrations."

Voter Registration Table 4 Calculation Notes:

Confirmation Notices Sent, Total uses question A8a.

Confirmation Notices Sent as % of Active Voters uses question A8a divided by question A1b.

Confirmation Notices Received - Valid, Total uses question A8b.

Confirmation Notices Received - Valid, % uses question A8b divided by question A8a.

Confirmation Notices Received - Invalid, Total uses question A8c.

Confirmation Notices Received - Invalid, % uses question A8c divided by question A8a.

Confirmation Notice Returned Undeliverable, Total uses question A8d.

Confirmation Notice Returned Undeliverable, % uses question A8d divided by question A8a.

Status Unknown, Total uses question A8e.

Status Unknown, % uses question A8e divided by question A8a.

Other Confirmation Notices, Total uses the sum of questions A8f, A8g, and A8h.

Other Confirmation Notices, % uses the sum of questions A8f, A8g, and A8h, all divided by question A8a.

Not Categorized Confirmation Notices, Total uses question A8a minus the sum of questions A8b to A8h.

Not Categorized Confirmation Notices, % uses question A8a minus the sum of questions A8b to A8h, all divided by question A8a.

Voter Registration Table 4 Data Notes:

- Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.
- Questions A8f, A8g, and A8h were not mandatory. States and jurisdictions only reported data in these items if there was another confirmation notice status aside from those listed in questions A8b-A8e or if there were registration applications that could not be categorized in questions A8b-A8e.
- Negative numbers in the Not Categorized confirmation notices category indicate that the sum of confirmation notices for each category account for more than the total number of confirmation notices reported by the state.
- Because each percentage was calculated independently, the percentage of confirmation notices in each category may not sum to 100% for some states or at the national level.
- Not all states track data to be able to provide responses for each confirmation notice category.
- States that are exempt from the NVRA are not required to send confirmation notices pursuant to the NVRA, although they may send confirmation notices (or other similar notices) pursuant to state law or practice. States that do not use confirmation notices typically use other sources of data to identify potentially ineligible voters.
- [1] Alabama noted in a survey comment that "[W]e do not have a report that has the total number of confirmation notices sent." Because Alabama does not report the total number of confirmation notices sent, the number of 'Not Categorized' confirmation notices cannot be calculated. For the same reason, their responses were not included when calculating the total 'Not Categorized' confirmation notices at the national level.
- [2] California has increased list maintenance training statewide to all county elections officials, including training regarding when to send confirmation notices per the NVRA and updated California state law.
- [3] Delaware noted in a survey comment that "In 2019, the state of DE changed voter registration vendors-from an in-house mainframe system to a cloud based provider. The data request is unavailable due to the differences in the 2 systems. The information requested was not tracked and/or converted to the new system."
- [4] The District of Columbia notes that the data reported in EAVS under A8a (Confirmation Notices Sent) do not comprise list maintenance activities. This has caused confusion when receiving a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request for D2 notices, and this number does not match the figure in A8a.
- [5] Hawaii noted in survey comments that three of its four counties that submit EAVS data do not "have counts of confirmed, invalidated, undeliverable, or unknown."
- [6] Indiana noted in a survey comment that "Indiana's understanding is this aligns with voter list maintenance activities. Indiana does not send the removal notices referenced by the EAC survey, Indiana provided the number of voter records cancelled due to being in inactive status for more than 2 federal general elections for question A9e."
- [7] lowa noted in a survey comment that the state's "system does not track follow up status information."
- [8] Kentucky noted in a survey comment that "[O]ur system tracks all undeliverable mail to qualify for the 8(d)2 notifications. Two separate batches have been sent during this time period. We have not yet finished scanning and categorizing the returns. Therefore, the only data available is the number sent."

- [9] Louisiana noted in a survey comment that "[C]onfirmation notices are sent pursuant to 52 USC §20507(d)(2). The Department of State only collects the total number of sent confirmation notices."
- [10] Maine noted in a survey comment that "A8d: see A8e, voters made inactive if CACC [Change of Address Confirmation Card] undeliverable."
- [11] Maryland noted in a survey comment that "A8d data is included in A8e."
- [12] Massachusetts noted in a survey comment that the state "cannot provide data on result of [confirmation] notices."
- [13] Minnesota is NVRA exempt and responded "Does not apply" to all items regarding confirmation notices (A8).
- [14] Missouri noted in a survey comment that "A8a does not total [because] we do not track all information requested."
- [15] Nevada reported in survey comments that two of its counties did not track confirmation notices.
- [16] New Hampshire noted in a survey comment that "NH does not send confirmation notices, but does send 30-day letters."
- [17] New Jersey does not track confirmation notices returned by the voter or returned undeliverable.
- [18] New Mexico noted that the data for these items are not consistently captured across counties at this time. The Secretary of State's office is exploring options to capture and include this information on future reports.
- [19] North Dakota does not have voter registration and does not provide data in Section A of the EAVS.
- [20] Puerto Rico is NVRA exempt and responded "Does not apply" to all items regarding confirmation notices (A8).
- [21] The U.S. Virgin Islands are NVRA exempt and responded "Data not available" to all items regarding confirmation notices (A8).
- [22] Virginia does not currently track returned confirmation notices.
- [23] West Virginia reported in a survey comment that "[S]ome counties tracked undeliverables as 'no response,' so they are included in status unknown totals."
- [24] Wisconsin is exempt from NVRA; however, the state sent notices to voters who have not voted in a four-year period, as well as Electronic Registration Information Center (ERIC) mover mailings. Notices are sent to voters who register to vote or whose voter information may be out of date.
- [25] Wyoming is NVRA exempt and responded "Does not apply" to all items regarding confirmation notices (A8).

Voter Registration Table 5 Data Notes:

- Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.
- Questions A9h, A9i, and A9g were not mandatory. States and jurisdictions only reported data in these items if there was another reason for registration removals aside from those listed in questions A9b-A9g or if there were registration removals that could not be categorized in questions A9b-A9e.
- Negative numbers in the Not Categorized registration removals category indicate that the sum of registration removals for each category account for more than the total number of registration removals reported received by the state.
- Because each percentage was calculated independently, the percentage of confirmation notices in each category may not sum to 100% for some states or at the national level.
- Not all states track data to be able to provide responses for each registration removal category. In addition, not all states may remove registrations for the listed reason.
- [1] California has increased list maintenance training statewide to all county elections officials, including training regarding removal actions per the NVRA and updated California state law.
- [2] Georgia noted in a survey comment that "A9b represents voters who moved out of the state."
- [3] Indiana noted in a survey comment that "[T]he data reported in A9b–j consists of data from the ad hoc report (A9b–d, A9g–j) and SVRS [statewide voter registration system] (A9e). Indiana provided the number of voter records cancelled due to being in inactive status for more than 2 federal general elections for question A9e. These statistics represent the majority of cancellations for this reason, based on the county user selecting the option to run this process in batch. However, county users have the option to also cancel voters one-by-one for this reason, but those statistics are not included in the counts for question A9e."
- [4] Louisiana noted in a survey comment that "[I]rregularities include voters that were cancelled by the registrar of voters because the registrant provided insufficient or incorrect data, or user processing error. Challenge 21 includes voters who were registered in another state or not a United States citizen, or were otherwise not qualified to be registered for reasons other than change of residence."
- [5] Michigan noted in a survey comment that "A9d: in MI, registered voters cannot cast a ballot while they are incarcerated serving sentence; however, their registration is never cancelled. Felony convictions alone do not disqualify voters from casting a ballot."
- [6] Minnesota noted in a survey comment that "A9d and A9f: voter is not removed but status changes to 'challenged.' A9e: did not vote or update registration in prior four years. A9g: voter request not tracked separately, is included in A9h."
- [7] Montana noted in a survey comment that "A9d: felony cancellations as reported in voter registration database."
- [8] North Dakota does not have voter registration and does not provide data in Section A of the EAVS.
- [9] Oregon reported in a survey comment that "[I]ncarcerated voters are inactivated not removed."
- [10] Pennsylvania reported in a survey comment that "PA won't be reporting declared mentally incompetent in future surveys. The cancellation option is no longer available to county officials."

[11] South Carolina reported in a survey comment that "A9f: it is rare for voters to be removed for this reason and would be included under 'other' (A9h)."

[12] The U.S. Virgin Islands reported in a survey comment that the territory "no longer purges voters who did not vote in the past two general election. A voter can only be removed off the voting roll due to their death, request to be removed or move out of territory, or convicted of a felony. The voter will be reinstated once they serve their sentence. ESVI [Election System of the Virgin Islands] is planning to do more outreach to voters including notifying voters of voting centers, their respective voting centers, voter registration status to name a few."

[13] Wisconsin is exempt from the NVRA and does not classify inactive voters per NVRA definitions. Only active voters are registered and eligible to vote in Wisconsin. Wisconsin's registered voters count for this report includes military voters, even though they are not required to "register" in Wisconsin. Wisconsin requires voters to re-register each time their address changes. For the purposes of this report, voters are only counted as being "removed" from the voter rolls if they did not re-register at a new address. Even voters who move within the same jurisdiction must re-register in Wisconsin; therefore, Wisconsin does not track these voters separately.

Chapter 4. Military and Overseas Voting in 2020: UOCAVA

Key Findings

The Election Administration and Voting Survey (EAVS) Section B collected data from states and municipalities on individuals covered by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) during the 2020 federal general election. Election officials were asked a variety of questions relating to UOCAVA voting practices, including the total number of registered UOCAVA voters, the use of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA), the quantity and method of ballots transmitted to and returned by UOCAVA voters, and the use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB).¹ Among the results of this section, notable findings include:

- Just over 40% of registered UOCAVA voters held legal voting residence in three states: California, Florida, and Washington.
- Continuing a trend that began with the 2016 EAVS, overseas citizens made up a larger percentage of registered UOCAVA voters than did members of the uniformed services.
- More than 1.2 million ballots were transmitted to UOCAVA voters by election offices. More than 900,000 of these ballots were returned by UOCAVA voters and were submitted for counting.
- UOCAVA voters increasingly used electronic methods to receive and return their absentee ballots, but rates differed by UOCAVA voter type, with more overseas citizens using electronic options than uniformed services members, who continue to rely primarily on postal mail.
- The most common reason for UOCAVA ballot rejection was that the ballot was received after a state's UOCAVA absentee ballot receipt deadline.
- FWAB usage continued to increase in 2020, with more UOCAVA voters using this backup ballot to cast their vote than in previous election cycles.

Introduction

The U.S. Election Assistance Commission (EAC) is required by the Help America Vote Act of 2002 (HAVA) to collect data from states² and to report on absentee voting by uniformed services members and overseas citizens.³ Since 2014, the EAC has fulfilled this reporting mandate in partnership with the Federal Voting Assistance Program (FVAP), the agency designated to administer UOCAVA on behalf of the U.S. Department of Defense (DOD). Through a memorandum of understanding between the EAC and FVAP, Section B of the EAVS is administered on behalf of both agencies. This agreement allows both the EAC and FVAP to fulfill congressionally mandated requirements to study UOCAVA voting while reducing the data collection and reporting burden on state and local election officials. States are required to report certain election data to the EAC after each federal election.⁴

¹ The response rate among local jurisdictions for EAVS Section B was 99.9%; five counties in Arkansas did not provide Section B data. In addition, the response rate for individual items varied. Results reported in this chapter include only states for which data are available for a given question. State and national totals include all available jurisdiction-level data. National-level percentages reported in this chapter used casewise deletion.

² Throughout this report, unless otherwise specified, the term "state" can be understood to apply to the 50 U.S. states, the District of Columbia and five U.S. territories (American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands) that submit Election Administration Policy Survey and EAVS data.

³ The Help America Vote Act of 2002 (HAVA), 52 U.S.C. § 20901. The EAC works with FVAP to collect comprehensive data from the states on all of the ballots sent and received by voters covered under UOCAVA (52 U.S.C. § 20301(b)(11)).

This chapter examines UOCAVA data from the 2020 EAVS, including use of the FPCA by UOCAVA voters, ballots transmitted to UOCAVA voters by states, ballots returned by UOCAVA voters, UOCAVA ballots counted, UOCAVA ballots rejected, and usage of the FWAB by UOCAVA voters. Where appropriate, information about state laws and procedures related to UOCAVA voting, collected as part of the EAC's 2020 Election Administration Policy Survey (Policy Survey), is presented to provide context for the EAVS results.

Federal Laws Regulating Military and Overseas Voting

The Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act of 1986 (UOCAVA)

UOCAVA protects the voting rights of members of the uniformed services who are stationed away from their voting residence, the spouses and other eligible family of uniformed services members, and U.S. citizens residing outside of the United States. It requires all states, territories, and the District of Columbia to allow these citizens to register to vote and to cast an absentee ballot for all federal elections. For the estimated 1.4 million uniformed services members and approximately 600,000 military spouses and voting age dependents stationed away from their legal voting residence as well as the estimated 2.9 million voting age U.S. citizens who live, study, or work overseas, the absentee voting process is different from and can be more challenging than the voting process for non-military voters residing in the United States.

Citizens protected by UOCAVA include:

- Members of the uniformed services (Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, Coast Guard, United States Public Health Service Commissioned Corps, and National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration [NOAA] Commissioned Officer Corps) who are stationed away from their legal voting residence:
- Members of the U.S. Merchant Marine;
- Eligible family members of the above; and
- U.S. citizens residing outside the United States.

172 | Military and Overseas Voting in 2020

⁴ Section 703(a) HAVA amended section 102 of UOCAVA.

⁶ Information was provided by FVAP to Fors Marsh Group via email on May 10, 2021, and was current as of March 31, 2021.

⁷ Federal Voting Assistance Program, "2018 Overseas Citizen Population Analysis," at https://www.fvap.gov/info/reports-surveys/overseas-citizen-population-analysis. The results of the 2020 Overseas Citizen Population Analysis were not available at the time of this report's publication.

Among the challenges UOCAVA sought to address was the wide variability in rules and procedures governing registration and voting across states, which made it difficult for uniformed services members and overseas citizens to navigate the voting process. UOCAVA established the FPCA, which serves as a combination registration and ballot request application that is accepted in all U.S. states and territories. In addition, the FWAB functions as a backup ballot that can be cast by UOCAVA voters who make a timely request for, but do not receive, a regular absentee ballot. Although states and localities still maintain and administer elections according to their own laws and procedures for registration and absentee voting among uniformed services members and overseas citizens, the provisions of UOCAVA established some uniformity in the absentee voting process for these voters.

The Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment Act of 2009 (MOVE)

Historically, UOCAVA ballots were transmitted from election offices to voters primarily through the mail. Given long mailing times and high mobility rates for this population of voters, this practice meant that many UOCAVA voters were unable to receive and return their absentee ballot before state ballot return deadlines. The MOVE Act amended UOCAVA to establish additional requirements to protect military and overseas citizens' voting rights. ¹⁰ These new rules required that all states and territories provide UOCAVA voters with an option to request and receive registration and absentee ballot request materials electronically, directed states to establish an electronic means of transmitting blank ballots to UOCAVA voters, and required states to provide free access to a system whereby voters can verify the status of their ballot. Additionally, absentee ballots must be transmitted no less than 45 days before a federal election to all UOCAVA voters who submit an absentee ballot request before this deadline. These additional provisions aimed to ensure uniformed services members and overseas citizens not only have the right to vote, but that they have sufficient time to receive and return their absentee ballots ahead of state deadlines.

The UOCAVA Voting Process

Although the specific path may differ depending on the policies and procedures in one's state of voting residence and on a voter's particular situation and preferences, in general, the UOCAVA voting process can be summarized in six basic steps, as illustrated in Figure $1.^{11}$

- 1. Register and request an absentee ballot: UOCAVA-eligible citizens can do this either by completing a state application form or an FPCA, the federal form that functions as both a registration and absentee ballot request and is accepted in all states and U.S. territories.
- 2. Submit the registration and ballot request: Completed applications must be submitted to the appropriate state or local election office by mail or by an electronic means permitted by the state. All states accept FPCAs by mail; states may also accept FPCAs via email, fax, the state's online voter registration portal, or by another mode.

- 3. Application processing: Once received, registration and absentee ballot request applications are processed by the election office. If an application fails to meet any state requirements (e.g., the form is not completed correctly, is submitted after the registration deadline, or the applicant is deemed ineligible), then it may be rejected. If an application meets all requirements and is accepted, it remains valid as a registration and ballot request, meaning that the voter will retain UOCAVA status and have an absentee ballot transmitted to them for the duration specified by state policy.
- 4. Ballot transmission: Election officials transmit absentee ballots to registered UOCAVA voters no later than 45 days before a federal election (ballots may be transmitted later if the ballot request is submitted by the state deadline but less than 45 days before an election). Ballots

- may be transmitted to a voter by mail or through some other state-approved electronic means of transmission, as requested by the voter.
- 5. Complete and return absentee ballot: UOCAVA voters complete and return their absentee ballot to the appropriate election office for processing. Ballots may be returned and submitted for processing either by mail or through some other means allowed by a state. The FWAB may be used as a backup ballot by UOCAVA voters who do not receive a regular absentee ballot, or if the ballot does not arrive in time to be completed and returned ahead of state deadlines.
- 6. Ballot processing and counting: Completed absentee ballots that are returned and submitted for counting to an election office must be received by state deadlines and meet other state requirements. State policies on when completed ballots must be postmarked and when they must be returned to an election office in order to be eligible to be counted vary widely.

UOCAVA Registration and Ballot Requests

The 2016 general election was the first time that registered overseas citizens outnumbered registered uniformed services members covered by UOCAVA. This trend continued in 2020, with uniformed services members or eligible family members accounting for 42.3% of registered UOCAVA voters and overseas citizens accounting for 57.4% of this population.¹²

Registered UOCAVA voters' legal voting residences¹³ are disproportionately concentrated in just a few U.S. states. In 2020, the states with the largest numbers of registered UOCAVA voters were Florida (191,628), California (187,213), and Washington (127,976).¹⁴ Together, these three states represented 40.4% of all registered UOCAVA voters reported in the 2020 EAVS. Twenty-two local jurisdictions¹⁵ reported having 10,000 or more registered UOCAVA voters, and seven reported more ¹⁵ What constitutes a jurisdiction for EAVS reporting is defined by how each state chose to provide data. For the 2020 EAVS, most states reported data on the county level (or county equivalent, such as parishes for Louisiana). Illinois, Maryland, Missouri, and Virginia reported data for independent cities in addition to counties. The territories, the District of Columbia, and Alaska each reported as a single jurisdiction. Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Wisconsin reported data on the township level. Maine also reported its UOCAVA data in Section B as a separate jurisdiction, because this information was only collected at the state level. Michigan reported data for the county level, but most election administration activities take place in the 1,520 local election jurisdictions in the state.

¹² The total number of registered and eligible UOCAVA voters was collected in item B1a of the 2020 EAVS. The number of registered and eligible uniformed services UOCAVA voters was collected in item B1b; the percentage of uniformed services UOCAVA voters was calculated by dividing B1b by B1a. The number of registered and eligible overseas citizen UOCAVA voters was collected in item B1c; the percentage of overseas citizen UOCAVA voters was calculated by dividing B1c by B1a. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating the national percentage. In total, 870 jurisdictions in 10 states did not report data in B1; this count excludes jurisdictions in Maine, which reported UOCAVA data at the state level and not the jurisdiction level. A total of 8,167 registered and eligible voters reported in B1a were not classified as either uniformed services or overseas citizens. These percentages exclude the seven states that did not report the number of registered UOCAVA voters as well as the state and territory that did not subdivide this number by UOCAVA voter type.

13 According to FVAP's guidance for service members, "Your voting residence is within your state of legal residence or domicile. It is the address that you consider your permanent home and where you had a physical presence. Your state of legal residence is used for state income tax purposes, determines eligibility to vote for federal and state elections, and qualification for in-state tuition rates." than 15,000 registered and eligible UOCAVA voters. These seven jurisdictions accounted for 15.3% of all registered UOCAVA voters (see Table 1).

Source: Information on the number of registered and eligible UOCAVA voters was item B1a of the 2020 EAVS. Alaska reported 16,194 total registered UOCAVA voters and reported as a single jurisdiction in the EAVS; however, it was not included in the table because the table focuses on localities rather than complete states.

Conversely, of the 5,094 local jurisdictions for which the number of registered UOCAVA voters was available, 80.9% reported fewer than 100 registered UOCAVA voters, including 371 jurisdictions that reported having zero UOCAVA voters in 2020. Figure 2 shows the number of registered UOCAVA voters by jurisdiction.

Election offices reported receiving 764,691 FPCAs ahead of the 2020 general election, which was almost double the 420,861 FPCAs that states reported receiving ahead of the 2016 general election. Overall, 30.3% of these registration and absentee ballot requests came from uniformed services members, and 66.9% were submitted by overseas citizens. 16 States reported rejecting 2.7% of the FPCAs received, of which 15.2% were rejected because the election office received the form after their state's absentee ballot request deadline. 17 The FPCA rejection rate among uniformed services members was slightly higher than among overseas citizens, with 3.3% of military FPCAs rejected compared to 2.3% of FPCAs submitted by overseas citizens. 18

UOCAVA Ballots Transmitted

In 2020, election offices in the 50 states, five U.S. territories, and the District of Columbia reported transmitting 1,249,601 ballots to UOCAVA voters. ¹⁹ Figure 3 shows the number of ballots sent out from election offices or transmitted for each state. The states colored in dark blue represent the states that distributed the most ballots to UOCAVA voters. The states colored in light blue are the states that distributed the fewest ballots to UOCAVA voters.

¹⁶ Data on the total number of FPCAs submitted was collected in item B2a of the 2020 EAVS. In 2016, this data was collected in item B20a. For 2020, the percentage of FPCAs received from uniformed services members was calculated as B2b/B2a. The percentage of FPCAs received from overseas citizen voters was calculated as B2c/B2a. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages.

¹⁷ The total number of FPCAs rejected was collected in item B3a in the 2020 EAVS; the percentage of FPCAs rejected was calculated as B3a/B2a. The percentage of FPCAs rejected because they were received late was calculated as B4a/B3a. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages.

¹⁹ The number of transmitted UOCAVA ballots was collected in item B5a of the 2020 EAVS. The number of ballots transmitted to UOCAVA voters was reported by all but 36 jurisdictions. Rhode Island did not report data on the number of ballots transmitted.

Source: Information on the number of transmitted UOCAVA ballots was collected in item B5a of the 2020 EAVS. State-level data were aggregated from jurisdiction data. Cutoff points in the graph were selected to reflect states that had the lowest and highest number of UOCAVA ballots transmitted and to differentiate among the states in between the lowest and highest UOCAVA ballot transmission numbers.

Of the UOCAVA ballots transmitted, 39.4% were sent to uniformed services members, and 60.1% were transmitted to overseas citizen voters.²⁰ Figure 4 shows that the percentage of ballots transmitted to overseas citizens has continued to rise steadily over the last several election cycles, increasing by 15.4 percentage points since the 2012 general election.

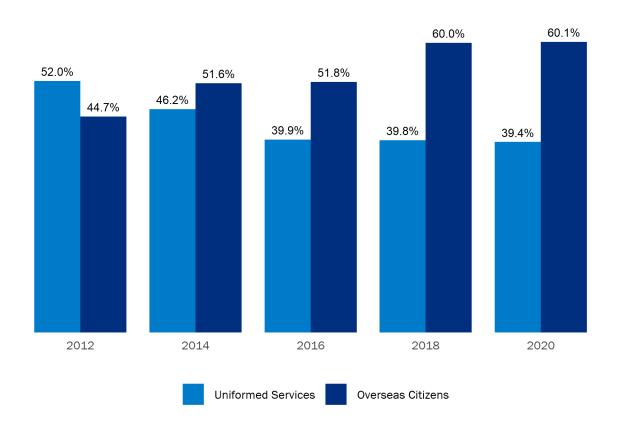

Although the nationwide percentage of ballots sent to overseas citizens was greater than the percentage sent to uniformed services members, the proportion of ballots sent to overseas citizens or uniformed services members varied by state. Kentucky and Louisiana, for example, reported that UOCAVA ballots were split about evenly between uniformed services members and overseas citizen voters; however, the District of Columbia and Massachusetts reported that the vast majority of UOCAVA ballots were transmitted to overseas citizens (97.1% and 94.2%, respectively). In Alaska, American Samoa, New Mexico, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands, more than three-quarters of UOCAVA ballots were transmitted to uniformed services members. Figure 5 shows the percentage of ballots transmitted to uniformed services voters versus overseas citizen voters.

The percentage of UOCAVA ballots transmitted to overseas citizens was calculated as $B1c/B1a \times 100$ for the 2012, 2014, and 2016 EAVS, and $B5c/B5a \times 100$ for the 2018 and the 2020 EAVS. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages; percentages may not sum to 100%. Ballots that were not classified as being from either overseas citizens or uniformed services voters were not included in this analysis.

Modes of UOCAVA Ballot Transmission

Over the last several election cycles, the modes by which absentee ballots have been transmitted to voters have changed substantially. Since the passage of the MOVE Act, transmission of ballots to UOCAVA voters has increasingly occurred electronically. Email was the most popular method of ballot transmission for the 2020 general election, with 62.3% of absentee ballots transmitted to UOCAVA voters via email, 32% transmitted via postal mail, and 7.9% sent to voters through some other mode of transmission (e.g., fax or online systems). ²¹ By comparison, during the previous presidential election cycle in 2016, among states that provided data on transmission by mode, 59.8% of ballots were transmitted via email, and in 2018, email represented 56.6% of UOCAVA ballots that were transmitted. ²² Figure 6 displays the percentage of ballots transmitted by mail, email, or other modes for the 2020 general election.

Modes of ballot transmission differed based on UOCAVA voter type. The transmission mode among uniformed services members was almost evenly split between mail transmission (47.8%) and email transmission (46.7%). For ballots transmitted to overseas citizens, most ballots were transmitted by email (70.9%) while ballots transmitted by mail accounted for 22.2% of ballots transmitted. For both groups, between 7% and 7.9% of ballots were transmitted by other modes, including fax and online ballot delivery portals.

Overall, 1% of all ballots transmitted to UOCAVA voters were returned as undeliverable, including mailed ballots returned to sender, emailed ballots that bounced back, and ballots that were undeliverable by other modes, such as an incorrect fax number.²³

²¹ The percentage of ballots transmitted by email was calculated as B7a/B5a for the 2020 EAVS. The percentage of ballots transmitted by postal mail was calculated as B6a/B5a. The percentage of ballots transmitted by other modes of transmission was calculated as B8a/B5a. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in these calculations. All but three states reported ballots transmitted by mode in 2020. Two additional states did not report the number of ballots transmitted by email. These states were excluded from calculations of the percentage of ballots transmitted by a given mode. However, the percentages by mode did not change substantively when transmitted ballots from these states were included in analysis.

Source: The percentages of UOCAVA ballots transmitted overall were calculated as $B7a/B5a \times 100$ for email, $B6a/B5a \times 100$ for postal mail, and $B8a/B5a \times 100$ for other modes. The percentages of UOCAVA ballots transmitted to uniformed services voters were calculated as $B7b/B5b \times 100$ for email, $B6b/B5b \times 100$ for postal mail, and $B8b/B5b \times 100$ for other modes. The percentages of UOCAVA ballots transmitted for overseas citizens were calculated as $B7c/B5c \times 100$ for email, $B6c/B5c \times 100$ for postal mail, and $B8c/B5c \times 100$ for other modes. UOCAVA Ballots Returned and Submitted for Counting States reported 911,614 regular absentee ballots: 73% of those transmitted to voters (through any mode) were returned and submitted for counting by UOCAVA voters for the 2020 general election. ²⁴ This is a 39% increase over 2016, when 655,844 regular absentee ballots were returned by UOCAVA voters. ²⁵ Figure 7 shows the UOCAVA ballot return totals by state in 2020. The states colored in dark ²⁴ The total number of returned UOCAVA ballots was collected in item B9a in the 2020 EAVS. The percentage of transmitted UOCAVA ballots that were returned was calculated as B9a/B5a. Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating this percentage. More than 82% of jurisdictions reported the number of ballots returned and submitted for counting. FWABs were reported separately from regular UOCAVA absentee ballots and were not included in these figures. Because more than one ballot may be transmitted to an individual voter (e.g., because the original was returned undeliverable or was spoiled and replaced), this rate likely underestimates the rate of ballot return by UOCAVA voters.

Source: The percentage of transmitted UOCAVA ballots that were returned by voters was calculated as $B9a/B5a \times 100$. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating the percentages shown in this map. States are grouped by quartiles rounded to the nearest integer.

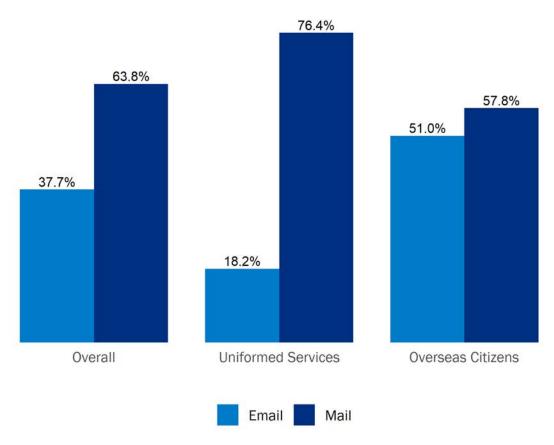

Of the ballots returned to election offices, 36.3% were returned by uniformed services members, and 62.9% were returned by overseas citizens. ²⁶ Overall, 63.8% of absentee ballots returned and submitted for counting by UOCAVA voters were returned to the election office via postal mail, 37.7% were returned by email, and 16.5% were returned through some other mode (e.g., fax or an online system). ²⁷ Twenty-three states indicated that they do not allow or did not report email ballot return.

²⁶ The percentage of UOCAVA ballots returned by uniformed services members was calculated as B9b/B9a. The percentage of UOCAVA ballots returned by overseas citizen voters was calculated as B9c/B9a. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages.

²⁷ The percentage of UOCAVA ballots returned by postal mail was calculated as B10a/B9a. The percentage of UOCAVA ballots returned by email was calculated as B11a/B9a. The percentage of UOCAVA ballots returned by some other mode was calculated as B12a/B9a. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages. Four states did not report the number of ballots returned by mode and were excluded from all mode analysis. In addition, 23 states did not report ballots returned via email, and 28 did not report ballots returned by some other mode. If all states are included in the analysis, 61.8% of ballots were returned via mail, 23.1% via email, 11.7% by some other mode, and 3.3% of returned ballots were not categorized by mode.

Among the states that reported UOCAVA ballots returned by email, 42.5% of ballots were returned through email, and 45.2% were returned via mail.²⁸

Figure 8. Although Many UOCAVA Voters, Especially Overseas Citizens, Use Email to Return Their Completed Absentee Ballot, Postal Mail Is the Primary Mode of Ballot Return

Source: The percentages of UOCAVA ballots returned by mode overall were calculated as $B10a/B9a \times 100$ for postal mail and $B11a/B9a \times 100$ for email. The percentages of UOCAVA ballots returned by mode for uniformed services members were calculated as $B10b/B9b \times 100$ for postal mail and $B11b/B9b \times 100$ for email. The percentages of UOCAVA ballots returned by mode for overseas citizens were calculated as $B10c/B9c \times 100$ for postal mail and $B11c/B9c \times 100$ for email. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages, and because percentages for each type of voter and each mode of return were calculated independently and only states that reported data for a given mode of return were included in the analysis, the percentages do not sum to 100%. Other modes of ballot return are not shown here.

Although postal mail was the most common mode of ballot return for both uniformed services and overseas citizen voters, uniformed services members used email return far less than overseas

²⁸ Thirty-three states reported at least one email ballot returned (item B11a in the 2020 EAVS). The percentage of ballots returned by email was calculated as B11a/B9a among states reporting at least one email ballot returned (item B11a in the 2020 EAVS). citizens, with just 18.2% using email to return an absentee ballot versus 51% of overseas citizens.²⁹ Figure 8 displays the method of ballot return for UOCAVA voters by type.

Overall, 889,837 regular absentee ballots returned by UOCAVA voters were counted in the 2020 general election. Of these votes, 63.1% were cast by overseas citizens and 36.5% by uniformed services voters.³⁰ The overall rejection rate for regular absentee ballots returned by UOCAVA voters was 2.1%, less than half the overall rejection rate of 5.7% reported in 2018.³¹ The overall rejection rate did not differ significantly across UOCAVA voter types.³²

Figure 9 shows the number of rejected UOCAVA ballots returned and submitted by voters for counting in each state. The states that are colored in dark blue represent the states that reported the highest number of rejected ballots, and the states that are colored in light blue reported the lowest number of rejected ballots.

Rejected ballots were divided into three reasons for rejection: missed deadline, problem with voter signature, and lacked postmark.³³ By far the most common reason for rejection was that a ballot was received after a state's deadline for UOCAVA absentee ballot receipt. Of the 19,060returned UOCAVA ballots rejected, 8,188 were rejected because they were received after the state deadline, which was 43.5% of all UOCAVA ballot rejections.³⁴ Voter signature problems were responsible for 19.6% of all UOCAVA ballot rejections, 3.3% of ballot rejections were the result of postmark issues, and 47.3% of rejections were caused by some other issue.³⁵

³⁰ The total number of UOCAVA ballots that were returned by voters and counted was collected in item B14a of the 2020 EAVS. The percentage of ballots that were returned by uniformed services members was calculated as B14b/B14a. The percentage of ballots that were returned by overseas citizen voters was calculated as B14c/B14a. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages. An additional 12,919 (1.5%) UOCAVA absentee ballots counted were not classified by voter type.

³² The rejection rate for UOCAVA ballots was calculated as B18a/B9a for the 2018 and 2020 EAVS. The percentage of ballots rejected from uniformed services voters was calculated as B18b/B9b. The percentage of ballots rejected from overseas citizen voters was calculated as B18c/B9c. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages. The rejection rate for returned ballots was 2% for uniformed services members, 2.1% for overseas citizens, and 6.3% among rejected ballots not classified by voter type.

³³ Two states (Mississippi and Rhode Island) and four U.S. territories (American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, and U.S. Virgin Islands) did not report the number of ballots rejected. The number of ballots rejected was reported for 81.7% of jurisdictions nationwide. Most of these jurisdictions also subdivided rejected ballots by reason for rejection. New Jersey was not able to separate regular UOCAVA ballots from FWABs; information on all of the UOCAVA ballots rejected in New Jersey in the 2018 election is available in the survey comments.

³⁵ The percentage of UOCAVA ballots rejected because of signature issues was calculated as B20a/B18a. The percentage of UOCAVA ballots rejected because of postmark issues was calculated as B21a/B18a. The percentage of UOCAVA ballots rejected for other reasons was calculated as B22a/B18a. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages. The increase in "other" reasons for rejection may reflect a large increase in the use of this category by certain states, in particular New York with 2,098 (71.5% of their rejections) and Virginia 2,531 (217.3% of their rejections). These two states accounted for more than half of the total "other" rejections.

Source: The percentage of returned UOCAVA ballots that were rejected includes regular UOCAVA absentee ballots that were rejected (item B18a in the 2020 EAVS), divided by the total number of regular UOCAVA absentee ballots received (item B9a in the 2020 EAVS). Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating the percentages shown in this map. Cutoff points in the graph were selected to reflect states that had the lowest and highest percentage of UOCAVA ballot rejection rates and to differentiate among the states in between the lowest and highest UOCAVA ballot rejection rates.

Uniformed services members and overseas citizen UOCAVA ballots were rejected for similar reasons. Missing the deadline was the most common reason for rejection among both populations—44.7% for uniformed services members and 41.3% for overseas citizens. Signature issues were the cause of 27.3% of ballot rejections for ballots returned by uniformed services members, almost twice the percentage of overseas citizen ballots rejected for this reason (13.7%).³⁶

³⁶ The percentage of ballots rejected for missing the deadline was calculated as B19b/B18b for uniformed services voters and B19c/B18c for overseas citizens. The percentage of ballots rejected because of signature issues was calculated as B20b/B18b for uniformed services voters and B20c/B18c for overseas citizens. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages.

Federal Write-In Absentee Ballots

If a regular absentee ballot does not arrive in time for an individual to vote, the FWAB functions as a backup ballot that can be used to vote for all federal offices and, in some states, state and local offices as well.

The Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB)

The FWAB is a special type of UOCAVA ballot that may be used as a backup in the event that a voter's regular absentee ballot does not arrive in time to vote. In most states, a UOCAVA voter must have registered and requested an absentee ballot in order to use the FWAB.

Although the 33,027 FWABs submitted in 2020 made up a relatively small proportion (3.8%) of all the UOCAVA ballots returned, there was a 41.1% increase in the volume of FWABs reported compared to the 2016 presidential election.³⁷ Despite the increase from previous elections, FWAB usage remains a relatively small proportion of the UOCAVA methods of voting among both uniformed services members and overseas citizen voters. However, the FWAB resulted in 23,897 additional UOCAVA voters' ballots counted in the 2020 general election, with 24.2% of these additional voters from uniformed services members and 73.2% from overseas citizens.³⁸ Thirteen states and territories reported that they received no FWABs during the 2020 presidential election.³⁹

Roughly one in four (8,438 or 25.6%) of the 33,027 FWABs submitted in the 2020 general election were not counted. Of these, 3,965 FWABs—47.1% of the rejected FWABs—were replaced by a regular absentee ballot, making the backup ballot unnecessary.⁴⁰ The rate of uncounted FWABs returned by uniformed services members was similar to the rate of uncounted FWABs returned by overseas citizens—27.6% and 21.5%, respectively.⁴¹ The other major reason FWABs went uncounted (and the ³⁷ The percentage of all ballots returned that were FWABs was calculated using the total number of FWABs received (B23a) divided by the total number of UOCAVA ballots received (the sum of B9a and B23a). Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating this percentage. The total number of FWABs received was collected in item B23a in the 2020 EAVS and the sum of B31a, B31b, B31c, and B31d in the 2016 EAVS. In 2016, states reported receiving 23,412 FWABs. For 2020, The total number of FWABs returned was based on 82.1% of jurisdictions for which this information was available.

³⁸ The total number of FWABs received and counted was item B24a of the 2020 EAVS. The number of FWABs counted from uniformed services members was item B24b, and the number of FWABs counted from overseas citizens was item B24c. The percentage of counted FWABs returned by uniformed services members was calculated as B24b/B24a. The percentage of counted FWABs returned by overseas citizens was calculated as B24c/B24a. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating this percentage.

³⁹ American Samoa, Guam, and Puerto Rico reported receiving zero FWABs. Georgia, Iowa, Oregon, and South Carolina reported FWABs with regular UOCAVA ballots because they could not separate the two types.

⁴¹ The total percentage of FWABs rejected was calculated as (B25a+B26a+B27a)/B23a. The percentage of FWABs rejected from uniformed services members was calculated as (B25b+B26b+B27b)/B23b. The percentage of FWABs rejected from overseas citizen voters was calculated as (B25c+B26c+B27c)/B23c. Casewise deletion was used at the state level in calculating these percentages.

only other reason states reported via the EAVS) was because they were received after the ballot receipt deadline (13.1% of rejected FWABs).⁴² $^{^{42}}$ The percentage of rejected FWABs that were rejected because they were received after the deadline was calculated as B25a/(B25a+B26a+B27a). Casewise deletion at the state level was used in this calculation.

UOCAVA Table 1 Data Notes:

General Notes:

- Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.
- [1] Alabama and Missouri reported that data on the number of registered UOCAVA voters were not available.
- [2] Connecticut reported that data on the number of registered UOCAVA voters were "not collected due to COVID."
- [3] Kansas did not provide any response to item B1.
- [4] North Dakota does not have voter registration.
- [5] Ohio noted in a survey comment that "As Ohio permits UOCAVA voters to register by several means other than a FPCA or FWAP [sic], we cannot accurately provide the actual number of UOCAVA voters in our state."
- [6] Puerto Rico noted in a survey comment that "At this moment, PR SEC doesn't have the data break down by categories." This abbreviation was not defined by the state.
- [7] Rhode Island noted in a survey comment that "[A]ccording to RI general law all UOCAVA mail ballots are consolidated into one mail ballot category."
- [8] Vermont reported that item B1 did not apply to the state.

UOCAVA Table 2 Data Notes:

General Notes:

- Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from the states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.
- Negative numbers in the Not Categorized FPCAs received or rejected categories indicate that the sum of FPCAs for uniformed services members and overseas citizens in that category account for more than the total number of FPCAs reported by the state in the corresponding category.
- [1] Connecticut reported that data on FPCAs were not available and that "[N]o distinction [was] made for these voters."
- [2] Colorado noted in a survey comment that "FPCAs are not rejected; if not completed by the voter, the voter is incomplete or pending."
- [3] lowa reported data on the total number of FPCAs received but not on how many were received by voter type or how many FPCAs were rejected. This state noted in a survey comment that "[S]ystem does not allow me to show breakdown between these two types of UOCAVA voters." The state also noted that "FPCAs can be accepted up to and including Election Day."
- [4] Louisiana reported data on the total number of FPCAs received and rejected and noted in a survey comment that "[T]he Department of State only collects data for the totals."
- [5] Maine reported that the EAVS items related to FPCAs did not apply to the state.
- [6] Michigan, South Carolina, and Virginia reported that data on rejected FPCAs were not available.
- [7] Mississippi reported in a survey comment that "FPCA by military or out of county not clearly defined in SEMS [Statewide Elections Management System]."
- [8] Missouri reported data on the total number of FPCAs received but not on how many were received by voter type or how many FPCAs were rejected.
- [9] Montana noted in survey comments that the state "accepts absentee registrations up until 8PM on Election Day."
- [10] The Northern Mariana Islands reported in survey comments that "[0]ur office did not receive any FPCA applicants."
- [11] Ohio noted for multiple counties that "[T]otal in B3a includes B4a; however, source information [for [military/overseas voters] for B4a is not tracked. [B]ecause of this, B3b + B3c will not always equal B3a."
- [12] Oregon reported in survey comments that the state is "unable to separate uniformed services from non-military overseas" and that data on rejected FPCAs is not tracked.
- [13] Puerto Rico reported that data on FPCAs was not available, with a survey comment that "all the requests were made by email."
- [14] Rhode Island noted in a survey comment that "[A]ccording to RI general law all UOCAVA mail ballots are consolidated into one mail ballot category."
- [15] South Carolina and Vermont reported that data on FPCAs were not available.

[16] Wisconsin state statute does not require rejected registrations or FPCAs to be tracked.

UOCAVA Table 3 Data Notes:

General Notes:

Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.

[1] Georgia, Iowa, Oregon, and South Carolina reported that data on FWABs were included in the EAVS items related to UOCAVA absentee ballots because FWABs cannot be distinguished from regular UOCAVA absentee ballots.

- [2] Kootenai County in Idaho responded "Data not available" to the number of UOCAVA ballots returned (B9a) and reported 317 UOCAVA ballots counted (B14a). Because of these responses, the total number of UOCAVA ballots received at the state level was lower than the total number of UOCAVA ballots counted, and the percentage of counted ballots exceeded 100% in Idaho.
- [3] Louisiana noted in a survey comment that "[T]he registrar sometimes transmits multiple ballots to voter (i.e. the voter did not [receive] the original ballot or the original ballot is returned as undeliverable)."
- [4] Montana noted in a survey comment that "[B]allots issued may exceed voter registration due to replacement ballot issued."
- [5] New York noted in a survey comment that "While the UOCAVA data reflects information provided by the counties, it does not address the variable that voters may return more than one ballot. The following further addresses this variable:
 - (1) If voters have electronic access to their ballot, they could potentially download and print the documents more than once and subsequently return them to the county boards.
 - (2) Some county boards mail a ballot to every UOCAVA voter, regardless of their transmission preference. Due to this, voters who already received their ballot electronically, completed and returned it, may subsequently receive a physical ballot in the mail. This may result in such voters returning this additional ballot.
 - (3) Additional data collected by NYS BOE [New York State Board of Elections] has shown that more than 1700 UOCAVA voters returned multiple ballots, although the data does not report how many ballots each of these voters returned."
- [6] The Northern Mariana Islands and the U.S. Virgin Islands reported that items related to rejected UOCAVA absentee ballots did not apply.
- [7] Puerto Rico reported that data in items related to rejected UOCAVA absentee ballots did not apply.
- [8] Rhode Island noted in a survey comment that "[A]ccording to RI general law all UOCAVA mail ballots are consolidated into one mail ballot category."
- [9] South Carolina noted in a survey comment that "UOCAVA ballots counted equals UOCAVA ballots returned before deadline. No data available on UOCAVA ballots that may have been challenged."
- [10] The U.S. Virgin Islands reported that items related to rejected UOCAVA absentee ballots did not apply, with a survey comment that "[T]he five voters did not return their ballots that were sent to them."
- [11] In Wisconsin, other methods of transmitting UOCAVA ballots include online ballot delivery, fax, or email. There were some UOCAVA voters who voted at the polls on Election Day, rather than by UOCAVA absentee ballot; these voters are not included in Section B but are included in the numbers for Section D. Wisconsin does not have a postmark requirement for absentee ballots; absentee ballots must be received by the local clerk before polls close on Election Day. Many Wisconsin jurisdictions track the return of ballots received after Election Day, but they are not required to do so. Counts reported for "Ballot not received on time/missed deadline" represent the ballots that have been tracked in this way. In Wisconsin, ballots missing a postmark are counted if they otherwise qualify; therefore, there are no ballots rejected for this reason.

UOCAVA Table 4 Data Notes:

General Notes:

- Casewise deletion at the state level was used in calculating national percentages. The percentage calculations at the national level (U.S. Total) only used data from those states that provided data for the numerator and denominator of the calculation.
- Negative numbers in the Not Categorized FWABs category indicate that the sum of counted and rejected FWABs account for more than the total number of FWABs received as reported by the state.
- The EAVS tracks data on FWABs that were rejected because they were received after the ballot receipt deadline (B25), because the voter's regular absentee ballot was received and counted (B26), and for other reasons (B27).
- [1] In California, a large number of FWAB rejections occurred because regular vote-by-mail ballots were already returned and counted for the same voter, and because of missing signatures, incomplete information, or receipt after deadline.
- [2] Connecticut and Utah reported that data on items related to FWABs were not available.
- [3] Georgia, Iowa, Oregon, and South Carolina reported that data on items related to FWABs were not available because FWABs cannot be distinguished from regular UOCAVA absentee ballots.
- [4] Kentucky reported that data on items related to counted and rejected FWABs were not available. This state also noted in a survey comment that "[R]eject reason not tracked."
- [5] Michigan noted in a survey comment that "[A]II FWABs received were either counted, received a regular ballot that was counted, or arrived late."
- [6] In New Mexico, the reason for rejection is not tracked by counties at this time.
- [7] The Northern Mariana Islands reported that data on items related to FWABs were not available, with a survey comment that "[T]he election statute does not allow for Federal Write-in Absentee Ballot."
- [8] Ohio noted for multiple counties that the "[T]otal in B23a does include B26a. Source information [for military/overseas voters] for B26a is not tracked. Because of this, B23b + B23c will not always equal B23a."
- [9] Rhode Island noted in a survey comment that "[A]ccording to RI general law all UOCAVA mail ballots are consolidated into one mail ballot category."
- [10] The U.S. Virgin Islands reported that data on items related to FWABs were not available.
- [11] Vermont reported that data on FWABs were not available.
- [12] Local election officials in Virginia do not enter information relating to rejected FWABs into the state's central system and only enter information on FWABs that are accepted and counted.
- [13] In Wisconsin, many jurisdictions track the return of ballots received after Election Day but are not required to do so. The counts reported in "Total number of FWABs rejected because it was received after the ballot receipt deadline" [B25a] are limited to ballots in jurisdictions that recorded these in the statewide database.

Chapter 5. Survey Methodology and Procedures

Since 2004, the U.S. Election Assistance Commission (EAC) has conducted the Election Administration and Voting Survey (EAVS) following each federal general election. The project collects data on election policies, voter registration, voting by individuals covered by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA), mail voting, in-person voting, poll workers and polling places, provisional voting, election technology, and turnout. All U.S. states, U.S. territories, and the District of Columbia are included in the EAVS.¹ The EAVS helps the EAC meet its mandate under the Help America Vote Act (HAVA) to serve as a national clearinghouse and resource for the compilation of information and the review of procedures with respect to the administration of federal elections.

The EAVS collectively consists of two surveys administered separately: The Election Administration Policy Survey (Policy Survey), which collects data on state election policies and procedures, was administered from August to December 2020. The information collected through the Policy Survey helps provide context to the data reported through the EAVS. The EAVS, which collects data about registrations, voters, and ballots in the 2020 general election, was administered from December 2020 to July 2021. The data collected through the EAVS allow states to satisfy their data reporting requirements established by the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA) and UOCAVA and provide a detailed snapshot of how general elections are administered in the United States every two years.

This report relies on EAVS data submitted and certified by 50 states, the District of Columbia, and five U.S. territories. Data for each state were collected at the jurisdiction level, with 6,460 of the 6,460 jurisdictions nationwide (100%) submitting at least partial data in 2020.² Appendix A of this chapter shows the number of jurisdictions and the response rate by state (overall and for each section of the EAVS).

204 | Survey Methodology and Procedures

¹ Throughout this report, unless otherwise specified, the term "state" can be understood to apply to the 50 U.S. states, the District of Columbia and five U.S. territories (American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands) that submit Election Administration Policy Survey and EAVS data. Puerto Rico provides EAVS data only in presidential election years, as it does not hold elections for federal candidates in midterm election years. American Samoa did not participate in the 2016 EAVS. The Northern Mariana Islands participated in the EAVS for the first time in 2020.
² What constitutes a jurisdiction for EAVS reporting is defined by how each state chose to provide data. For the 2020 EAVS, most states reported data on the county level (or county equivalent, such as parishes for Louisiana). Illinois, Maryland, Missouri, and Virginia reported data for independent cities in addition to counties. The territories, the District of Columbia, and Alaska each reported as a single jurisdiction. Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Wisconsin reported data on the township level. Maine also reported its UOCAVA data in Section B as a separate jurisdiction, because this information was only collected at the state level. Michigan reported data for the county level, but most election administration activities take place in the 1,520 local election jurisdictions in the state. See Appendix A in this chapter for a breakdown of the number of jurisdictions reported in each state. Elections for Kalawao County in Hawaii are administered by Maui County; although Kalawao is included as a jurisdiction in the EAVS data, Kalawao's data are included with Maui's data.

Survey Questions

The 2020 Policy Survey consisted of 80 questions (41 required questions, 23 follow-up questions based on a state's responses to the required questions, and 16 optional comments boxes). Of these, 58 were single-select or multiselect questions, 20 were open-ended with a text response, and two were hybrid single-select and text questions.

The 2020 EAVS consisted of 407 questions (217 required, 79 follow-up questions based on a jurisdiction's responses to the required questions, 77 optional questions based on whether a jurisdiction had additional data to provide, and 34 optional comments boxes). Of these questions, 253 were fill in the blank with a numerical response, 37 were item descriptions, 65 were single-select questions, and 52 were open-ended with a text response.

The content of the questions in the EAVS has largely been unchanged since the 2008 survey, although questions are periodically removed, updated, or reordered. The Policy Survey was significantly reorganized in 2018 and was converted to a set of closed-ended questions. The 2020 Policy Survey was significantly revised and expanded from the 2018 survey. The full set of EAVS and Policy Survey questions can be found at https://www.eac.gov/research-and-data/datasets-codebooks-and-surveys.

The following sections detail the data collected by these surveys and the changes that were made to the questions from the 2018 versions. In 2020, the primary changes to the survey questions involved:

- Adding Policy Survey questions that could be used to validate EAVS items.
- Removing a redundant EAVS question, adding one new EAVS question, and adding two subquestions to an existing EAVS question.
- Clarifying instructions to make completion easier for election officials and to improve data quality.

Policy Survey

Since 2008, the EAVS has been accompanied by a survey that collects information on states' election policies and practices to provide greater context for the jurisdiction-level data collected through the EAVS. This originally took the form of the Statutory Overview, which consisted of openended questions on statutory requirements for various parts of the election process, asking states to report information on their election laws and policies. However, the open-ended format made it difficult to interpret states' statutory language, identify patterns in election practices, and draw meaningful comparisons between states.

Beginning with the 2018 EAVS, the Statutory Overview was significantly redesigned and renamed the Policy Survey. The survey now uses closed-ended questions and is intended to capture states' broad policies rather than to represent a comprehensive overview of state statutory language. This allows for greater ease in interpreting the results, creating comparisons across states, and providing context in understanding the EAVS data. The Policy Survey questions are designed to map onto the EAVS data questions so that the two surveys can be used in concert.

The 2020 Policy Survey collected information on election infrastructure; how the state answers the EAVS; voter registration and list maintenance; election technology; mail voting; in-person voting before Election Day; vote centers; UOCAVA voting; provisional voting; election certification, recounts, and audits; voter identification; and how criminal convictions affect voting. The 2020 Policy Survey was significantly revised and expanded compared to the 2018 survey. New additions to the Policy Survey included:

New Question for 2020	Description
Q1, Q1a, Q2, Q2a, Q2b, and Q2c	Information on a state's election infrastructure, including the name, title, and duties of the chief state election official; the names and EAVS responsibilities of state election offices; the names and EAVS responsibilities of local election offices; whether any jurisdictions had been added or consolidated since the 2018 EAVS; and contact information (including the office name, physical address, mailing address, phone number, website, and email address) for all state and local election offices within the state.
Q6a and Q6b	Information on how a state implements its automatic or automated voter registration process, including how individuals could decline to be registered.
Q7b	Features incorporated into a state's online registration system.
Q8	Online voting information search tools available on the state's election website.
Q10	Preregistration of voters before they turn 18 years of age.
Q11, Q11a, Q11b	Whether the state designates certain voters as inactive, and if so, what actions would result in an active voter being designated as inactive and what actions would result in an inactive voter being designated as active.
Q12	Whether state officials, local officials, or both are responsible for modifying or removing voter registration records.
Q13, Q13a	Whether the state sends confirmation notices, whether the confirmation notices are sent pursuant to the NVRA, pursuant to state statute, or formal administrative rule or guidance, and which types of voters are sent confirmation notices.
Q14	What data sources a state uses to identify potentially ineligible voters on their voter registration rolls.
Q15, Q15a	Policy on voting system testing and certification and what type of testing and certification is required.
Q16, Q16a	Whether electronic poll books are used in the state and whether testing and certification for those electronic poll books is required.
Q21	How long a state tracks mailed ballots for inclusion in its EAVS Section C data.
Q22	What types of markings satisfy the state's postmark requirement for mailed ballots.
Q23	Which voters may receive ballots electronically.
Q30	The deadline for overseas UOCAVA voters to return their ballots. This question was designed to match a question on domestic military UOCAVA voters that had been in the 2018 Policy Survey but was renumbered and redesigned for 2020 (Q29).

New Question for 2020	Description
Q31	Whether UOCAVA ballots have different postmark requirements for mailed ballots.
Q32, Q32a, Q32b	Whether the state uses provisional ballots, and if so, what circumstances warrant a voter being provided a provisional ballot and the deadline for adjudicating provisional ballots.
Q33	State's election certification deadline.
Q35a	What type(s) of audits a state conducts.
Q36a	Deadline for a voter to present valid identification if they do not have identification at the polls and must take further action to prove their identity.

Questions that were significantly revised from the 2018 Policy Survey included:

Significantly Revised from 2018	Description
Q5	Government entities that transmit data to the centralized state database. This question had been Q3 and Q4 in 2018. For 2020, this question was collapsed from three to two subcategories, including a binary yes/no question on whether the government entity transfers data and a single-select, follow-up question with how frequently the data transmission occurs.
Q6	Whether the state registers individuals to vote automatically or via an automated process. This question had previously been Q5 in 2018. The 2020 question clarified the definition of "automatically" and "automated process," provided examples of automated processes, and included a space for comments.
Q6a	Which state agencies participate in automatic or automated voter registration. This question had previously been Q5a in 2018. In 2020, this was changed to a multiselect question with additional answer options that better align with state practices.
Q7	Whether the state has online registration. This question had previously been Q6 in 2018. The 2020 question clarified the definition of online registration and added an answer option for states that could only process registration updates through online registration.
Q7a	Whether a registrant needed a state-issued form of identification in order to register online. This question had previously been Q6a in 2018. The 2020 question clarified that any state-issued identification, not just driver's licenses, would apply to this question.
Q9	Whether a state has same-day voter registration (SDR). This question had previously been Q7 in 2018. The 2020 question included a clarification that an overlap between the availability between the mail balloting period and the close of voter registration should not be considered SDR.
Q9a	The type of SDR offered by the state. This question had previously been Q7 in 2018. The 2020 question was changed from a single-select question to a multiselect question.

Significantly Revised from 2018	Description
Q20	Deadlines for mail voters to return their ballots. This question had previously been Q11 in 2018. The 2020 question restructured the answer options to provide greater clarity, eliminated the answer option for mailed ballots postmarked after Election Day, and included a comments section.
Q24	Types of in-person early voting permitted in a state. This question had previously been Q12 in 2018. The 2020 question asked for what terminology a state used to describe in-person early voting and clarified that hand delivery of mailed ballots by voters should not be considered early voting.
Q24a	Whether an excuse was required for early voting. This question had previously been Q12a in 2018. The 2020 question was updated to match the wording of Q24.
Q25	Whether a state used vote centers. This question had previously been Q13 in 2018. The 2020 question clarified that polling locations that function as a vote center, even if the terminology is not the same, should be included in this question.
Q26	Which Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) submission methods are permitted in the state. This question had previously been Q14 in 2018. The 2020 question clarified that postal mail does not need to be specified, as this mode of submission is required in all states.
Q27	Whether FPCA registration is permanent or temporary. This question had previously been Q15 in 2018. The 2020 question included updated wording to clarify that it applies to how long an FPCA registers a person as a UOCAVA voter.
Q28	How long a voter remains eligible to receive a UOCAVA ballot after registering with an FPCA. This question had previously been Q15 in 2018. The 2020 question provided more extensive answer options.
Q29	Deadline for domestic military UOCAVA voters to return their ballots. This question had previously been Q17 in 2018. The 2020 question was revised to match the format of Q20, which collects data on the deadline for voters to return mailed ballots, and the instructions were updated to specify that the question applies to domestic military UOCAVA voters rather than all UOCAVA voters.
Q32c	How a state would handle a provisional ballot cast in the wrong precinct. This question had previously been Q18 in 2018. The 2020 question included an instruction about the definition of a partially counted provisional ballot.
Q34	Reasons for conducting post-election recounts of ballots. This question had previously been Q19 in 2018. The 2020 question added a definition of "election recount" and included updated answer options.
Q35	Statutory requirements for audits. This question had previously been Q20 in 2018. The 2020 question included revised terminology, a definition of "audit," and the addition of an answer option for other types of post-election tabulation audits.
Q36	Voter identification requirements for non-first-time voters. This question had previously been Q21 in 2018. The 2020 question included additional answer options and clarified that non-government, non-photo identification options could include proof of residence.
Q37	Which populations become ineligible to vote because of disqualifying criminal convictions. This question had previously been Q22 in 2018. The 2020 question included revised question wording and was changed to a multiselect question.

Significantly Revised from 2018	Description
Q37a	How long people with disqualifying felony convictions lose their ability to vote. This question had previously been Q23 in 2018. The 2020 question was changed to a multiselect question, added an answer option for payment of outstanding fines, and the answer options were reworded to be mutually exclusive.
Q37b	How people with disqualifying felony convictions can have their voting rights restored. This question had previously been Q24 in 2018. The 2020 question was changed to a multiselect question, the wording of the answer options was clarified, and a comment section was added.

The following questions had no change except for renumbering and, for some, the addition of a comment section:

2020 Numbering	2018 Numbering	Description
Q3	Q1	How the state answers the EAVS.
Q4	Q2	Whether the state has a top-down, bottom-up, or hybrid voter registration database.
Q4a	Q2a	How often bottom-up or hybrid databases transmit information to the state voter registration database.
Q17	Q8	Whether an excuse is required for mail voting.
Q18	Q9	Whether the state, or any jurisdiction within the state, conducted an all-vote-by-mail election for the November 2020 general election.
Q18a	Q9a	Whether the all-vote-by-mail system was used statewide or only in certain jurisdictions for the 2020 general election.
Q19	Q10	Whether permanent mail voting is permitted.
Q19a	Q10a	Which voters are permitted to register as permanent mail voters.
Q25a	Q13a	How vote centers operate within the state.

The 2018 Policy Survey questions on audits of polling place procedures, audits of voting machines, and types of ballots audited were removed for 2020.

Section A: Voter Registration

Section A of the EAVS collects data on voter registration. This includes the number of persons registered and eligible to vote in the November 2020 general election, active and inactive voters, voters who used SDR, registration forms processed between the close of registration for the 2018 general election and the close of registration for the 2020 general election, confirmation notices sent pursuant to the NVRA, and voters removed from the voter registration rolls.

In 2020, changes to this section included the addition of sub-questions on the number of SDRs received on Election Day (A2b) and before Election Day (A2c), in addition to the total provided in A2a. The instructions in this question were also revised to clarify that all SDRs received for the 2020 general election should be reported. In addition, the instructions for A4–A7 were revised to clarify that online voter registrations reported in A4c, A5c, A6c, and A7c should only include registration forms that were completed and submitted through a web-based online registration form system and that SDRs should be categorized according to the mode used to submit the registration application. The instructions for A8 were revised to include a more accurate definition of the term "confirmation notice" and to clarify that notices sent between the close of registration for the November 2018 general election and the close of registration for the November 2020 general election should be reported in this question.

Section B: UOCAVA

Section B of the EAVS collects data on voters covered by UOCAVA. This includes the number of registered UOCAVA voters; FPCAs received and rejected; UOCAVA ballots transmitted, returned, counted, and rejected; and Federal Write-In Absentee Ballots (FWAB) received, counted, and rejected. Most questions in Section B were divided by type of voter (uniformed services members and overseas citizens) and by method of ballot transmission and return (postal mail, email, and other).

In 2014, the UOCAVA section of the EAVS was expanded to include questions from the Federal Voting Assistance Program's (FVAP) Post-Election Quantitative Survey. The goal of combining surveys was to reduce the burden on election officials by asking them to answer a single set of questions about UOCAVA voting rather than answering two surveys that captured many of the same data points. The current format of Section B is the result of a memorandum of understanding between the EAC and FVAP that allows both agencies to collect, share, and evaluate data on the voting experiences of citizens covered under UOCAVA and to fulfill their congressionally mandated requirements to study UOCAVA voters.

In 2020, changes to this section included the addition of question B27. Previously, the questions in the EAVS relating to FWABs only asked for data on FWABs rejected from being received after the ballot receipt deadline or because the voter's regular absentee ballot was received and counted. The addition of B27 allows states to report data on FWABs rejected for other reasons, in total (B27a), for uniformed services voters (B27b), and for overseas citizen voters (B27c). A space was also provided to collect a description of the reasons the FWABs reported in B27 were rejected. In addition, the instructions for question B8 were updated to clarify that ballots transmitted by "other mode" could include fax and online ballot delivery portals.

Section C: Mail Voting

Section C of the EAVS collects data on mail voting. This includes the number of mailed ballots transmitted, returned, counted, and rejected, as well as the number of ballots sent to permanent mail voters.

In 2020, changes to this section included a clarification to the instructions of C1 that all mailed ballots transmitted for the November 2020 general election should be included in this question, and a clarification to the instructions of C2 that ballots transmitted in an all-vote-by-mail state or jurisdiction should not be included in the count of mailed ballots transmitted to permanent absentee voters.

Section D: In-Person Voting and Polling Operations

Section D of the EAVS collects data on in-person voting. This includes the number of ballots cast through in-person voting before and on Election Day, the number of precincts and polling places, and the number of poll workers and the level of difficulty involved in recruiting poll workers. This section was previously called "Total Votes Cast and In-Person Voting" and was renamed in 2020 to reflect the removal of a redundant question about the total votes cast and to better align with the section's focus on in-person voting and the polling operations to support in-person voting.

The removal of the 2018 question on total votes cast caused the questions in Section D to be renumbered. The removed question on total votes cast was redundant with question F1a on the number of votes cast and counted. In addition, the instructions in questions D5–D7 were updated to clarify the definition of a poll worker and to specify how poll workers should be counted. The instructions for D6 were updated to specify that each early voting poll worker should be counted once regardless of how many early voting shifts they worked, and the instructions for D7 were updated to specify that each poll worker should be counted only once, regardless of how many shifts they worked.

Section E: Provisional Ballots

Section E of the EAVS collects data on provisional voting, including provisional ballots submitted, provisional ballot adjudication, and reasons for rejection.

In 2020, changes to this section included a clarification of the instructions in E1b-d that the number of provisional ballots submitted should be recorded. A definition of provisional ballots counted in part was added to the instructions of E1c.

Section F: Voter Participation and Election Technologies

Section F of the EAVS collects data on voter participation and election technologies. This includes total participation in the 2020 general election, how many ballots were cast and counted by mode of participation, the source of participation data, use of electronic and paper poll books, voting equipment used, and the location where votes are tallied. Respondents were also provided the opportunity to share general comments regarding their state's or jurisdiction's Election Day experiences, noteworthy successes, and challenges they overcame when administering the November 2020 general election.

In 2020, changes to this section included a clarification of how participation should be counted in question F1. The 2018 question collected data on the number of voters who participated; this instruction was updated for 2020 to clarify that voters who cast a ballot that was counted should be reported in this question. In addition, question F1e removed the instruction that provisional voters who were given credit in their vote history should be included in this question. The instructions for question F8 were updated to include a more complete description of scanners.

Data Collection Procedures

In compliance with the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995, the EAC submitted the questions for the 2020 Policy Survey and the EAVS for review by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and for public comment. Public comments were collected from October 8, 2019, to December 6, 2019, and from February 11, 2020, to March 12, 2020. The questions were approved under OMB Control No. 3265-0006, expiration date March 31, 2023. The survey questions were made available publicly on the EAC's website on July 8, 2020. Targeted communications with state points of contact (POC) responsible for completing the surveys began on July 7, 2020, and continued regularly throughout the data collection period. These targeted communications aimed to keep states aware of data collection deadlines and resources available to assist them with completing the survey.

The following sections describe each aspect of the EAVS data collection process in more detail.

Needs Assessment

To better understand how state-level officials respond to the EAVS and where they need support, the EAC undertook a systematic assessment of the needs of EAVS POCs in October and November 2019. The goal of these interviews was to better understand each state's EAVS reporting process (including how data is collected, which templates are used, the state's use of technical assistance resources, and data quality) and how improvements could be made to the 2020 EAVS. All state POCs that completed the 2018 EAVS were invited to participate and interviews with 34 states were completed. The EAC created semi-structured interview guides for each participant that also left room for the moderator to probe further.

The information collected through these needs assessment conversations helped the EAC's outreach plan design, shaped the training opportunities provided to each state, and identified states that needed specialized support to complete the EAVS. Based on these conversations, the EAC made improvements to the design and usability of the data collection templates, added supplementary instructions to clarify how respondents were to use the missing data codes in the survey, and released the EAVS data collection templates earlier than in previous years to afford POCs more time to compile their data submissions. During these needs assessment calls, the EAC also encouraged state POCs to review and provide comments on the draft 2020 survey questions, which at the time were available on the Federal Register.

Policy Survey

Invitations to complete the 2020 Policy Survey were sent to all 56 states, territories, and districts on August 3, 2020. The Policy Survey data are collected in advance of EAVS data collection to reduce respondent burden and to allow the EAC to create data validation rules for the EAVS data. The Policy Survey was completed through an online survey; this survey had undergone usability testing with POCs from nine states and territories in June and July 2020, and edits to the survey based on the results of this testing were completed in advance of the survey's launch.³ Periodic reminders were issued to POCs during the data collection period. All 56 states, territories, and districts submitted their Policy Survey data by December 15, 2020. When the answer options within a question did not fully capture a state's policy, POCs were encouraged to provide comments with further explanation.

The 2020 Policy Survey had a series of questions about the contact information of state and local election offices. The EAC collected this contact information from state election websites and official registers in May and June 2020. This information was pre-populated into the online Policy Survey data collection tool and was provided to POCs to review and correct as they completed the Policy Survey. Because this data contains personally identifiable information (PII), it is not part of the public data release.

Once received, each Policy Survey submission was reviewed for completeness. Through these reviews and through further reviews conducted once each state's EAVS submission was received, the EAC made Policy Survey corrections for 37 states before the end of the EAVS data collection period.

For the first time, the EAC incorporated a state's Policy Survey submission directly into the EAVS data collection template validations in 2020. This means that a state's 2020 EAVS data collection templates could not be released until the state's Policy Survey submission was finalized.

EAVS

The EAVS data collection period was opened to 46 states on November 9, 2020. The data collection was opened to the 10 remaining states once their Policy Survey submissions were received and their templates were finalized; all data collection templates were released to states by December 18, 2020. The EAVS data collection period ended in July 2021. Data submissions from all 56 states were received by that date, with a response rate of 100% of states. After providing final data, states' chief election officials certified their Policy Survey and EAVS as complete and correct to the best of their knowledge.

To build on the needs assessment conversations that were completed in October and November 2019, the EAC completed pre-survey outreach calls with officials from states that had new designated POCs for the 2020 EAVS or that had requested further follow-up after the needs assessment calls. Fifteen states were invited to participate in the outreach calls, and 10 states completed calls in August of 2020. During these interviews, the EAC provided an overview of the project timeline and the types of data collected in the Policy Survey and the EAVS, notified the POCs of the help desk support and other resources that would be provided as part of the 2020 EAVS, probed POCs on data issues from the 2018 EAVS, and whether the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic was impacting the state's election policies or could affect its ability to submit EAVS data in a timely manner. These conversations helped ensure that the EAC was prepared to provide adequate support to states as they completed their EAVS data collection.

Data Collection Templates

Given the diversity in how states respond to the EAVS, creating data templates that accommodate the needs of all states and all local jurisdictions is especially challenging. The 2020 EAVS data were collected using two data collection templates:

- The Excel template was a flat data format that allowed POCs to copy and paste large amounts of data, such as from a report generated from the state's centralized election database. Each EAVS item was listed in a column in the Excel template and each EAVS jurisdiction within the state was listed in a row. States with multiple jurisdictions were required to submit their data through the Excel template.
- The online template was an item-by-item survey hosted online that guided respondents through entering their responses. This template was primarily intended to be used by jurisdictions that entered EAVS data, although some states entered data into the online template on behalf of some or all of their jurisdictions. The data from the online template was exported to an Excel file that matched the format of the Excel data collection template.

Usability testing of the draft online template was completed with nine local election officials between July and August 2020, and edits to the survey based on the results of this testing were completed in advance of the online template's launch.

The EAC pre-populated data into the online template for four states and into the Excel template for one state. Pre-fill data was provided by state POCs via the Excel template or via an email or phone request that provided detail on which items were to be populated.

Both data collection templates employed a variety of error-checking data validations to reduce response burden and to increase data quality.

Data Validation

One of the key issues associated with any data collection project is ensuring that the data collected are as accurate as possible. Given the number of survey questions, their complexity and granularity, and the variety of approaches in how state and local jurisdictions provide responses, it can be easy to make data entry mistakes or report data in an incorrect survey item. All 2020 EAVS data collection templates included built-in internal and external validation checks that flagged specific types of potential errors within a data submission.

The validation checks were designed to flag common data issues so that respondents were aware of them before submitting their data to the EAC. In response to these validations, states and jurisdictions were encouraged to review their data, correct it if needed, and use the comments fields to explain any peculiarities and give context to the data that were being reported.

In addition, once a state submitted data for review by the EAC, additional data reviews were conducted by trained data analysts. These reviews checked for missing data, internal math and logic issues, conflicts with Policy Survey responses, and significant changes compared to 2016 EAVS data.⁴ The results of this review were provided to state POCs in a written memo, along with a file that had sample rates and percentages calculated using their draft submission. These sample rates and percentages were provided to assist POCs with identifying results that did not align with their expectations, so they could be corrected in the final submission.

A complete list of all validation checks that were built into the data collection templates and additional data validations that were conducted for draft submissions can be found in Appendices B and C of this chapter. In general, there were five types of data validations.

Math Validations

Many items in the EAVS asked respondents to report a total and then divide that total into subcategories. The math validations within the templates checked that the sum of the subcategories equaled the reported total of the overall category. For example, if the total number of voters who cast a ballot that was counted in the 2020 general election did not match the sum of the number of voters who used different modes of voting, then the respondent was asked to review the numbers reported in these items.⁵

Logic Validations

Logic validations identified when a value in the survey was incompatible with a response provided in another related question in the survey. For example, if the number of mailed ballots counted by a jurisdiction exceeded the number of mailed ballots that had been returned by voters, then the respondent was asked to review these items.⁶

Policy Survey Validations

These validations identified instances in which an EAVS item conflicted with the Policy Survey data that had been submitted by the state. For example, if a state reported having an online voter registration system through which an individual could submit a voter registration application, but reported "does not apply" to EAVS items relating to the number of voter registration forms submitted through online sources, then the validations would highlight that a conflict existed between the respondent's EAVS and Policy Survey data and would ask the respondent to review the EAVS items and contact the EAC if the Policy Survey response needed to be updated.⁷

⁴ The 2016 EAVS was used as a point of comparison in the data reviews, because it was the most recent presidential election.

⁵ The total number of voters participating in the 2020 general election was reported in item F1a in the 2020 EAVS. The number of voters who participated using different modes of voting were items F1b through F1h.

⁶ The number of mailed ballots counted by a jurisdiction was reported in item C3a in the 2020 EAVS. The number of mailed ballots returned by voters was reported in item C1b.

⁷ Data on states' policies regarding online voter registration were reported in item Q7 in the Policy Survey. The number of total, new, duplicate, and rejected registrations received through online registration systems were reported in items A4c, A5c, A6c, and A7c, respectively, of EAVS.

Missing Items

With the exception of comment boxes and "other" subcategories for reporting data beyond what was specified in a question, all items in the EAVS required a response. An alert appeared if a response to a required item was not provided. For example, if a respondent reported the total number of registered voters in their jurisdiction but not the number of active and inactive registered voters, the latter items would be flagged with a request that the respondent should report "does not apply" (if their state does not have an applicable law or policy), "data not available" (if the data for an item is not tracked), or zero (if no instance of an item occurred) rather than leave the item blank.8

Valid Skips

For the first time, in 2020, the EAC introduced a valid skip code to the EAVS data. This code was automatically filled in by the template validations when an item did not require an answer because of a response to a previous item in the survey. The use of the valid skip code is distinct from the use of the "does not apply" code (for when a jurisdiction does not have a law or policy in place that allows for the type of election participation in the question) and the "data not available" code (for when the data for a type of election participation is not tracked). For instance, if a jurisdiction indicated in EAVS question F5a that it did not use direct-recording electronic (DRE) voting machines without a voter-verified paper audit trail (VVPAT), then items F5b through F5d, relating to the make and model of equipment, the number deployed, and the usage of the equipment, were filled as "valid skip" by the template validations.

Technical Assistance

Technical assistance was provided through the duration of the Policy Survey and the EAVS data collection periods. Help desk support was provided for 20 hours each week from August 3, 2020, to December 31, 2020, and for 50 hours each week from January 4, 2021, to March 30, 2021. State and local EAVS respondents could request assistance via email or phone. A team of trained technical assistants provided support on all aspects of the survey data collection processes. A total of 812 support tickets were received from all 56 states, territories, and districts. The most common inquiries were related to accessing the data collection templates, re-opening online templates that had been submitted prematurely, how data transferred between the online template and the Excel template, and questions about survey definitions (including SDR, how to classify registration forms in questions A3–A7, and what types of voting should be counted as in-person early voting for purposes of EAVS).

After the first round of EAVS data was collected in March 2021, a group of subject matter experts (SME) from the EAC conducted an extra quality control review via video conference. All states and territories were invited to participate and 51 out of 56 participated. The extra quality check was necessary due to the new voting options throughout the country for the 2020 general election and due to challenges caused by the COVID-19 pandemic. Thirty-eight of the states and territories that were interviewed requested data changes or added/amended footnotes to this report.

⁸ The total number of registered voters for the 2020 general election was reported in item A1a in the EAVS. The number of active registered voters was item A1b. The number of inactive registered voters was item A1c.

Resources for EAVS Respondents

In addition to providing direct, customized technical assistance, the EAC made a wide variety of written and video training resources available to survey respondents on demand. A website was established to house these resources and to provide a secure place for state EAVS POCs to upload data submissions and other documents for the EAC to review.

The resources on this website included PDF copies of the Policy Survey and EAVS questions; a link to the online template; six videos that outlined the questions and instructions in the six sections of the EAVS; three video webinars that provided guidance on the overall EAVS process, on collecting data from local jurisdictions, and for state POCs new to EAVS data collection; eleven newsletters that were released between August 2020 and March 2021; an extensive user guide that provided step-by-step instructions for both data collection templates; a policy guide approved by the EAC Commissioners that provided information to election officials responsible for completing EAVS; and an Excel crosswalk that documented survey changes from 2018 to 2020.

The website also contained a section that was restricted to state POCs. This section had copies of the state's 2016 and 2018 EAVS and the state's Statutory Overview or Policy Survey data available for download, a table that tracked the online template progress for each jurisdiction within the state, and the capacity for POCs to upload files for the EAC to review.

Data Reporting and Calculations

In 2020, most EAVS data were reported at the local jurisdiction level. For the purposes of this report, for states that have multiple jurisdictions, state totals were calculated by summing the data from all jurisdictions within a state. National totals were calculated by summing the state-level totals.

Whenever possible, this report uses percentages and rates rather than raw numbers to make comparisons across states and across election years. For these calculations, items were combined as necessary to create the numerator and denominator and to produce a percentage or rate. For example, the following formula was used to calculate the percentage of transmitted mailed ballots that were returned by voters for the 2020 general election:

$$\frac{\textit{Total number of mailed ballots returned by voters (C1b)}}{\textit{Total number of mailed ballots transmitted by election of fices (C1a)}} \times 100$$

Percentages at the national level were calculated using casewise missing data deletion at the state level. Only states that had data for both the numerator and denominator for a calculation were included when reporting percentages at the national level. Responses of "does not apply," "data not available," and "valid skip" were considered missing for purposes of creating these calculations. Casewise deletion was used in the analysis for this report to avoid overinflating the denominator of the calculations. This is especially applicable when states do not track data for a particular item, or when election policy differences mean that not all states can provide data for an item. For example, online registration is not available in every state, so the calculation of the nationwide percentage of registrations that were received online will only use data from states that reported at least one online registration. Otherwise, the national percentage would include in the denominator (in this case, the total number of registrations received) data from states that do not have online registration, thus underestimating the percentage of online registrations that were received.⁹

This decision rule means that there were instances in which the percentages reported at the national level for a given calculation in this report did not use data from every state. Because each category was calculated independently of others and only states that reported data in both the numerator and the denominator were included in the analysis, casewise deletion also created instances in which percentages do not sum to 100%. Those cases in which data were not available for every state to calculate the percentage at the national level are noted in the footnotes throughout this report.

Recommendations for Analyzing and Interpreting the EAVS Data

The most up-to-date version of the 2020 EAVS and Policy Survey data can always be found on the EAC's website (https://www.eac.gov/research-and-data/datasets-codebooks-and-surveys). If the EAC is notified by a state of an error or omission in the state's data, the agency will issue the updated EAVS and Policy Survey data sets on its website with an errata note of changes that have been made to the newly issued data sets. Updated data sets will be issued on a quarterly basis.

There are four types of data missingness codes used in the 2020 Policy Survey and EAVS data:

- Valid skip (-77): This code indicates that no response is expected based on a previous survey response. For instance, in the Policy Survey, if a state answered "no" to Q7 to indicate that it does not provide an option for voters to register to vote online, then items Q7a and Q7b, which collect further information on the specifics of a state's online registration system, would be marked as -77. In the EAVS, if a state indicates in item A4c, the total number of registration forms submitted online, that this question does not apply, then items A5c, A6c, and A7c, which collect data on new, duplicate, and rejected registrations submitted online, would be marked as -77.
- Does not apply (-88): This code indicates that a question does not apply to a state, because the state does not have an applicable policy in place. For instance, a response of -88 in item A4c of the EAVS indicates that the state does not have online registration.
- Data not available (-99): This code indicates that the data for an item cannot be tracked. For instance, a response of -99 in item A4c of the EAVS indicates that the state accepts online voter registrations but cannot track the number of these registrations that were submitted by voters.
- Refused (-100): This code indicates that a response was expected but was not provided. This code is only used in the Policy Survey data.

⁹ The total number of registration applications received between the close of registration for the 2018 general election and the close of registration for the 2020 general election was collected in item A3a. The total number of registration applications received online between the close of registration for the 2018 general election and the close of registration for the 2020 general election was collected in item A4c. The application of casewise deletion means that only states that reported at least one registration in both of these items on a statewide level were included in the calculation of the percentage of registration applications received through online sources.

When summing the EAVS data, either on a state or a national level, analysts should take care to treat these missingness codes as missing items and not as negative numbers.

Users of the EAVS data are also encouraged to refer to the comments that accompany all of the EAVS items and many of the Policy Survey items. During data collection, the EAC encouraged all respondents to use these comments to provide context to their responses. In many cases, these comments contain valuable information about how state and jurisdiction respondents formulated their responses, why some responses do not align with the data validations outlined in this chapter, or context about how the 2020 general election was conducted in a state or jurisdiction. If data users have further questions about the data that have been submitted, they are encouraged to contact states or jurisdictions directly with further questions.

The EAC also encourages data users to take care when calculating percentages to ensure that the correct EAVS items are used. Appendix D of this chapter contains recommendations for how to calculate EAVS rates using the 2020 data. These recommendations align with how rates were calculated throughout this report.

This report used the 1-year American Community Survey (ACS) state estimates for the 2019 citizen voting age population (CVAP) instead of the 5-year estimate to ensure that the CVAP was as current as possible. The CVAP estimates for 2020 were not available by the time this report was finalized. Once they are released by the U.S. Census Bureau, the 2020 CVAP estimates can be found at https://data.census.gov/. Data analysts should import both the state- and county-level geographies and merge them into the EAVS data using the Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS) code. For states that have subcounty jurisdictions, these jurisdictions will need to be aggregated at the county level in order to merge in the CVAP data. To For this report, the state-level CVAP was used for Alaska and Puerto Rico, as both reported as a single EAVS jurisdiction. Finally, the Census Bureau does not provide CVAP estimates for the U.S. territories (with the exception of Puerto Rico), so no CVAP estimate was available for American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Survey Response Rate Data Notes:

General Notes:

- Response rates are calculated as the percentage of jurisdictional responses within a state that were not left blank (i.e., had a numerical response of zero or greater or a response of "data not available," "does not apply," or "valid skip").
- Item descriptions and optional survey comments were not included in the response rate calculation.
- [1] Information for Kalawao County, Hawaii was reported with Maui County.
- [2] Maine reported its UOCAVA data on a statewide level, not a jurisdiction level.

NOTICE OF REJECTED APPLICATION FOR BALLOT BY MAIL

Required Personal Identification Number is Not Associated with Your Voter Record

Your Application for a Ballot by Mail has been received and reviewed, but is defective for the reason stated below. New Texas Law requires that a voter must give his or her Texas Driver's License number, Texas Personal Identification Card number, Texas Election Identification Certificate number or the last 4 digits of his or her Social Security number on an Application for Ballot by Mail. The number provided must be a part of the voter's registration record in order for the voter to vote by mail.

Your voter registration record does not have a Texas Driver's License Number, Texas Personal Identification Card Number, Election Identification Certificate Number or Last 4 digits of a Social Security Number associated with it.

There are Two Ways to Add the Required Numbers to Your Voter Registration Record

Submit an Updated Voter Registration Application - Enclosed is a Postage Paid Voter Registration Application. Complete the application according to its instructions. Adding both the Driver's License or Personal Identification Card number AND the last 4 digits of your Social Security number to your voter registration record is very helpful to the Early Voting Clerk and will make applying for a Ballot by Mail easier in future elections.

OR

Update Your Information Online - You may update your voter registration record online at www.Texas.gov

To access the voter registration portal via Texas.gov, you must have:

- Your Texas Driver's License or Texas Personal Identification Card
- The audit number located on your Texas Driver's License or Texas Personal Identification Card
- Your Social Security Number
- Your Voter Registration Number (VUID#).

If you do not have a personal identification number associated with your voter registration record, you must add it before you will be allowed to vote by mail. Adding the missing numbers to your voter registration record takes effect immediately, but if you change your address it will take 30 days for the update to take effect from the day the voter registrar receives your new application.

Note: You cannot add the required personal identification numbers to your voter registration record by submitting a new Application for Ballot by Mail.

If you have any questions or concerns about making an update to your voter registration record for a missing personal identification number, please contact the Early Voting Clerk's Office at:

NOTIFICACIÓN DE SOLICITUD DE BOLETA POSTAL RECHAZADA

El Número de Identificación Personal Requerido No Está Asociado Con Su Registro de Votante

Su Solicitud de Boleta Postal ha sido recibida y revisada, pero es defectuosa por la razón que se indica a continuación. La nueva ley de Texas exige que el votante dé su Número de Licencia de Conducir de Texas, el Número de su Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas, el Número de su Certificado de Identificación Electoral de Texas o los últimos 4 dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social en la Solicitud de Boleta Postal. El número proporcionado debe ser parte del registro del votante para que el votante pueda votar por correo.

Su registro de votante no tiene un Número de Licencia de Conducir de Texas, un Número de Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas, Certificado de Identificación Electoral de Texas o los últimos 4 dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social asociado con él.

Hay Dos Maneras de Añadir los Números Requeridos a Su Registro de Registro de Votante

Presentar una Solicitud de Registro de Votantes Actualizada - Se adjunta una Solicitud de Registro de Votantes con franqueo pagado. Complete la solicitud de acuerdo con sus instrucciones. Añadir tanto el Número de la Licencia de Conducir o de la Tarjeta de Identificación Personal como los últimos 4 dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social a su registro de votante es muy útil para el Secretario de Votación Adelantada y facilitará la solicitud de una Boleta Postal en elecciones futuras.

Actualice su Información en Línea — Puede actualizar su registro de votantes en línea en www.Texas.gov

- El número de auditoría que se encuentra en su Licencia de Conducir de Texas o Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas
- Su Número de Seguro Social
- Su Número de Registro de Votante (VUID#).

ELECTION ADVISORY NO. 2022-08

TO: Election Officials

FROM: Keith Ingram, Director, Elections Division

DATE: January 28, 2022

RE: NEW LAW: Senate Bill 1 – Opportunity to Correct Defects on Application for a Ballot by Mail and Carrier Envelope

Senate Bill 1 (87th Leg., 2nd C.S., 2021) added new identification requirements related to the ballot by mail process. SB 1 took effect on December 2, 2021. Any elections ordered on or after December 2, 2021, must adhere to the changes in law made by SB 1 and the procedures outlined in this advisory.

This advisory details the new requirements on the Application for Ballot by Mail (ABBM) form and the carrier envelope, and it outlines the new process that allows voters to correct certain defects on their ABBM or carrier envelope. As authorized by the Legislature, the Secretary of State is prescribing these procedures to implement the corrective action process mandated in SB 1. (Secs. 87.0271(f), 87.0411(f), Texas Election Code).

All statutory references in this advisory are to the Texas Election Code ("the Code"), unless otherwise indicated.

New Requirements for Application for Ballot by Mail (ABBM)

As amended by SB 1, Section 84.002 of the Election Code provides that a voter who seeks to vote by mail must include one of the following on their ABBM:

- The number of the applicant's driver's license, election identification certificate (EIC), or personal identification card issued by the Department of Public Safety (DPS);
- The last four digits of the applicant's social security number, if the applicant has not been issued a DPS number; or
- A statement that the applicant has not been issued one of these numbers. (Sec. 84.002(a)(1-a)).

A person may use the number of a DPS-issued driver's license, EIC, or personal identification card that has expired for the purpose of fulfilling the identity requirements in Section 84.002(a)(1-a) if the license or identification is otherwise valid. (Sec. 84.002(b-1)).

The official ABBM form has been revised to include a space for the required identification information. (Sec. 84.011). If a voter requests an ABBM form, the county must send the new form that includes a space for the identification information. If a voter uses an old version of the ABBM form, the early voting clerk must follow the procedures outlined below in rejecting the application. Please be advised that there are other changes to the ABBM form that will be addressed in a separate advisory.

Requirements for Processing Applications for Ballot by Mail

It is the early voting clerk's responsibility to review applications for ballot by mail, determine whether the applicant is entitled to vote by mail, and provide ballot materials to the voter. (Secs. 86.001, 86.002).

Section 86.001 outlines the process that an early voting clerk must follow when reviewing a voter's submitted ABBM. Among other things, the early voting clerk must verify that the personal identification information provided by the voter on the application—i.e., a DPS-issued driver's license, EIC, or personal identification card number, the last four digits of the applicant's social security number, or a statement that the applicant has not been issued any of these numbers—identifies the same voter identified on the applicant's voter registration record. (Sec. 86.001(f)).

If the voter fails to provide any of the required identification information on the ABBM or the information provided by the voter on the ABBM does not match the information on the voter's voter registration record, the early voting clerk shall reject the ABBM and provide notice of the rejection (Form 6-3, Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail – Missing or Incorrect Personal Identification Number). Similarly, if the voter provides one or both of the required identification numbers but the voter's voter registration record does not contain either number, the early voting clerk must reject the ABBM and promptly notify the voter of the rejection (Form 6-4, Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail - Required Personal Identification Number Not Associated with Voter Record).

These SOS-prescribed notices include instructions on how the voter can correct the applicable defect online, as required by Section 86.001(f-1). If the rejection occurs on or before the 18th day before election day, the early voting clerk must also send the voter a new ABBM along with the rejection notice. (Sec. 86.008). Section 86.008(d) further provides that the early voting clerk may deliver a second ABBM to a voter in person if the defective original ABBM is timely and the clerk may receive, before the deadline, the corrected ABBM in person from the voter, as long as the clerk applies these procedures uniformly to all ABBMs covered by the subsection.

Below, we discuss several scenarios that early voting clerks may encounter in reviewing ABBMs, and we outline the opportunities provided to voters to cure certain ABBM defects, including additional information regarding the forms that the SOS has prescribed for early voting clerks to send voters when notifying them that their ABBMs have been rejected.

Possible Scenarios:

• Scenario 1: Voter provides a DPS-issued driver's license number on the ABBM. The early voting clerk validates that this number matches the driver's license number in the voter's voter registration record. If the voter is otherwise eligible to vote by mail, the early voting clerk must accept the ABBM and send a ballot to the voter.

- Scenario 2: Voter provides a DPS-issued driver's license number on the ABBM. The early voting clerk is unable to validate this number, as the voter registration record contains the voter's social security number but not a driver's license number. The early voting clerk must reject the ABBM and provide notice of the rejection, which must include information explaining how to correct or add information to cure the defect. (Sec.
 86.001(f-1)). See Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail Missing or Incorrect Personal Identification Number.
 - NOTE: If a voter has not provided the required personal identification information by the 11th day before election day, the ABBM will be finally rejected, but the voter may still vote in person if otherwise eligible. (Sec. 84.007(c)).
- Scenario 3: Voter provides the last four digits of their social security number on the ABBM. The voter registration record contains a driver's license number and social security number. The early voting clerk is able to validate that the partial social security number on the ABBM matches the number in the voter's registration record. The early voting clerk must accept the ABBM and send a ballot to the voter.
 - NOTE: As a reminder, the early voting clerk's obligation in reviewing the identification information on an ABBM is to determine if the information provided by the voter on the ABBM identifies the same voter identified on the applicant's voter registration record. (Sec. 86.001(f)).
- Scenario 4: Voter indicates on their ABBM that they have not been issued any of the required personal identification numbers, but the voter registration record contains one or both numbers. The early voting clerk must reject the ABBM and provide notice of the rejection, which must include information explaining how to correct or add information to cure the defect. (Sec. 86.001(f-1)). See Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail Missing or Incorrect Personal Identification Number.

 - NOTE: If a voter has not provided the required personal identification information by the 11th day before election day, the ABBM will be finally rejected, but the voter may still vote in person if otherwise eligible. (Sec. 84.007(c)).
- Scenario 5: Voter provides one of the required personal identification numbers on their ABBM, but the voter's voter registration record does not contain either number. The early voting clerk must reject this ABBM and provide notice of the rejection, which must include instructions on how the voter can update their voter registration record to include the personal identification numbers. (Sec. 86.001(f)). See Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail Required Personal Identification Number Not Associated with Voter Record.
 - NOTE: A voter cannot vote by mail unless at least one of the required numbers is added to the voter's registration record. If the ABBM is otherwise valid, the voter must be given the opportunity to update their voter registration record in order to finish processing the ABBM. The early voting clerk will need to re-check ABBMs in this category to determine if the voter updated their voter registration record with one or more required personal identification numbers. If a voter has not updated their voter registration record by the 11th day before election day, the ABBM will be finally rejected, but the voter may still vote in person if otherwise eligible. (Sec. 84.007(c)).
- Scenario 6: Voter provides both types of personal identification numbers (ex. driver's license number and last four digits of social security number) on their ABBM. The voter registration record contains both types of personal identification numbers; one number on the ABBM matches the record, but the other does not match. Because the early voting clerk is able to validate one of the numbers to the voter's voter registration record (and thus verify the identity of the voter), the clerk must accept the ABBM and send a ballot to the voter.

- Scenario 7: Voter provides both types of personal identification numbers (ex: driver's license number and last four digits of social security number) on their ABBM. The voter registration record only contains the social security number, which matches with the partial number on the ABBM. The early voting clerk must accept the ABBM and send a ballot to the voter.
- Scenario 8: Voter indicates on the ABBM that they have not been issued any of the required personal identification numbers. If the voter's voter registration record does not contain any of these numbers, the early voting clerk must accept the ABBM and send a ballot to the voter.
- Scenario 9: The voter uses an old ABBM form that does not contain any of the required identification information or leaves the personal identification information section blank and does not indicate that they have not been issued any of the required numbers. The early voting clerk must reject the ABBM and provide notice of the rejection, which must include information explaining how to correct or add information to cure the defect. (Sec. 86.001(f-1)). See Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail Missing or Incorrect Personal Identification Number.
 - NOTE: If a voter has not provided the required personal identification information by the 11th day before election day, the ABBM will be finally rejected, but the voter may still vote in person if otherwise eligible. (Sec. 84.007(c)).

Opportunity to Correct Rejection of ABBM

As described above, if the early voting clerk rejects an ABBM because the voter failed to provide any of the required identification information or the information included on the ABBM does not match the voter's voter registration record, the early voting clerk must provide the voter with notice of the rejection in accordance with Section 86.001(c). (Sec. 86.001(f-1)). The notice must include information explaining how to correct the defect by using the online Ballot by Mail Tracker, available at www.votetexas.gov. (Sec. 86.001(f-1)). The SOS has prescribed Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail — Missing or Incorrect Personal Identification Number (Form 6-3) for this rejection notice. If the applicant corrects the missing or incorrect number by validating the required information through the Ballot by Mail Tracker, and this information subsequently identifies the same voter identified on the applicant's voter registration record, the early voting clerk shall provide a ballot to the applicant. (Sec. 86.001(f-2)).

NOTE: The early voting clerk should retain the documentation from TEAM that shows the voter validated their personal identification number(s). This documentation should be retained with the voter's original ABBM and provided to the early voting ballot board so that the board is notified that the defect has been cured.

If the early voting clerk rejects an ABBM because the voter's voter registration record does not contain any of the personal identification information provided on the ABBM, the clerk must offer the voter an opportunity to correct this defect. The notice must include instructions on how the voter can update their voter registration record to include one or more of the required identification numbers by submitting a new voter registration application to the registrar or by validating their personal identification numbers on texas.gov. The SOS has prescribed Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail — Required Personal Identification Number Not Associated with Voter Record (Form 6-4) for this rejection notice.

Missing or incorrect personal identification information on the ABBM or the voter registration record is the only defect that can be corrected on an ABBM. If the application is rejected on any other grounds, a voter must submit a new ABBM if they still wish to vote by mail instead of voting in person. (Secs. 86.001(c), (f), (f-1), 86.008).

Any written notice of an ABBM rejection must state the reason for the rejection and be delivered to the voter at both the voter's residence address and the mailing address on the ABBM, if different. Additionally, if the voter provided an email address on the ABBM, the early voting clerk may also send notification by email of the reason for rejection. (Sec. 86.001(c)).

Please see pages 18-20 of this advisory for additional information regarding forms that SOS has prescribed for use in notifying voters of rejected ABBMs.

Deadline to Correct Defects in Application for Ballot by Mail

If a voter receives a Notice of Rejected Application for a Ballot by Mail or the voter logs into the Ballot by Mail Tracker and sees that there is missing or incorrect personal identification information, the voter must either (1) complete the required validation on the Ballot by Mail Tracker no later than the 11th day before election day, or (2) complete a new ABBM that must be received by the early voting clerk no later than the 11th day before election day. (Secs. 84.007(c), 86.015).

The early voting clerk must review all pending ABBMs that were initially rejected due to missing or incorrect personal identification information. If the applicant did not subsequently provide the missing or corrected identification information, the early voting clerk should send a final rejection notice. The early voting clerk can use the standard Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail form (Form 6-2) and mark reason 16 on the form.

If a voter corrects a defective ABBM after early voting by personal appearance has begun, the early voting clerk should confirm that the voter did not vote in person before sending balloting materials to the voter.

Please review the Secretary of State's election law calendar for additional details about ballot by mail deadlines.

New Requirements for Carrier Envelope

As amended by SB 1, Section 86.002 requires that the carrier envelope include a space that is hidden from view when the envelope is sealed for the voter to enter one of the following: (1) the number of the voter's driver's license, EIC, or personal identification card issued by DPS; (2) the last four digits of the voter's social security number, if the voter has not been issued a DPS number; or (3) a statement that the applicant has not been issued one of these numbers. (Sec. 86.002(g)).

The carrier envelope has been updated to include a place for the voter to add an email address and/or telephone number so that the early voting ballot board or signature verification committee can contact the voter to notify them of a defect in their carrier envelope. Please note that there are other changes to the carrier envelope that will be addressed in a separate advisory.

New Comparison Requirements for Early Voting Ballot Board (EVBB) and Signature Verification Committee (SVC)

Section 87.041 directs the early voting ballot board to determine whether to accept a voted ballot by mail and provides that a ballot can be accepted only if it meets several specified requirements. Based on changes to this provision made by SB 1, the EVBB must now review additional information when qualifying a voted ballot by mail. The EVBB shall only accept a voted ballot by mail if, among other things, the personal identification information provided by the voter on the carrier envelope identifies the same voter identified on the voter's voter registration record. (Sec. 87.041(b)(8)). In performing its assigned duties, the signature verification committee, if established, may also review the personal identification information on the voter's carrier envelope. (Secs. 87.027, 87.0271). If the voter includes an identification number on the carrier envelope, the number on the carrier envelope does not have to match the type of number on the voter's ABBM as long as they are both associated with the voter's registration record.

Rebuttable Presumption

Under Section 87.041, if the voter provides personal identification information on the carrier envelope that matches the voter's registration record, the signatures on the ABBM and the carrier envelope shall be rebuttably presumed to be the signatures of the voter. (Sec. 87.041(d-1)). Thus, the only way to reject a mail ballot due to a signature mismatch is for a member of the SVC or EVBB to rebut this presumption. The presumption may be rebutted by presenting other past signatures on file with the early voting clerk or voter registrar that would support a finding that the signatures on the carrier envelope and ABBM are not those of the same voter.

Any findings by the SVC that the signatures are not those of the same voter can be overridden by the EVBB. (Sec. 87.027(j)). This decision can be overridden even in circumstances when the voter has been provided an opportunity to correct a signature mismatch (notified by phone or email of the defect and subsequent corrective action process), but the voter did not complete the corrective action process. (Sec. 87.027(j)).

Possible Scenarios:

- Scenario 1: Voter provides a personal identification number on the carrier envelope that matches the number in the voter's voter registration record. The SVC or EVBB has completed the verification of personal identification information and should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.
- Scenario 2: Voter provides a personal identification number on the carrier envelope that matches the number in the voter's voter registration record, but it is a different type of number than what the voter listed on the ABBM. (Example: Voter provided last four digits of social security number on ABBM and a driver's license number on carrier envelope.) Because the voter's voter registration record contains both personal identification numbers, the SVC or EVBB is able to verify the voter's identity. The SVC or EVBB should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.

- Scenario 3: Voter provides the last four digits of their social security number on the carrier envelope. The voter registration record contains a driver's license number and social security number. The SVC or EVBB is able to validate that the partial social security number on the carrier envelope matches the number in the voter's voter registration record. The SVC or EVBB should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.
 - NOTE: As explained above with respect to the early voting clerk's acceptance of ABBMs, the obligation of the SVC or EVBB in reviewing the identification information on a carrier envelope is to determine if the information provided by the voter on the envelope identifies the same voter identified on the voter's voter registration record. (Secs. 87.027, 87.0271, 87.041(b)(8), 87.0411).
- Scenario 4: Voter indicates on the carrier envelope that they have not been issued any of the required personal identification numbers, and the voter's voter registration record does not contain any of these numbers. The SVC or EVBB has completed the verification of personal identification information, and it must rely on the signature comparison process for this part of the review. The SVC or EVBB should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.
- Scenario 5: Voter provided one of the required personal identification numbers on the ABBM that matched the voter's voter registration record, but the voter does not include an identification number on the carrier envelope. The SVC or EVBB must notify the voter of their ability to correct this defect in the carrier envelope, as described in more detail below. If the voter timely corrects the defect, and there are no other grounds for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.
- Scenario 6: Voter provided one of the required personal identification numbers on the ABBM that matched the voter's voter registration record, but the voter indicates on the carrier envelope that they have not been issued one of the applicable identification numbers. The SVC or EVBB must notify the voter of their ability to correct this defect in the carrier envelope. If the voter timely corrects the defect, and there are no other grounds for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.

Signature Verification Committee Corrective Action Process

SB 1 added Section 87.0271 of the Code to provide a process by which the signature verification committee, if established, shall offer voters the opportunity to correct certain defects in the required paperwork associated with a voted mail ballot. The signature verification committee is created by the early voting clerk and can be appointed for any election. (Sec. 87.027(a)). The signature verification committee may begin meeting as early as 20 days before election day. (Sec. 87.027(f)).

Because the early voting ballot board in counties with a population of under 100,000 are not permitted to meet to qualify mail ballots until the end of the period for early voting by personal appearance, the Secretary of State's office strongly recommends that all entities create a signature verification committee so that voters will be timely notified of defects in their carrier envelopes. See Section 87.027 for more details on the creation and administration of a signature verification committee.

The following defects are eligible for correction when identified by the signature verification committee (Sec. 87.0271(a)):

- The voter did not sign the carrier envelope certificate.
- The SVC cannot determine whether the signature on the carrier envelope is that of the voter
- The personal identification information required under Section 84.002(a)(1-a) (ABBM) or Section 86.002 (carrier envelope) was missing or contained incorrect information.
- If a voter used a witness for completion of the carrier envelope, the witness information was incomplete.

NOTE: Incomplete information about an assistant cannot be corrected and will result in a rejected mail ballot, but the voter may still vote in person if otherwise eligible.

Only the early voting ballot board has the authority to open a carrier envelope for those voters who submitted their request using an ABBM. (Sec. 87.041(a)). As the SVC does not have the authority to open a carrier envelope, the SVC is unable to determine whether a carrier envelope contains a completed statement of residence (SOR). Because the authority to open a carrier envelope to determine whether a voter submitted a completed SOR lies solely with the early voting ballot board, the SVC cannot notify voters of defects related to a missing SOR.

The signature verification committee can open a sealed carrier envelope, or envelope used for mailing the voted ballot and balloting materials, for voters who submitted their request to vote by mail using an FPCA, as signature sheets are expressly authorized for this process.

Early Voting Ballot Board Corrective Action Process

SB 1 also added Section 87.0411 of the Code to provide a process by which the early voting ballot board shall offer voters the opportunity to correct certain defects on their carrier envelope or in the required paperwork associated with the voted mail ballot. The first day that an EVBB can convene to qualify mail ballots depends on the size of the county, and for local political subdivisions (city, school, water district, etc.) contracting with a county. As noted above, the early voting ballot board in counties with a population of under 100,000, and in local entities that are not contracting with a county, are not permitted to meet to qualify mail ballots until the end of early voting by personal appearance. (Secs. 87.022, 87.0222).

The following defects are eligible for correction when identified by the early voting ballot board (Sec. 87.0411(a)):

- The voter did not sign the carrier envelope certificate.
- The EVBB cannot determine whether the signature on the carrier envelope is that of the voter.
- The voter did not include the required statement of residence.
- The personal identification information required under Section 84.002(a)(1-a) (ABBM) or Section 86.002 (carrier envelope) was missing or contained incorrect information.
- If a voter used a witness for completion of the carrier envelope, the witness information was incomplete.

NOTE: Incomplete information about an assistant cannot be corrected and will result in a rejected mail ballot, but the voter may still vote in person if otherwise eligible.

Corrective Action Process Timelines

The SVC or EVBB has two methods by which they can notify a voter of their ability to correct one or more of the defects outlined above.

Returning the Carrier Envelope by Mail: If the SVC or EVBB determines that it would be possible for the voter to correct the defect and return the carrier envelope before the time the polls are required to close on election day, the SVC or EVBB must mail the original defective carrier envelope to the voter. This determination must be made not later than the second business day after the SVC or EVBB discovers a defect, and before the SVC or EVBB decides whether to accept or reject a timely delivered mail ballot. (Secs. 87.0271(b), 87.0411(b)).

Notifying the Voter by Phone or Email: If the SVC or EVBB determines that it would not be possible for the voter to correct the defect and return the carrier envelope before the time the polls are required to close on election day, the SVC or EVBB may notify the voter of the defect by telephone or email and inform the voter that the voter may come to the early voting clerk's office in person not later than the sixth day after election day to correct the defect. (Secs. 87.0271(c), 87.0411(c)).

If the SVC or EVBB takes one of the actions described above, the committee or board must take that action with respect to each ballot in the election to which these options apply. (Secs. 87.0271(d), 87.0411(d)).

Recommended Timelines/Plan for the SVC and EVBB

The SOS recommends that before qualifying mail ballots, the early voting clerk meet with the SVC or EVBB to determine dates to convene and to establish timelines for the corrective action process. (Secs. 87.0411, 87.0271).

Establishing Timelines and Guidelines for the Corrective Action Process

- The SVC or EVBB must set a uniform policy for when carrier envelopes will be mailed to the voter versus when voters will be notified of the defect by phone or email. See recommendations below regarding establishing a specific deadline for transitioning to phone/email notification.
- The SVC or EVBB should determine whether it will notify voters of a defect by both phone and email, if both are available.
- The SVC or EVBB should establish a policy for making multiple attempts to reach a voter if it is unsuccessful in reaching a voter by phone or email on the first attempt.

Recommended Timelines for Notification Process

When the SVC or EVBB is determining whether there is adequate time to return a defective carrier envelope to the voter by mail, we strongly recommend that it takes into account postal delivery time frames. According to the United States Postal Service (USPS), first-class delivery can take up to five business days. Because a defective carrier envelope needs to be returned to the voter, and then mailed back to the early voting clerk, the SOS recommends that the SVC or EVBB implement a policy to provide notification of a defect by phone or email to all voters whose ballots are reviewed by the SVC or EVBB on or after the 14th day before election day (approximately 10 business days). Although early voting ballot boards in counties with a population of 100,000 or greater cannot begin meeting until 12 days before election day, the SVC is authorized to return a defective carrier envelope by mail during this time.

Rolling Review of Carrier Envelopes

To ensure that voters are given the maximum amount of time to correct a defective carrier envelope, the SOS recommends that the SVC or EVBB meet on the first possible day allowed under the Texas Election Code to qualify all mail ballots received up until that point (as identified in the chart below). The SOS recommends the SVC or EVBB continue their qualification of ballots on a rolling basis throughout the authorized meeting period to ensure that voters who are eligible to correct defects are notified as quickly as possible of the defect and their correction options. Notice of all SVC or EVBB meeting times should be posted timely to ensure that poll watchers are aware of when the SVC or EVBB meetings will occur.

Methods of Correcting Defects in Carrier Envelope

Correcting Defect by Returning Carrier Envelope by Mail

If the SVC or EVBB determines that it would be possible for the voter to correct the defect and return the carrier envelope before the time the polls are required to close on election day, the SVC or EVBB shall return the original carrier envelope containing the voter's marked ballot to the voter by mail to allow the voter to correct the defect. (Secs. 87.0271(b), 87.0411(b)).

When the carrier envelope is sent to the voter for corrective action, the voter MUST return the carrier envelope by 7:00 p.m. on election day. If the voter is hand-delivering the carrier envelope to the early voting clerk's office on election day, it must be received by the early voting clerk no later than 7:00 p.m. Only the voter may hand-deliver their carrier envelope, and the voter must present a valid form of voter ID (either a List A ID or a List B ID with reasonable impediment declaration) at the time of delivery.

Procedures

The SOS recommends that when preparing to return the voter's carrier envelope containing the voter's marked ballot, the SVC or EVBB take several actions, including the following:

- 1. Stamp or mark the voter's carrier envelope with the words "Corrective Action Required."
- 2. Note the appropriate defect on the Notice of Carrier Defect Carrier Envelope Returned to the Voter by Mail.

- 3. Mail the voter's defective carrier envelope along with the Notice of Carrier Defect Carrier Envelope Returned to the Voter by Mail. The early voting clerk should include an envelope for the voter to return the corrected carrier envelope to the early voting clerk. This envelope should contain the Official Election Mail logo prescribed by the USPS. The voter must be notified if the return envelope needs additional postage.
- 4. Enter the voter's information on the Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes Returned to the Voter by Mail.

Correcting Defect by Appearing in Person at Early Voting Clerk's Office

If the SVC or EVBB determines that it would not be possible for the voter to correct the defect and return the carrier envelope before the time the polls are required to close on election day, the SVC or EVBB may notify the voter of the defect by telephone or email and inform the voter that the voter may come to the early voting clerk's office in person not later than the sixth day after election day to correct the defect. The SVC or EVBB must also inform the voter that he or she may request to have their application for ballot by mail cancelled in a manner described by Section 84.032. (Secs. 87.0271(c), 87.0411(c)).

Upon appearing at the early voting clerk's office, the voter will be asked to submit the Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier Envelope. This form allows the voter to provide the information necessary to address the defects in their carrier envelope.

Procedures

The SOS recommends that when notifying the voter of a defect, the SVC or EVBB take certain actions, including the following:

• If notifying by email:

- 1. Send the voter the Notice of Carrier Defect Voter Notified of Carrier Envelope Defect by Phone or Email via email.
- 2. The voter's name should be entered on the Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes Notified by Phone or Email, and the action taken by the voter should be noted on the roster.
- 3. Parameters for Email Notification: The SOS recommends that the early voting clerk set up an email address for corrective action notifications. The early voting clerk and the SVC or EVBB should establish rules and procedures for utilizing this email address. Any emails sent or received through the corrective action process are considered election records under the Election Code, are subject to the Public Information Act, and should be retained by the general custodian of election records. The general custodian should consult with their attorney regarding any requests for such emails, as certain information may be exempt from disclosure under the Public Information Act.

• If notifying by phone:

1. Contact the voter using any known phone number on file with the early voting clerk or in the possession of the SVC or EVBB.

NOTE: As a reminder, the voter registrar may not transcribe, copy or otherwise record a telephone number furnished on a voter registration application. (Sec. 13.004). The SVC or EVBB may be able to review a voter registration application at the voter registrar's office to obtain a phone - number. The registrar may also read a phone number from a voter registration application to a member of the SVC or EVBB, if necessary.

- 2. The SVC or EVBB should create a phone script that explains to the voter that the voter's mail ballot was received by the early voting clerk's office and has been reviewed by the SVC or EVBB, whichever is applicable.
- 3. The SOS recommends that the SVC or EVBB confirm the voter's identity using publicly available information.
 - Example: Ask the voter to confirm their voter registration address and whether they requested a mail ballot for the given election.
- 4. The voter should be told that upon review of the carrier envelope, the SVC or EVBB discovered a defect in the carrier envelope. The specific defect should be explained.
- 5. The SVC or EVBB should explain the process for the voter to correct the defect in the carrier envelope as well as the process to cancel their mail ballot and vote in person during early voting or on election day.
- 6. The SVC or EVBB should provide a return phone number that the voter may use to confirm that they were contacted by the SVC or EVBB. The number provided should be the number of the early voting clerk's office so the voter can verify this information and obtain details about the corrective action process during times that the SVC or EVBB are not meeting.
- 7. The voter's name should be entered on the Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes Notified by Phone or Email, and the action taken by the SVC or EVBB should be noted on the roster.

• If the SVC or EVBB is unable to contact the voter:

- 1. The SVC or EVBB should leave a detailed message explaining that the SVC or EVBB determined there was a defect in the voter's carrier envelope and explain the process for correcting the defect.
- 2. The SVC or EVBB should NOT provide any details related to a voter's personally identifiable information on a voicemail or with a person who is not the voter.
- 3. The SVC or EVBB should leave a return number that the voter may use to validate the information provided by phone.
- 4. The SVC or EVBB should mail the voter a Notice of Carrier Defect Voter Notified of Carrier Envelope Defect by Phone or Email to inform the voter of their ability to correct the defect by appearing at the early voting clerk's office or by cancelling their mail ballot and voting in person during early voting or on election day.
- 5. The voter's name should be entered on the Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes Notified by Phone or Email, and the action taken by the SVC or EVBB should be noted on the roster.
- If the SVC or EVBB does not have a phone number or email to notify the voter: The SVC or EVBB should mail a Notice of Carrier Defect Voter Notified of Carrier Envelope Defect by Phone or Email to inform the voter of their ability to correct the defect by appearing at the early voting clerk's office or by cancelling their mail ballot and voting in person during early voting or on election day.

If a voter's carrier envelope has a defect that may be corrected, the SVC or EVBB must provide this status information to the county early voting clerk, who submits the information via TEAM to update the Ballot by Mail Tracker.

Any actions taken by the SVC or EVBB shall be uniformly applied to every ballot in the election to which this procedure applies. (Secs. 87.0271(d), 87.0411(d)). A poll watcher is entitled to observe any action taken by the SVC or EVBB related to the corrective action process. (Secs.

87.0271(e), 87.0411(e)). Poll watchers may not transcribe or make notes of any voter's personally identifiable information while observing the activities of the SVC or EVBB.

Correcting Certain Defects Through Ballot by Mail Tracker

If the SVC or EVBB determines that the identification information required under Section 84.002(a)(1-a) (ABBM) or Section 86.002 (carrier envelope) was missing or contained incorrect information, the voter may cure this defect through the SOS's Ballot by Mail Tracker. However, if the SVC or EVBB has returned the voter's carrier envelope by mail for correction, the voter also MUST return the carrier envelope to the early voting clerk no later than 7:00 p.m. on election day for the ballot to be processed and counted. (Secs. 87.0271(b), 87.0411(b)). The Notice of Carrier Defect form provides information on how to utilize the tracker. Information validated through the Ballot by Mail Tracker should be provided to the EVBB for their final review of the ballot before determining acceptance or rejection.

If a voter's carrier envelope has a defect that may be corrected, the SVC or EVBB must give this information to the early voting clerk, who submits it via TEAM to update the tracker.

Correcting Defect by Cancellation

If the voter received a defective carrier envelope in the mail or was notified by telephone or email about a defect, the voter may request to have their ABBM/marked ballot cancelled in accordance with Section 84.032. If the voter has possession of the defective carrier envelope, it may be surrendered at an early voting or election day polling place in order to vote a regular ballot in person. The voter may also surrender the ballot at the early voting clerk's office and be given a Notice of Surrendered Ballot by Mail to take to the polling place and vote a regular ballot.

Cancellation Options

After receiving a Notice of Carrier Defect by mail or receiving notification via email or phone, the voter may opt to cancel their ballot by mail and vote a regular ballot in person. All cancellations must be completed in accordance with Section 84.032. If the voter is an Annual ABBM voter, a cancellation request submitted for these purposes applies only to the current election unless the voter specifically requests to cancel their Annual ABBM. (Sec. 84.038).

- Cancellation by Surrendering Mail Ballot at Polling Place During Early Voting or on Election Day: If a voter has possession of their mail ballot, they may surrender that ballot at any early voting or election day polling place. Upon surrendering the ballot and completing the Application to Cancel a Ballot by Mail for Use in the Polling Place form, the voter will be given a regular ballot for voting. (Sec. 84.032(c), (d)).
- Cancellation at Polling Place Without Surrendering Mail Ballot: If a voter appears at a polling place during early voting or on election day after receiving a Notice of Carrier Defect, but does not have the defective carrier envelope to surrender, the voter may complete the Application to Cancel a Ballot by Mail for Use in the Polling Place form. The voter should vote provisionally and the election judge should check reason #4 on the Affidavit of Provisional Voter Envelope. (Secs. 84.032(c), 84.035(b)).
- Cancellation at Early Voting Clerk's Office
 - If the voter appears at the early voting clerk's office and submits a cancellation request in writing and surrenders the mail ballot, the voter will be permitted to vote a regular ballot in person. The voter will be issued a Notice of Surrendered

- Ballot by Mail. This notice will be taken to the polling place and presented to the presiding judge. The presiding judge must issue the voter a regular ballot for voting. (Secs. 84.032(a), (c), (d), 84.035(b)).
- o If the voter appears at the early voting clerk's office and submits a cancellation request in writing but does NOT surrender their mail ballot, the voter will be permitted to vote, but they must be issued a provisional ballot. The voter must complete a proper affidavit on cancellation form. The voter should be sent to their applicable polling location to vote provisionally. (Secs. 84.032(a), (c), 84.035(b)).
 - NOTE: The early voting clerk's office may not always contain the main early voting polling place. If a voter appears during early voting, the voter should be directed to the nearest early voting location to vote.
- Cancellation by Voter who was Notified of the Defect by Phone or Email: If a voter was notified of the defect in their carrier envelope by phone or email, the voter may cancel their mail ballot application and vote in person.
 - o If the voter appears at the early voting clerk's office and submits a cancellation request in writing and the early voting clerk can verify that ballot is in the possession of the EVBB, the early voting clerk can issue a Notice of Surrendered Ballot by Mail. This notice will be taken to the polling place and presented to the presiding judge. The presiding judge must issue the voter a regular ballot for voting. (Secs. 84.032(a), (c), (d), 84.035(b)).
 - o If the voter appears at the polling place and completes a written cancellation request, the voter may be given a provisional ballot. The presiding judge should mark reason number 4 on the provisional ballot affidavit envelope. The presiding judge may also want to add a notation that the voter was notified of a defect on their carrier envelope by phone or email. (Sec. 84.032(b), (c)).

There is no process under Texas law by which a voter can cancel a mail ballot application by phone. All cancellations must be in writing and completed in accordance with Section 84.032 of the Code. A written, signed, and scanned copy of a cancellation request may be submitted by email or fax. The request must contain an original, wet ink signature; an electronic or digital signature is not permissible. If a voter has possession of their mail ballot, they must still surrender their mail ballot at the polling place or early voting clerk's office in order to vote a regular ballot in person even if they submit a cancellation request.

Provisional Voting

If the voter does not have possession of the carrier envelope, Notice of Improper Delivery, or Notice of Surrendered Ballot by Mail, but would like to cancel their mail ballot, the voter can go to an early voting or election day polling place and vote a provisional ballot.

Correcting in the Early Voting Clerk's Office when Voter is Notified of Defect by Phone or Email

If a voter has been notified of a defect by phone or email and the voter has not been sent their defective carrier envelope, the voter may appear in person at the early voting clerk's office not later than the sixth day after election day to take certain corrective actions. (Secs. 87.0271(c), 87.0411(c)).

Upon appearing at the early voting clerk's office and informing the early voting clerk that they have been notified that their carrier envelope had a defect, the early voting clerk should review the appropriate Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes (or other applicable records) provided to the early voting clerk from the SVC or EVBB to determine what corrective action is necessary.

If the voter has a completed Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier Envelope, the early voting clerk will take the form and make a notation on the appropriate roster that the form was received.

If the voter does not have a completed Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier Envelope, the early voting clerk shall provide the form to the voter and have the voter complete the paperwork. After completion of paperwork, the early voting clerk will take the corrective action form and make a notation on the appropriate roster that the form was received.

The early voting clerk must review the documentation provided by the voter to ensure that the voter has completed the necessary corrective actions. The early voting clerk or deputy early voting clerk will then complete the remaining notations on the roster. The Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier Envelope must be securely retained until the records are transferred back to the SVC or EVBB.

The early voting clerk should make arrangements with the SVC chair and/or the EVBB presiding judge to receive an updated copy of the Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes after each meeting of the SVC or EVBB in which the committee or board qualifies voted ballots for signature comparison or makes a determination to accept or reject voted ballots. Additionally, the early voting clerk shall provide any Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier Envelope received along with an updated copy of the roster to the EVBB for the board's final review of ballots. The SOS recommends that this information be provided to the EVBB prior to any meeting of the EVBB. On election day, if the EVBB is meeting prior to the closing of the polls, it should be provided with any Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier Envelope received before its meeting and any forms received up until the polls close on election day.

The early voting clerk should provide instructions about how to process voters who appear in person to correct defects in their carrier envelopes to all deputy early voting clerks who may be assisting with the corrective action process or answering phone or email inquiries.

Required Actions by Early Voting Ballot Board for all Ballots Subject to Corrective Action Process

Upon receiving any defective carrier envelopes that have been corrected and returned by mail, any Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier Envelope that voters provided in person, or a notification from the early voting clerk that a voter provided missing or incorrect personal identification information through the Ballot by Mail Tracker, the EVBB must review the carrier envelope and associated paperwork to make a determination whether to accept or reject the ballot. (Sec. 87.0411(g)).

If a voter has been notified of a defect by phone or email, the voter has until the sixth day after election day to correct the defect. (Secs. 87.0271(c), 87.0411(c)). The voter's ballot may not be finally rejected for the reason provided in the Notice of Carrier Defect before the seventh day after election day. (Secs. 87.0271(g), 87.0411(g)). If a voter was mailed their defective carrier envelope, the revised carrier envelope containing the voted ballot MUST be returned to the early voting clerk by the time the polls close on election day. (Secs. 87.0271(b), 87.0411(b)).

Impacts on Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) Voters

The new requirements that an ABBM contain a voter's personal identification information apply to Federal Post Card Application voters. The FPCA form already includes a place for a voter to provide this information, as the form is also used for voter registration purposes. If a voter fails to include their personal identification number on the FPCA, the voter may correct this defect by submitting a new FPCA or by validating their identification number in the Ballot by Mail Tracker.

Likewise, the new identification requirements for carrier envelopes apply to mail ballots for FPCA voters. Our FPCA materials have been revised to reflect this change. Many FPCA voters receive their balloting materials by email, and an FPCA voter cannot construct the carrier envelope with a sufficient secrecy flap. Additionally, all FPCA ballots must be carried by the USPS free of postage. To facilitate the mailing of FPCA balloting materials, early voting clerks may use any type of mailing envelope that contains the Official Election Mail logo and the required postage-paid information as long as the early voting clerk includes a required signature sheet for the voter to complete.

All FPCA voters must be provided with an Official Election Signature Sheet for an FPCA Voter if their balloting materials were sent by email. If the balloting materials were sent by physical mail, but the early voting clerk is using one of the FVAP envelopes that does not contain all of the requirements for the carrier envelope, the voter MUST be provided with an Official Election Signature Sheet for an FPCA Voter to return with their marked ballot.

The SOS has prescribed a version of the carrier envelope that contains the required postage-paid information to be used only for FPCA voters. The personal identification number requirements have been added to the FPCA signature sheet.

Actions by Signature Verification Committee or Early Voting Ballot Board Regarding FPCA Voters

The SVC or EVBB, whichever is applicable, must review an FPCA voter's returned carrier envelope or signature sheet just as they would for a regular ABBM voter. However, as many FPCA voters will be utilizing a signature sheet that is contained within a sealed envelope, the SVC may have to open the sealed envelope to determine if the voter included a required signature sheet. The SVC may ONLY open FPCA carrier envelopes containing these voted ballots to ensure that the signature sheet has been included and that it contains the necessary information required for validation of personal identification numbers and/or signatures.

Correction of Defects by FPCA Voters

If the FPCA voter provides missing or incorrect identification information on their carrier envelope or signature sheet, or did not include the Official Election Signature Sheet for an FPCA Voter, the voter must be notified of the defect in the same manner as a regular ABBM voter. Because the signature sheet is separate from the voted ballot and is authorized under state and federal law, FPCA voters who have a defect in their signature sheet have additional methods for returning this corrected or missing required documentation. Specifically, an FPCA voter may submit a corrected signature sheet by email, fax, personal delivery, or mail. The SVC or EVBB should make an appropriate notation on their roster to indicate how FPCA voters were notified of a defect and how the FPCA voter provided the corrected signature sheet to the SVC or EVBB. (Secs. 1.007, 31.003, 31.004, 87.0271(f), 87.0411(f), 101.007, 101.109).

Validating Voter Registration Information When an Entity or Political Subdivision Does Not Contract with County Election Officer

The requirements to verify voters' personal identification information with their voter registration records apply to all elections regardless of whether a political subdivision contracts with the county election officer to conduct the election on its behalf. For those entities that are running their own elections, the following verification process must be completed.

Verifying Personal Identification Information on ABBM/FPCA

- For Annual ABBM/FPCA voters who file applications with the county: When the county election office forwards the list of ABBM/FPCA voters along with copies of their mail ballot applications, the county shall only forward those applications for which the personal identification information provided on the ABBM/FPCA matches the information in the voter's voter registration record. The county election officer should prepare a certification, included with the forwarded list, confirming that the information provided on each forwarded application matches the voter's voter registration record. If the early voting clerk does not want to rely on the county's certification, the clerk must coordinate with the county election officer to determine a date and time to go to the county's office to validate the information on the ABBM/FPCA with the voter's voter registration record.
- If a local entity receives an ABBM or FPCA directly from a voter, the early voting clerk must make arrangements with the county election officer to verify that the information provided on the application matches the voter's voter registration record. This verification may be made over the telephone or in person before the early voting clerk sends the voter's balloting materials. Verification of personal identification information should be confirmed on a separate document or directly on the ABBM (as long as the notation does not obscure any of the applicant's markings). The notation should indicate that the verification occurred and include the date of verification.

NOTE: If a local entity receives an Annual ABBM/FPCA, the entity must forward the application to the county as soon as possible for the county's use. (Sec. 86.0015(d)).

Verifying Personal Identification Information on Carrier Envelope

- Because the early voting clerk already validated the personal identification information on the voter's ABBM, if the information submitted on the carrier envelope matches the information on the ABBM, the EVBB may accept the information and proceed to signature verification.
- If the information submitted on the carrier envelope does NOT match the information on the voter's ABBM, the SVC or EVBB must verify that the information on the carrier envelope matches the voter's voter registration record. The SVC or EVBB must verify this information with the voter registrar or county election officer. The verification may be performed over the telephone or in person at the voter registrar's or county election officer's office, or a member of the voter registrar's or county election officer's staff may be on site at the SVC or EVBB meeting to look up the voter registration records. Verification of personal identification information should be confirmed on a separate document or directly on the ABBM (provided that the notation does not obscure any of the applicant's markings). The notation should indicate that the verification occurred and include the date of verification. The verification, method used for verification, and the individuals involved in the verification must all be documented by the SVC or EVBB, and these records should be maintained for the applicable preservation period.

Forms Related to Corrective Action Process

The SOS has prescribed several forms pertaining to the procedures identified in this advisory.

Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail – Missing or Incorrect Personal Identification Number (Form 6-3)

The SOS has prescribed a specific form for early voting clerks to use when notifying a voter that their ABBM is subject to rejection because the voter failed to provide any of the required personal identification information on the ABBM or the information provided by the voter on the ABBM does not match the voter's voter registration record. This new form provides detailed information on how the voter can correct this defect by utilizing the SOS's Ballot by Mail Tracker to validate their personal identification numbers, as required by Section 86.001(f-1). If the missing or incorrect identification information is the only basis for rejecting the ABBM, we recommend that early voting clerks use Form 6-3 as it explains the correction process.

The SOS has also added language regarding missing or incorrect personal identification information to the standard Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail form (Form 6-2). If there are multiple defects with an ABBM (including missing or incorrect identification information), we recommend that the early voting clerk send the standard Form 6-2 because the voter must submit a new ABBM to resolve the other defects even if the voter utilizes the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct the missing or incorrect information.

Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail – Required Personal Identification Number Not Associated with Voter Record (Form 6-4)

The SOS has prescribed a specific form for early voting clerks to use when notifying a voter that their ABBM is subject to rejection because the voter's voter registration record does not contain one or more of the required personal identification numbers. This notice provides instructions on how a voter can add their personal identification number(s) to their voter registration record through texas.gov or by submitting a new voter registration application to the voter registrar. A postage-paid voter registration application must accompany this notice so that the voter may add the numbers to his or her voter registration record if the voter does not have online access.

Notice of Carrier Defect (Forms 8-23, 8-24)

The SOS has prescribed two different Notice of Carrier Defect forms to notify voters of defects in their carrier envelope and the available corrective actions. For voter convenience, we have included a copy of the Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier on the reverse side of each Notice of Carrier Defect.

- The Notice of Carrier Defect Carrier Envelope Returned to the Voter by Mail is to be used for those voters who are mailed back their carrier envelope for correction.
- The Notice of Carrier Defect Voter Notified of Carrier Envelope Defect by Phone or Email is to be used for those voters who are notified of their carrier envelope defect by phone or email.

The notice must be completed by members of the SVC or EVBB. Any phone call or email notifying a voter of a defect in their carrier envelope should be made or sent during the time the SVC or EVBB is convened. The SVC or EVBB may utilize employees of the early voting clerk to assist with this process if all activities are completed while the SVC or EVBB is officially convened so that poll watchers may be present to observe the activities.

Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes (Forms 8-20, 8-21, 8-22)

The SVC or EVBB should create a Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes – Returned to the Voter by Mail and a Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes – Notified by Phone or Email to record and detail the voters whose carrier envelopes have been mailed to a voter or are pending review by the SVC or EVBB. The roster should include the following information:

- Voter's Name/VUID;
- Type of defect on the carrier envelope;
- Date the SVC or EVBB provided notice of defect, if applicable;
- How notice was provided (returned carrier, phone call, email); and
- Who on the SVC or EVBB provided the notice.

A copy of the roster should be provided to the early voting clerk on a regular basis so that they are aware of voters who may appear at the early voting clerk's office to complete any corrective actions associated with their carrier envelope or cancel their mail ballot application.

The SOS has prescribed three different sample rosters that may be used for these purposes. The SVC or EVBB may choose to complete the roster or track this information electronically, as long as the SVC or EVBB is able to generate a report with the required information that can be provided to the early voting clerk to assist with the corrective action process.

Voters' names entered on this roster are not eligible for public inspection until after the voter has returned the corrected carrier envelope, canceled their mail ballot, or appeared in person to correct any necessary defects. (Sec. 87.121).

Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier Envelope (Form 6-14)

The SOS has prescribed a specific form that voters should use when appearing in person at the early voting clerk's office to correct certain defects in their carrier envelope. This form allows the voter to provide the missing or incorrect information from their carrier envelope. When completed, the early voting clerk must provide this form to the EVBB so that the board can make a final determination on acceptance or rejection of a voted mail ballot.

The Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier Envelope also contains the elements of a statement of residence. Voters may want to consider completing all portions of the corrective action form; if the EVBB subsequently discovers a different defect in the carrier envelope (such as a missing SOR form), and the voter provided all the required information in the corrective action form, this form can be used to correct the newly found defects.

The SOS has prescribed a standalone Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier, but has also included this form on the reverse side of the Notice of Carrier Defect form for voter convenience.

Notice of Surrendered Ballot by Mail (Form 6-13)

The SOS has prescribed a Notice of Surrendered Ballot by Mail to use when a voter surrenders their mail ballot to the early voting clerk and is eligible to vote a regular ballot in person. Upon surrendering their mail ballot, the voter will be issued the Notice of Surrendered Ballot by Mail. The voter will take this form to their early voting or election day polling place and present the form to the election judge, entitling the voter to vote a regular ballot in person.

Address Confidentiality Program

When reviewing the Confidential Voter Registration Form and Early Voting Ballot Application of a voter in the Attorney General's address confidentiality program, the early voting clerk will not compare the personal identification information on the application form to a voter registration record as these voters are not registered voters in the statewide voter registration system.

After the voter returns their carrier envelope, the early voting clerk or applicable designee must confirm that the personal identification information on the carrier envelope matches the information on the Confidential Voter Registration Form and Application for Ballot by Mail. If the information does not match, the early voting clerk or designee must generate a Notice of Carrier Defect. The voter's name is not entered on the Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes. Instead, a notation of the defect is made on the Roster for Early Voting by Mail for Address Confidential Applicants.

As these individuals are not registered voters in the statewide registration system, the Ballot by Mail Tracker will not contain information regarding their ballot application or carrier envelope. Voters wishing to verify the receipt of their carrier envelope must contact the early voting clerk.

Early Voting Clerk Notification to Voter of Defects in Carrier Envelope

Under Section 86.011(d) of the Code, if an early voting clerk receives a timely carrier envelope that does not comply with the applicable requirements of the Code, the early voting clerk may deliver the carrier envelope in person or by mail to the voter so that the voter may correct the defect. Additionally, the early voting clerk may notify the voter of the defect by phone and advise the voter that they may come to the early voting clerk's office to correct the defect or cancel their ABBM and vote in person. The early voting clerk may utilize this provision for defects such as a missing signature by the voter, a partially completed witness or assistant box (if applicable), or a ballot that is not returned in a carrier envelope.

If an early voting clerk chooses to notify voters of defects in their carrier envelope under Section 86.011(d), the clerk must apply these procedures uniformly to all voters in similar circumstances. Additionally, the SOS recommends keeping a log to track the ballots mailed to voters and the ballots in the possession of the early voting clerk before ballots are delivered to the SVC or EVBB. If the early voting clerk notifies a voter of a defect in their carrier envelope by mail, the clerk should include a letter explaining the actions that the voter needs to take to correct and return the carrier envelope.

Please be advised that the early voting clerk can only notify voters of certain defects under Section 86.011(d). If the early voting clerk receives a mail ballot with an obvious defect, but it is within the time frame that the SVC or EVBB can meet, the early voting clerk should expeditiously deliver these ballots to the SVC or EVBB so that they may complete their full review and the voter can be notified of all defects in a timely fashion. The SVC or EVBB should review the ballots with obvious defects first to ensure that those voters are timely notified of their options to correct or cancel their mail ballot.

Types of Defects and Corrective Action Options

Type of Defect	Carrier Envelope Returned by	Voter Notified of Defect by Phone
	Mail to Voter	or Email
Voter did not sign the carrier envelope certificate.	Voter should sign original carrier envelope and return the carrier envelope to the early voting clerk by mail by 7:00 p.m. on election day, or, if on election day, the voter may hand-deliver their signed carrier envelope to the early voting clerk's office. Voter can make corrections directly on the returned carrier envelope. They do not need a Corrective Action for Carrier Envelope form. Questions and Answers

- 1. What if a voter does not use the new ABBM form or otherwise does not include any of the required personal identification information?
 - A. The early voting clerk must reject the voter's ABBM and provide notice of the rejection. If the missing identification information is the only defect in the ABBM, the early voting clerk should send the voter a Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail Missing or Incorrect Personal Identification Number. The voter may correct this defect by submitting a new ABBM or by validating their personal identification information through the Ballot by Mail Tracker on votetexas.gov.
- 2. What information does a voter need to access the Ballot by Mail Tracker?
 - A. To access the Ballot by Mail Tracker on votetexas.gov, the voter must enter their DPS-issued number, the last four digits of their social security number, and their residence address as listed in their voter registration record.
- 3. A voter can't access the Ballot by Mail Tracker because their voter registration record does not contain a required personal identification number. What should the voter do?
 - A If a voter is unable to enter the Ballot by Mail Tracker because they do not have an identification number associated with their voter registration record, the voter needs to update their voter registration record. They can do so by submitting a new voter registration application to the registrar or by validating their personal identification numbers on texas.gov if the voter has a DPS-issued driver's license or personal identification card. The process for updating the voter registration record is explained to the voter in Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail Required Personal Identification Number Not Associated with Voter Record (Form 6-4).
- 4. If the personal identification information on the carrier envelope matches the voter's voter registration record, should the SVC or EVBB still review the signatures on the ABBM and carrier envelope?
 - A. Yes, but there is a rebuttable presumption that the signatures on the ABBM and carrier envelope are those of the voter. The only way to reject a ballot due to a signature mismatch is for a member of the SVC or EVBB to rebut the presumption. The presumption may be rebutted by presenting other past signatures on file with the early voting clerk or voter registrar that would support a finding that the signatures on the carrier envelope and ABBM are not those of the same voter.

5. What if a voter includes an incomplete or unsigned Statement of Residence form?

A. A voter should be notified of an incomplete SOR and provided an opportunity to correct this defect, similar to the process for a missing SOR.

6. Can some one other than the voter return a voter's corrected carrier envelope or corrective action form in person?

A. No. Only the voter can hand-deliver their corrected carrier envelope on election day, or complete the Corrective Action Form for Defective Carrier Envelope, in person at the early voting clerk's office. If necessary, the voter may have someone accompany the voter to serve as a witness.

7. If the SVC or EVBB attempts to call a voter and is unable to reach the voter by phone, should they leave a message? Can the SVC or EVBB call multiple times?

A. The SVC or EVBB can leave a message for the voter, but they should avoid providing any personally identifiable information on the voicemail so as not to compromise the privacy of the voter. Additionally, the SVC or EVBB can make multiple attempts to reach a voter by phone. The SOS recommends that the SVC or EVBB set a policy on the number of attempts allowed and what information will be provided in a voicemail message. Any actions that the EVBB/SVC takes for one voter must be uniformly applied to all voters in similar circumstances for that election.

8. If the SVC or EVBB is unable to reach the voter by phone, what number should the SVC or EVBB provide as a return number in a voicemail message?

A. The SOS recommends that the SVC or EVBB provide a telephone number that will be routinely staffed by members of the SVC or EVBB, or by deputy early voting clerks, so that voters can receive information about the corrective action process in a timely fashion. As a best practice, the SVC or EVBB should identify the days and hours that someone will be available to answer calls. In addition, if a voicemail is set up with the return phone number, this voicemail should be routinely checked and any voicemails should be logged and tracked to ensure that voters are being provided uniform information in a timely fashion. The SVC or EVBB does not need a separate phone line. They can use the early voting clerk's main number, but the SVC or EVBB must work with the early voting clerk to develop a procedure for tracking calls about the correction process.

9. Can the SVC or EVBB contact voters both by email and phone?

A. Yes. As long as the SVC or EVBB apply the same procedures uniformly to all voters in similar circumstances, they can contact a voter by phone and email to notify them of the defect. The SVC or EVBB should set a policy regarding the number and/or methods of attempts to contact a voter. In addition, all attempts to contact a voter should be documented on the applicable roster.

- 10. A voter has contacted our office and indicated that the personal identification number in their voter registration record is wrong; what can the voter do?
 - A. The voter can correct their personal identification number by submitting a new voter registration application to the voter registrar.
- 11. If the voter lists a personal identification number on an ABBM that is not contained in their voter registration record, can the early voting clerk update the voter registration record?
 - A. No. The voter should be notified that their voter registration record does not contain the identification number listed on the ABBM. The voter can update their voter registration record by submitting a new voter registration application to the registrar or by validating their personal identification numbers on texas gov.
- 12. If a voter validates their DPS-issued driver's license number or social security number through texas.gov to update their voter registration record, how long does it take for this change to be effective?
 - A. This is an immediate update. It does not take 30 days for the update to become effective.
- 13. If a voter hand-delivers their ABBM to the early voting clerk, can the clerk review whether the personal identification information on the ABBM matches the voter's voter registration record before the voter submits their application?
 - A. Upon receipt of the ABBM, the early voting clerk can review the application even if the voter remains in the clerk's presence. However, any such actions taken as to one voter should be uniformly applied to all voters in similar circumstances. Thus, if the early voting clerk intends to review hand-delivered ABBMs for completeness or accuracy in the voter's presence, the clerk should follow the same process for all voters who hand-deliver their ABBMs.
- 14. Can a poll watcher challenge the acceptance of a signature by the EVBB?
 - A. No. A poll watcher has no authority to challenge the acceptance of a signature or any actions taken by the SVC or EVBB during the course of their regular meetings. The poll watcher can point out an election irregularity to the EVBB presiding judge or the SVC chair, after which the poll watcher has no further authority to take any actions with respect to their observations.
- 15. What email address should the SVC or EVBB use when notifying voters of a defect by email?
 - A. The SOS recommends that the early voting clerk set up an email address for these notifications. The early voting clerk and the SVC or EVBB should establish rules and procedures for utilizing the email address. Any emails sent or received through the corrective action process are considered election records under the Election Code, are subject to the Public Information Act, and should be retained by the general custodian of election records. The general custodian should consult with their attorney regarding any requests for such emails, as certain information may be exempt from disclosure under the Public Information Act.

- 16. What if a voter comes to the early voting clerk's office to correct a defect in their carrier envelope and the reason for voting by mail is absence from the county?
 - A If a voter appears in person to correct a defect with their carrier envelope, the voter must be provided an opportunity to correct the defect, and the early voting clerk must send any completed corrective action form to the early voting ballot board. The EVBB should not reject a correction merely because the voter applied to vote by mail due to expected absence from their county of residence.
- 17. If a county election officer is forwarding applicable annual ABBMs and FPCAs to a local entity, how should that information be transmitted to the entity?
 - A. The county election officer should transmit copies of the applicable ABBMs and FPCAs through a secure method. This may include hand-delivering the copies, arranging for the local entity to pick up the copies, or utilizing an encrypted email or file transfer protocol.
- 18. If a voter is mailed their carrier envelope to correct a defect, is the voter's name removed from the roster of voters who voted by mail under Section 87.121?
 - A. No. The voter's name will stay on the early voting roster as the voter has properly and timely submitted their mail ballot. The voter's name will subsequently be entered on the Roster of Voters with Defective Carrier Envelopes Returned to the Voter by Mail to track the status of the ballot in the correction process.
- 19. Can a voter call and ask what personal identification number the voter registrar has on file for that voter?
 - A. Yes. A voter can ask to confirm the number listed, but the number should be provided by the voter and the early voting clerk can confirm whether that number is accurate. The early voting clerk should not provide any personal identification number from the voter registration record to a person over the phone. If the voter provides an incorrect number, the voter registrar can tell the voter that the number is incorrect, but the voter registrar should not read the number to the voter over the phone. The voter registrar can also confirm the type of number listed on file (driver's license or social security number).
- 20. What if an entity has a mailed a corrected ballot and the voter returns both ballots, but the second, corrected ballot has a defect in the carrier envelope (ex: missing personal identification information)? Can the SVC or EVBB review the original carrier envelope to obtain the missing information?
 - A. No, the original ballot may not be reviewed or counted. The initial carrier envelope is never sent to the SVC or EVBB if the corrected ballot has been returned. If there is a defect in the corrected ballot, the SVC or EVBB must notify the voter of the defect and allow the voter an opportunity to correct the defect. Even if the voter does not resolve the defect in the corrected ballot, the SVC or EVBB may not review the original ballot, as the corrected ballot is now the timely returned ballot.

- 21. If the SVC or EVBB is unable to locate a voter's email or phone number to notify the voter of a defect in their carrier envelope, what should the SVC or EVBB do?
 - A. The SVC or EVBB should mail a Notice of Carrier Defect to inform the voter of their ability to correct the defect by appearing at the early voting clerk's office or by cancelling their mail ballot and voting in person during early voting or on election day.
- 22. Can the early voting clerk retain the voter's ABBM and a copy of the Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail electronically?
 - A. Yes. There is no prohibition on an early voting clerk scanning these documents for storage and retention. However, the original document must be kept for the retention period associated with precinct election records.

RE: Additional Procedures Regarding Correction of Defects on Application for Ballot by Mail or Carrier Envelope

In our continued efforts to provide advice and assistance on the changes in law made by Senate Bill 1 (87th Leg., 2nd C.S., 2021), the Secretary of State is issuing additional guidance regarding the process for voters to correct certain defects in an application for ballot by mail (ABBM) or carrier envelope. This advisory is intended to be read in conjunction with Election Advisory No. 2022-08, issued on January 28, 2022.

All statutory references in this advisory are to the Texas Election Code ("the Code"), unless otherwise indicated

Processing Applications for Ballot by Mail

In Election Advisory No. 2022-08, we identified several scenarios that early voting clerks may encounter in reviewing ABBMs. We also outlined the actions that early voting clerks should take in each scenario. Based on feedback that we received from early voting clerks following the issuance of Election Advisory No. 2022-08, we are providing further guidance regarding one of the scenarios (Scenario 2).

In Scenario 2, a voter provides a DPS-issued driver's license number on their ABBM but the early voting clerk is unable to validate this number because the voter registration record only contains the voter's social security number. As we indicated in our prior advisory, the early voting clerk must reject the ABBM and provide notice of the rejection, which must include information explaining how to correct or add information to cure the defect. (Sec. 86.001(f-1)).

In this scenario, if the voter's voter registration record contains only one personal identification number, the voter can also update their record—by submitting a newvoter registration application to the registrar or by validating their information on texas.gov—to add the missing number in addition to or in lieu of submitting a new ABBM. Accordingly, the early voting clerk should provide a voter in Scenario 2 with the Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail — Missing or Incorrect Personal Identification Number (Form 6-3) or the Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail – Required Personal Identification Number Not Associated with Voter Record (Form 6-4). The early voting clerk should also consider sending both a blank ABBM and a blank voter registration application to the voter so that they can include the additional personal identification number on the ABBM or submit a new voter registration application to update their record with both numbers. Updating the voter registration record will also reduce the likelihood that any future ABBMs or carrier envelopes submitted by the voter will contain identification information that does not match the voter's record.

NOTE: As we stated in Election Advisory No. 2022-08, if a voter in Scenario 2 has not provided the required personal identification information by the 11th day before election day, the ABBM will be finally rejected, but the voter may still vote in person if otherwise eligible. (Sec. 84.007(c)).

EVBB/SVC Mailing of Defective Carrier Envelope to Voter

In Election Advisory No. 2022-08, we outlined detailed procedures regarding the methods of correcting defects in a carrier envelope, including the process for the SVC or EVBB to return a carrier envelope to the voter by mail. As a reminder, if the SVC or EVBB determines that it would be possible for the voter to correct the defect and return the carrier envelope before the time the polls are required to close on election day, the SVC or EVBB must mail the original defective carrier envelope to the voter. This determination must be made not later than the second business day after the SVC or EVBB discovers a defect, and before the SVC or EVBB decides whether to accept or reject a timely delivered mail ballot. (Secs. 87.0271(b), 87.0411(b)).

In addition to the procedures identified in our earlier advisory, if the EVBB/SVC mails a defective carrier envelope to the voter, the EVBB/SVC can also call or email a voter to notify them that the carrier envelope has been returned to the voter. If the EVBB/SVC opts to provide this additional notice by phone or email, the EVBB/SVC must apply these procedures uniformly to all voters in similar circumstances. (Secs. 87.0271(d), 87.0411(d)).

Missing or Incorrect Personal Identification Information on Carrier Envelope – Updating Voter Registration Record

If an SVC/EVBB discovers that a voter's personal identification information is missing or incorrect on the carrier envelope, and the SVC/EVBB determines there is not enough time to return the carrier envelope to the voter, the SVC/EVBB may notify the voter of the defect by phone or email. (Secs. 87.0271(c), 87.0411(c)). If the voter's voter registration record only contains one of the required identification numbers, the SVC/EVBB may also notify the voter that they can add the missing number to their record by submitting a new voter registration application or by updating their registration at texas.gov. Updating the voter registration record to include the missing personal identification number may provide the SVC/EVBB with the information needed to accept the carrier envelope. Additionally, once the voter updates their record, the voter will be able to access the SOS's Ballot by Mail Tracker in any future election for which they apply to vote by mail.

Early Voting Clerk Notification to Voter of Defects in Carrier Envelope

As we explained in Election Advisory No. 2022-08, if an early voting clerk receives a timely carrier envelope that does not comply with the applicable requirements of the Code, Section 86.011(d) of the Code authorizes the clerk to deliver the carrier envelope in person or by mail to the voter so that the voter may correct the defect. The early voting clerk also may notify the voter of the defect by phone and advise the voter that they may come to the early voting clerk's office to correct the defect or cancel their ABBM and vote in person. Section 86.011(d) directs the SOS to prescribe any procedures necessary to implement this subsection.

Removing the Secrecy Flap on Carrier Envelope

The early voting clerk is authorized to remove the secrecy flap on a returned carrier envelope to facilitate the processing and review of voted mail ballots. If, in removing the secrecy flap, the early voting clerk discovers that the voter did not fully seal the carrier envelope, the clerk may take actions such as taping or sealing the flap to ensure that the envelope containing the ballot is not separated from the carrier envelope.

Returning the Carrier Envelope to Voter

If the early voting clerk discovers that the carrier envelope is missing the voter's signature, has an incomplete signature, has missing or incomplete witness or assistant information, or has missing or incorrect personal identification information, the early voting clerk may deliver the carrier envelope in person or by mail to the voter so that the voter may correct the defect. If the early voting clerk sends the carrier envelope to the voter by mail, the clerk should include a notice explaining the defect and provide instructions on how the voter can correct and return the carrier envelope or cancel their ABBM and vote in person. The early voting clerk may provide their own letter to the voter explaining these defects.

If an early voting clerk delivers the carrier envelope to the voter in person, the clerk should document this delivery. This hand-delivery option must be applied uniformly to all voters in similar circumstances. In addition, poll watchers are entitled to follow the early voting worker when making the delivery and observe the correction process. Upon receipt of the carrier envelope, the voter may correct the defect immediately and surrender the carrier envelope to the early voting clerk personnel, who would return to the clerk's office with the corrected carrier envelope. Alternatively, the early voting worker could leave the carrier envelope in the voter's possession and allow the voter to either make the correction on their own and mail the ballot to the early voting clerk or cancel their mail ballot and vote in person.

The early voting clerk may return defective carrier envelopes by mail under Section 86.011(d) up until the point when SVC/EVBB begins notifying voters of defects by phone or email. The early voting clerk should determine this cutoff date in coordination with the SVC/EVBB. At that point, the early voting clerk should not provide these notifications, as the SVC/EVBB has additional options to contact voters of defective carrier envelopes—and voters notified of such defects by the SVC/EVBB have until the 6th day after election day to correct the defect in person at the early voting clerk's office.

Deadline to Return Carrier Envelope to the Early Voting Clerk

As the carrier envelope was returned to the voter prior to review by the early voting ballot board, the regular delivery deadlines for carrier envelopes apply. These deadlines are listed in the Secretary of State's election law calendars. Any carrier envelopes returned to the early voting clerk after the regular return deadlines will not be sent to the EVBB for review, as they were not timely returned. (Sec. 86.011(c)).

Tracking Mail Ballots Returned to Voter by Early Voting Clerk

If an early voting clerk opts to return a defective carrier envelope to the voter, the early voting clerk should leave this ballot in the "Ballot Sent" status for the SOS's Ballot by Mail Tracker. These ballots should be entered as "Ballot Received" until the ballot has been returned by the voter.

Notifying Voter of Defective Carrier Envelope by Phone

Alternatively, if the early voting clerk discovers that the carrier envelope is missing the voter's signature, has an incomplete signature, has missing or incomplete witness or assistant information, or has missing or incorrect personal identification information, the early voting clerk may notify the voter by phone of this defect and inform the voter that the voter may appear at the early voting clerk's office in person to correct the defect or cancel their ABBM and vote in person. The early voting clerk is not permitted to notify voters of a defective carrier envelope by email. However, if the voter requests additional information regarding the correction process, the early voting clerk may email instructions to the voter on how to correct defects—as long as the clerk takes the same action for all voters who request additional information by email.

The early voting clerk may notify voters of defective carrier envelopes by phone until the SVC/EVBB begins notifying voters of defects by phone or email. At that point, the early voting clerk should refrain from providing these notifications and should deliver the defective carrier envelopes expeditiously to the SVC/EVBB. The SVC or EVBB should review the ballots with obvious defects first to ensure that those voters are timely notified of their options to correct or cancel their mail ballot.

Deadline to Appear in Person at Early Voting Clerk's Office to Correct Defects

A voter who is notified of a defective carrier envelope by the early voting clerk under Section 86.011(d) must act on the defect(s) by 7:00 p.m. on election day. If the voter does not take such corrective action by 7:00 p.m. on election day, the early voting clerk shall deliver the defective carrier envelope to the EVBB for review. The EVBB will then make their own determination as to whether there are any defects in the carrier envelope and may also inform a voter of their ability to correct the defect(s). A voter who is notified of a defective carrier envelope by the SVC/EVBB has until the 6th day after election day to correct the defect(s) in person at the early voting clerk's office.

Uniform Treatment of Voters

If an early voting clerk chooses to notify voters of defects in their carrier envelope under Section 86.011(d), the clerk must apply these procedures uniformly to all voters in similar circumstances. The SOS recommends keeping a log to track the ballots mailed to voters and the ballots in the possession of the early voting clerk before ballots are delivered to the SVC or EVBB.

Poll Watchers May be Present for Early Voting Clerk Notifications

Poll watchers are entitled to observe the procedures described under Section 86.011(d). Poll watchers are not authorized to remain in the early voting clerk's office at all times to wait for a potential notification to a voter. However, if a poll watcher is present in the office when an early voting clerk is notifying voters of defects by phone or a voter appears to correct a defect in person, the poll watcher may observe this process. There is no specific posting requirement for this notification.

Missing Statement of Residence

If an EVBB discovers that a voter did not include a completed statement of residence, the EVBB/SVC can mail the carrier envelope back to the voter so that the voter may provide a statement of residence.

If the EVBB discovers that a voter did not include a completed statement of residence, but there is not enough time to mail the carrier envelope to the voter and have the voter return the carrier envelope by election day, the early voting clerk can notify the voter of this defect by phone or email. The voter may submit the completed statement of residence with their carrier envelope (if mailed back), or the voter can appear in person at the early voting clerk's office to turn in or complete the statement of residence. In addition, if a voter is notified of a missing or incomplete statement of residence by phone or email, the voter can update their voter registration record through texas.gov. The early voting clerk should notify the EVBB of an update completed via texas.gov and provide a copy of the new record for the EVBB's review process.

John Medcalf Chief Executive Officer VOTEC Corporation 10920 Via Frontera, Suite 110 San Diego, CA 92127

Dear Mr. Medcalf,

In accordance with Section 18.012 of the Texas Election Code, the Office of the Texas Secretary of State is required to certify any service company contracting with a county for voter registration services. Certification as a voter registration vendor in the state of Texas is a privilege, not a right. Specifically, Section 18.012 provides:

Sec. 18.012. Secretary of State to Approve Computer Services Contracts. (a) A county may not contract with a computer service company or other private business entity for services related to the lists required under this subchapter unless the programs, equipment, or other materials to be covered by the contract are approved by the secretary of state. The secretary may rescind approval of the programs, equipment, or other materials at any time, and on that action, the contract is nullified to the extent that it depends on the disapproved items. (b) A computer service company or other private business entity may not use modified programs, equipment, or other materials under the contract unless the modifications are approved by the secretary of state. (c) A person commits an offense if the person violates Subsection (b). An offense under this subsection is a Class A misdemeanor.

As a currently certified vendor in Texas, VOTEC has been successful in exchanging required data files and electronic information with the statewide voter registration system. An essential component of the certification is that counties have the ability to successfully transmit daily information to the statewide voter registration database to maintain the accuracy of the county voter registration data. Likewise, all certified vendors must agree to make modifications to any software to support legislative changes and directives from the Secretary of State.

Implementing recent legislative requirements necessitated modifications and enhancements to the current statewide system on an expedited basis. It is your obligation to ensure that all changes are made in a timely manner to ensure counties utilizing your application are in compliance with state law and directives set out by the Secretary of State. Several counties have expressed concerns with the inability to provide the daily information exchange, and some counties have indicated that updated software to report data to our office related to voting by mail and the reporting of provisional ballots was delayed or may not yet have been implemented.

Additionally, we have been made aware through third-party sources that your company may have provided instructions to counties that conflict with our office's directives. Any such conflicting directions must cease immediately.

We ask you to confirm that you are committed to implementing all future legislative changes and that solutions implementing recent requirements are currently available to all counties to ensure their compliance with state law and our office's directives. We also ask you to confirm that you are working to support your counties in providing daily information exchanges in accordance with these requirements. In turn, our office will continue to work collaboratively with you to navigate the implementation and to provide the highest quality solutions to Texas counties.

Sincerely.

Dear Mr. Bitter,

We appreciate your recent letter summarizing your concerns regarding the implementation requirements set forth by SB1. We know the magnitude of work involved to implement a bill with so many facets and encompass all the technical, functional and regulatory requirements.

We have been working diligently to ensure that our customers are informed of the changes and that all imports to the state have been in compliance. There may have been a few communications difficulties as we faced an immediate deadline to implement the new tracking and reporting protocols. We will continue to work closely with both our customers and the State to ensure correct procedures are being followed.

In line with our mutual concern for rapid compliance, we have been informed by our customer counties that they are receiving technical advisories that we have not been copied on. To avoid any misunderstandings or miscommunication moving forward we respectfully request, as a certified vendor, that TEAM be reminded to include us whenever new information is being promulgated that would impact the reporting requirements to the State.

We have a respectable relationship with Kristi Hart and her staff by working in partnership for submitting test files to the State to assist in scrutinizing and vetting new requirements and procedures. We will continue those efforts to ensure all SB1 reporting requirements are met.

Please let me know if you have any additional questions or concerns.

Best Regards,

Karen Richards

Subject: MASS EMAIL (Offline/Vendors-68) Voter Sync for Offline Counties

Dear County Election Officials:

As a reminder, all offline counties are responsible for making sure that TEAM, the official statewide database, is in sync with your current county records. This is critically important in assuring that all voters have access to the Ballot by Mail Tracker and for verification of personally identifiable information for applications for mail ballots and acceptance of mail ballots. All offline counties should complete the Voter Sync process on a regular basis and before each statewide election.

If you have not already completed the sync process during the past month, we ask that all offline counties initiate this process as soon as possible in advance of the May elections.

As always, if we can be of assistance, please do not hesitate to contact the TEAM team at (800) 252-2216, Option 1 or Elections@sos.texas.gov.

Key Points to Remember

- Voters are not required to provide both types of identification numbers.
- If a voter provides both numbers, only one number has to match the VR record.
- Do not delay in mailing rejection notices.
- Voters are not required to use the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct missing information. They can submit a new ABBM or a new VR application, whichever is applicable.
- County early voting clerks are REQUIRED to submit rejected ABBM information to TEAM (or though their vendor, if it provides data to TEAM). This is what populates the Ballot by Mail Tracker.

Impacts on FPCA Voters

- To facilitate the mailing of FPCA balloting materials, early voting clerks may use any type of mailing envelope that contains the Official Election Mail logo and the required postage-paid information as long as the early voting clerk includes a required signature sheet for the voter to complete.
- All FPCA voters must be provided with an Official Election Signature Sheet for an FPCA Voter if their balloting materials were sent by email.
- If the balloting materials were sent by physical mail, but the early voting clerk is using one of the FVAP envelopes that does not contain all of the requirements for the carrier envelope, the voter MUST be provided with an Official Election Signature Sheet for an FPCA Voter to return with their marked ballot.
- What this means for SVC/EVBB review? This means you may be seeing more signature sheets for FPCA voters.

Key Points to Remember

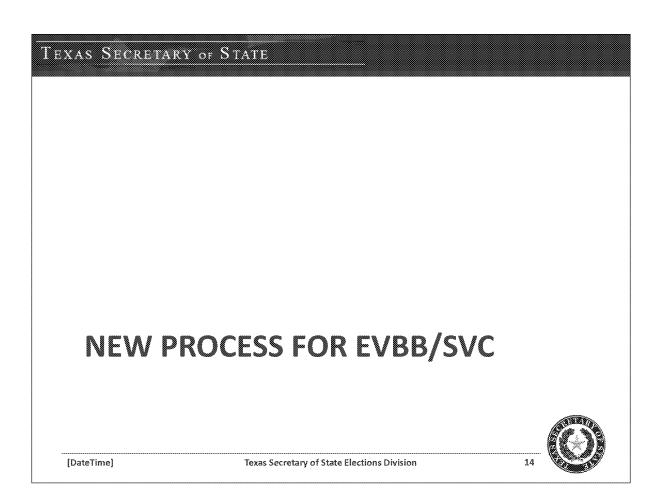

- Voters are not required to provide both types of identification numbers.
- If a voter provides both numbers, only one number has to match the VR record.
- The secrecy flap may be opened by the early voting clerk's staff for processing.
- Be mindful with these carrier envelopes! The carrier envelopes have personally identifiable information that needs to be guarded.
- Carrier envelopes are not public information at this point in the election process.

Texas Secretary of State Elections Division 3/22/2022

New Comparison Requirements

- The EVBB shall only accept a ballot if the personal identification information (ex: SSN or TXDL) matches the voter registration record.
- The SVC/EVBB is matching the information on the carrier envelope to the VR record.
- The number on the carrier envelope does not have to be the same number on the ABBM – it must only match the VR record.

[DateTime]

Texas Secretary of State Elections Division

Rebuttable Presumption

- If the personal identification information provided matches the VR record, the signatures on the ABBM and the carrier envelope are rebuttably presumed to be those of the voter.
- The presumption may be rebutted by presenting other past signatures on file with the EVC or VR that would support a finding that the signatures on the carrier envelope and ABBM are not those of the voter.

• Scenario 1: Voter provides a personal identification number on the carrier envelope that matches the number in the voter's voter registration record. The SVC or EVBB has completed the verification of personal identification information and should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.

• Scenario 2: Voter provides a personal identification number on the carrier envelope that matches the number in the voter's voter registration record, but it is a different type of number than what the voter listed on the ABBM. (Example: Voter provided last four digits of social security number on ABBM and a driver's license number on carrier envelope.) Because the voter's voter registration record contains both personal identification numbers, the SVC or EVBB is able to verify the voter's identity. The SVC or EVBB should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.

• Scenario 3: Voter provides the last four digits of their social security number on the carrier envelope. The voter registration record contains a driver's license number and social security number. The SVC or EVBB should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.

NOTE: The obligation of the SVC or EVBB in reviewing the identification information on a carrier envelope is to determine if the information provided by the voter on the envelope identifies the same voter identified on the voter's voter registration record. (Secs. 87.027, 87.0271, 87.041(b)(8),

Possible Scenarios – Carrier Envelopes

• Scenario 4: Voter indicates on the carrier envelope that they have not been issued any of the required personal identification numbers, and the voter's voter registration record does not contain any of these numbers. The SVC or EVBB has completed the verification of personal identification information, and it must rely on the signature comparison process for this part of the review. The SVC or EVBB should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.

 Scenario 5: Voter provided one of the required personal identification numbers on the ABBM that matched the voter's voter registration record, but the voter does not include an identification number on the carrier envelope. If the voter timely corrects the defect, and there are no other grounds for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.

Signature Verification Committee Corrective Action Process

- The following defects are eligible for correction when identified by the signature verification committee (Sec. 87.0271(a)):
 - The voter did not sign the carrier envelope certificate.
 - The SVC cannot determine whether the signature on the carrier envelope is that of the voter.
 - The personal identification information required under Section 84.002(a)(1-a) (ABBM) or Section 86.002 (carrier envelope) was missing or contained incorrect information.
 - If a voter used a witness for completion of the carrier envelope, the witness information was incomplete.

 result in a rejected mail ballot, but the voter may still vote in person if otherwise eligible.

- The following defects are eligible for correction when identified by the early voting ballot board (Sec. 87.0411(a)):
 - The voter did not sign the carrier envelope certificate.
 - The EVBB cannot determine whether the signature on the carrier envelope is that of the voter.
 - The voter did not include the required statement of residence.

 - If a voter used a witness for completion of the carrier envelope, the witness information was incomplete.
 - NOTE: Incomplete information about an assistant cannot be corrected by EVBB/SVC and will result in a rejected mail ballot, but the voter may still vote in person if otherwise eligible.
- Only the EVBB has the authority to open the sealed part of carrier envelope to determine if a statement of residence (SOR) has been submitted.
 - The only exception is for FPCA voters. An SVC must open the sealed envelope to obtain the Signature Sheet for FPCA Voter, as this is necessary for the signature verification process

Corrective Action Timelines

- Returning the Carrier Envelope by Mail: If the SVC or EVBB determines that it would be possible for the voter to correct the defect and return the carrier envelope before the time the polls are required to close on election day, the SVC or EVBB must mail the original defective carrier envelope to the voter. This determination must be made not later than the second business day after the SVC or EVBB discovers a defect, and before the SVC or EVBB decides whether to accept or reject a timely delivered mail ballot. (Secs. 87.0271(b), 87.0411(b)).
- Notifying the Voter of Defect by Phone or Email: If the SVC or EVBB determines that it would NOT be possible for the voter to correct the defect and return the carrier envelope before the time the polls are required to close on election day, the SVC or EVBB may notify the voter of the defect by telephone or email and inform the voter that the voter may come to the early voting clerk's office in person not later than the sixth day after election day to correct the defect. Establishing Timelines and Guidelines for the Corrective Action Process

- The SVC or EVBB must set a uniform policy for when carrier envelopes will be mailed to the voter versus when voters will be notified of the defect by phone or email.
- The SVC or EVBB should determine whether it will notify voters of a defect by both phone and email, if both are available.
- The SVC or EVBB should establish a policy for making multiple attempts to reach a voter if it is unsuccessful in reaching a voter by phone or email on the first attempt.
- Consider U.S. Postal Service (USPS) guidelines. Ask your EVB to consult with your local post office.
- SOS Recommendation: The SVC or EVBB should consider implementing a policy to provide notification of a defect by phone or email to all voters whose ballots are reviewed by the SVC or EVBB on or after the 14th day before election day (approximately 10 business days). This may be modified based on discussions with your local USPS representatives.

 registrar's office to obtain a phone number. The registrar may also read a phone number from a voter registration application to a member of the SVC or EVBB, if necessary.
- The SVC or EVBB should create a phone script that explains to the voter that the voter's mail ballot was received by the early voting clerk's office and has been reviewed by the SVC or EVBB, whichever is applicable.
- 3. The SOS recommends that the SVC or EVBB confirm the voter's identity using publicly available information.
 - Example: Ask the voter to confirm their voter registration address and whether they requested a mail ballot for the given election.
- 4. The voter should be told that upon review of the carrier envelope, the SVC or EVB3 discovered a defect in the carrier envelope. The specific defect should be explained.

- 6. Provide a return phone number that the voter may use to confirm that they were contacted by the SVC or EVBB. The number provided should be the number of the early voting cierk's office so the voter can verify this information and obtain details about the corrective action process during times that the SVC or EVBB are not meeting.

Correcting Defect by Cancellation

- After receiving a Notice of Carrier Defect by mail or receiving notification via email or phone, the voter may opt to cancel their ballot by mail and vote a regular ballot in person. All cancellations must be completed in accordance with Section 84.032. If the voter is an Annual ABBM voter, a cancellation request submitted for these purposes applies only to the current election unless the voter specifically requests to cancel their Annual ABBM. (Sec. 84.038).
- There is no process under Texas law by which a voter can cancel a mail ballot application by phone. All cancellations must be in writing and completed in accordance with Section 84.032 of the Texas Election Code.

- If the FPCA voter provides missing or incorrect identification information on their carrier envelope or signature sheet, or did not include the Official Election Signature Sheet for an FPCA Voter, the voter must be notified of the defect in the same manner as a regular ABBM voter.

- Specifically, an FPCA voter may submit a corrected signature sheet by email, fax, personal delivery, or mail. The SVC or EVBB should make an appropriate notation on their roster to indicate how FPCA voters were notified of a defect and how the FPCA voter provided the corrected signature sheet to the SVC or EVBB. - Early Voting Clerks should not delay in mailing rejection notices.
- Voters are not required to use the Ballot by Mail Tracker to correct missing information. They can submit a new ABBM or a new VR application, whichever is applicable.
- County early voting clerks are REQUIRED to submit rejected ABBM information to TEAM (or though their vendor, if it provides data to TEAM). This is what populates the Ballot by Mail Tracker.

CHANGES TO FPCA PROCESS

10/11/2022

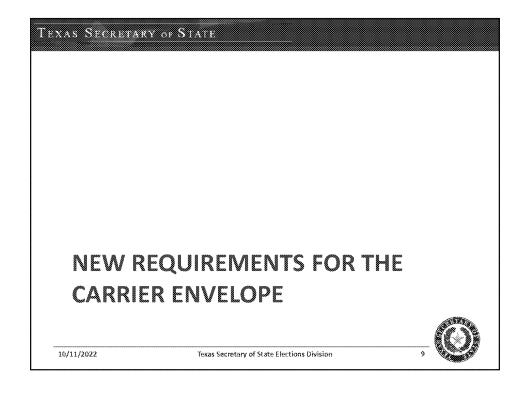

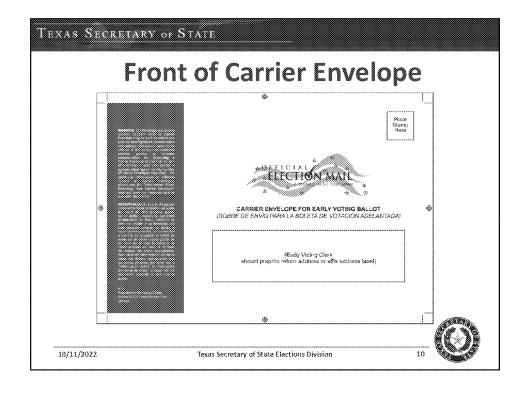

Impacts on FPCA Voters

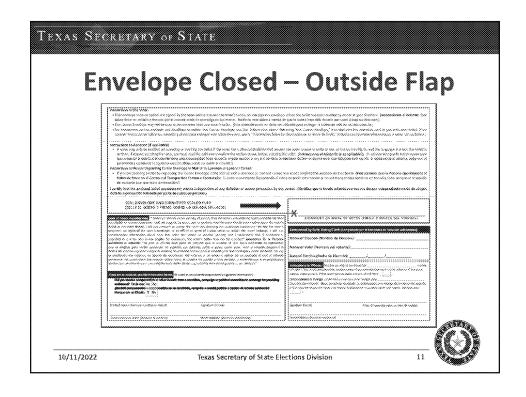

- To facilitate the mailing of FPCA balloting materials, early voting clerks may use any type of mailing envelope that contains the Official Election Mail logo and the required postage-paid information as long as the early voting clerk includes a required signature sheet for the voter to complete.
- All FPCA voters must be provided with an Official Election Signature Sheet for an FPCA Voter if their balloting materials were sent by email.
- If the balloting materials were sent by physical mail, but the early voting clerk is using one of the FVAP envelopes that does not contain all of the requirements for the carrier envelope, the voter MUST be provided with an Official Election Signature Sheet for an FPCA Voter to return with their marked ballot.
- What this means for SVC/EVBB review? There may be an increased number of signature sheets for FPCA voters.

New Comparison Requirements

- The EVBB shall only accept a ballot if the personal identification information (ex: SSN or TXDL) matches the voter registration record.
- The SVC/EVBB is matching the information on the carrier envelope to the VR record.

Rebuttable Presumption

- If the personal identification information provided matches the VR record, the signatures on the ABBM and the carrier envelope are rebuttably presumed to be those of the voter.
- The presumption may be rebutted by presenting other past signatures on file with the EVC or VR that would support a finding that the signatures on the carrier envelope and ABBM are not those of the voter.

POSSIBLE SCENARIOS REGARDING CARRIER ENVELOPES

10/11/2022

Texas Secretary of State Elections Division

Possible Scenarios – Carrier Envelopes

 Scenario 1: Voter provides a personal identification number on the carrier envelope that matches the number in the voter's voter registration record. The SVC or EVBB has completed the verification of personal identification information and should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.

Transfer Street, and the Street

Possible Scenarios – Carrier Envelopes

Scenario 2: Voter provides a personal identification number on the carrier envelope that matches the number in the voter's voter registration record, but it is a different type of number than what the voter listed on the ABBM. (Example: Voter provided last four digits of social security number on ABBM and a driver's license number on carrier envelope.) Because the voter's voter registration record contains both personal identification numbers, the SVC or EVBB is able to verify the voter's identity. The SVC or EVBB should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.

Possible Scenarios – Carrier Envelopes

- Scenario 3: Voter provides the last four digits of their social security number on the carrier envelope. The voter registration record contains a driver's license number and social security number. The SVC or EVBB is able to validate that the partial social security number on the carrier envelope matches the number in the voter's voter registration record. The SVC or EVBB should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.
 - NOTE: The obligation of the SVC or EVBB in reviewing the identification information on a carrier envelope is to determine if the information provided by the voter on the envelope identifies the same voter identified on the voter's voter registration record. (Secs. 87.027, 87.0271, 87.041(b)(8), 87.0411).

The SVC or EVBB has completed the verification of personal identification information, and it must rely on the signature comparison process for this part of the review. The SVC or EVBB should perform its remaining duties in the ballot review process. If the SVC or EVBB does not identify any other ground for rejection, the ballot would be accepted.

Corrective Action Timelines

- Returning the Carrier Envelope by Mail: If the SVC or EVBB determines that it would be possible for the voter to correct the defect and return the carrier envelope before the time the polls are required to close on election day, the SVC or EVBB must mail the original defective carrier envelope to the voter. This determination must be made not later than the second business day after the SVC or EVBB discovers a defect, and before the SVC or EVBB decides whether to accept or reject a timely delivered mail ballot. (Secs. 87.0271(b), 87.0411(b)).
- Notifying the Voter of Defect by Phone or Email: If the SVC or EVBB determines that it would NOT be possible for the voter to correct the defect and return the carrier envelope before the time the polls are required to close on election day, the SVC or EVBB may notify the voter of the defect by telephone or email and inform the voter that the voter may come to the early voting clerk's office in person not later than the sixth day after election day to correct the defect. (Secs.

Recommendations

 The SOS recommends that before qualifying mail ballots, the EVBB/SVC meet with the early voting clerk to determine dates to convene and to establish timelines for the corrective action process. (Secs. 87.0411, 87.0271).

10/11/2022

Establishing Timelines and Guidelines for the Corrective Action Process

- The SVC or EVBB must set a uniform policy for when carrier envelopes will be mailed to the voter versus when voters will be notified of the defect by phone or email.
- The SVC or EVBB should determine whether it will notify voters of a defect by both phone and email, if both are available.
- The SVC or EVBB should establish a policy for making multiple attempts to reach a voter if it is unsuccessful in reaching a voter by phone or email on the first attempt.
- Consider U.S. Postal Service (USPS) guidelines. Ask your EVC to consult with your local post office.
- SOS Recommendation: The SVC or EVBB should consider implementing a policy to provide notification of a defect by phone or email to all voters whose ballots are reviewed by the SVC or EVBB on or after the 14th day before election day (approximately 10 business days). This may be modified based on discussions with your local USPS representatives.

- 3. The SOS recommends that the SVC or EVBB confirm the voter's identity using publicly available information.
 - Example: Ask the voter to confirm their voter registration address and whether they requested a mail ballot for the given election
- The voter should be told that upon review of the carrier envelope, the SVC or EV8B discovered a defect in the carrier envelope.
 The specific defect should be explained.

Harris County Elections Recommendations for Ballot by Mail Applications Tips to avoid delays due to new State law

As a result of voting laws passed by Senate Bill 1, new mail ballot requirements have led to an increased number of mail ballot applications flagged for rejection.

The new state law requires voters to provide their Texas driver's license number, Texas ID number, or the last four digits of their social security number.

Failure to provide an exact match on the application to what is on your voter record could result in a rejection of the application, meaning voters will need to return a corrected mail ballot application before the mail ballot application deadline. The deadline to apply to vote by mail in the March Primary Election is February 18, 2022.

Below are some helpful voter tips to avoid delays in successfully processing a voter's application in time for the March Primary. Additionally, here is an instructional video available for download.

- Call Harris County Elections at 713-755-6965. The voter services team is dedicated to walking voters through the process of filling out applications. There are operators who are fluent in English, Spanish, Vietnamese, and Chinese.
- Provide both forms of ID. Even though the form only asks for one, the best way to ensure an application isn't rejected is to provide both a Texas ID and the last four digits of your Social Security number.
- Provide a contact email or phone number on your application so our team can immediately reach out and address any issues with the application to minimize potential delays.

In addition to filling out the new identification requirements, voters are required to select a political party in order to vote in the March Primary Election and Runoff Election. If they select "Annual Application: Send me a ballot for all elections in this voting year", voters also must select either "March 1st Democratic Primary and Runoff" or "March 1st Republican Primary and Runoff" in the options to the right.

For more information, including sample ballots and polling locations, visit HarrisVotes.com in the coming weeks and follow @HarrisVotes on Twitter, Facebook, and Instagram. Call Harris County Elections at 713-755-6965.

This Post Election Report includes an overview of the Election Administrator Office's (EAO) planning and execution of the November 8, 2022, General Election including Early Voting and Election Day operations, media and community outreach activities, Election Day operations, election night tabulation, and a post-election day analysis from election judges, election workers, and senior EAO staff. The Report is organized into the following areas: (1) Election Data Highlights; (2) Election Planning and Outreach; (3) Election Preparation; (4) Early Voting Operations; (5) Election Day Operations and Performance; (6) Election Night Tabulation and Post-Election Activities; and (7) Proposed EAO Actions. The Report will assist the EAO to improve processes and procedures for future elections, related to Communication systems, Voting system operations, Personnel resources for the EAO, and Vote Center deployment.

Methodology of Election Day Evaluation

The post-election review began with EAO staff conducting post assessment discussions with each of its seven election vendors who provided technical support during Early Voting and on Election Day. EAO staff also spoke with 774 Presiding Judges (PJs) and 727 Alternate Judges (AJs) that served on Election Day. The EAO staff was unable to gather information from all PJs and AJs because several judges advised EAO staff that they were instructed not to talk with the EAO staff about Election Day operations, including ballot paper due to the District Attorney's announced criminal investigation, litigation brought by the Harris County Republican Party, and pending election contests.

The EAO normally submits an election survey to all judges and clerks seeking feedback on the election process, and potential training and curriculum topics for future elections. However, in the interest of confirming and better understanding certain events and problems reported in the media on Election Day, and after, (including paper ballot issues and opening and closing problems) the EAO recruitment staff expedited its post-election assessment.

EAO staff reviewed election operations and discussed, internally, what worked well and what needed to be improved and reviewed election data pertaining to the General Election. Through an expedited evaluation process, the EAO has created this preliminary report of successes and challenges for review and implementation for the next election cycle. Standard practice would require the EAO to take approximately 90-120 days to compile a final report of this magnitude; however, given the level of stakeholder interest and inquiry, the EAO believed it important to provide its preliminary observations as quickly as possible without jeopardizing the integrity of the data and the process. As we know in the elections profession, speed does not always equate to accuracy. The EAO will update this report as more information is gained from its continued effort to improve the processes. Based on the EAO's preliminary analysis, we provide the following assessment beginning with election data and proceeding according to the report organization listed above.

I. Election Data Highlights

II. Election Planning and Outreach

- A. Public Awareness. On July 1, immediately following the two June elections, the EAO outreach and communications began organic efforts to raise public awareness about the November 8 General Election. Every potential voter touchpoint, from the website to the call center to voter registration drives and community meetings, was used as an opportunity to prominently remind voters of upcoming dates and important information surrounding voting in Harris County. The EAO developed messaging and strategies based on voting trends observed from previous elections and created additional messaging based on real-time information gathered from the EAO ballot building team and call center (i.e. two-page long ballots, postage requirements).
- B. Public Outreach. The EAO deployed the following resources in support of voter engagement and communication directly and through media efforts:

Professional Firm – KGB Texas Communications, a media and communications firm assisted the EAO communications team in driving awareness among Harris County residents on key dates associated with the November 2022 election, and educating the public on election-related information (i.e. mail ballots, new voting machines, polling locations). The media and communication efforts ran from October 12, 2022 through November 8, 2022.

Overall, the media efforts delivered 77 million impressions across broadcast television and radio, digital media, print, and outdoor media. Radio garnered the highest amount of impressions at 26 million, followed by television and digital outlets with 21 million and 20 million respectively. Election Ads were run in English, Spanish, Vietnamese and Chinese, and a budget was allocated to minority publications and stations. Originally, KGB Communications planned 70,482,120 impressions for this campaign. At the end of the cycle, 77,036,058 impressions were delivered.

Social Media- Social media posts were developed to highlight and inform voters of important dates and materials such as ID requirements, EVC and VC locations, "frequently asked questions", postage requirements for mail ballot envelopes, identification numbers needed on mail ballots, and the importance of preparing a sample ballot to expedite the in-person voting process.

With paid Ad campaigns on Facebook and Instagram, the office achieved 68,000 clicks and sustained a 2.27% click through rate in the 13-days that Ads were running.

C. Community Engagement Events- From the start of July through the voter registration deadline (October 11), the voter outreach team collected 8,889 voter registration forms at 703 events across the county. The following is a breakdown of these events based on where they were held:

- Faith-based centers- 64
- High schools- 134
- Colleges- 172
- Community- 268
- Festivals- 65

At each of these events, team members also provided flyers with important information about the November 8 election, answered voters' questions, and showed them how to navigate the website for information.

From July 1 through October 31, four members of the communications team hosted 30 stakeholder meetings in English, Spanish, Vietnamese, and Chinese, where important deadlines and resources for the upcoming election were discussed, voting machines programmed with a sample election were brought in for hands-on learning, and attendees were encouraged to ask their elections questions. In addition, organizations were able to request machine demonstrations in any of the four languages offered. Five team members participated in approximately 140 information sessions, where voters could ask questions and get hands-on interaction with the voting machines.

D. Media Relations - The EAO communications team developed digital toolkits and media pages, which included important dates, FAQs, as well as B-roll (Media clips), videos and photography produced in house by the EAO team. These toolkits were shared with Advocacy groups, media outlets and the political parties. (Digital toolkit: https://www.dropbox.com/sh/tfdoc891df3mo6i/AACiFkmG4zpDkl9omr5cxe4pa?dl=0)

Additionally, on October 13, the EAO hosted an Open House for all members of the media, as well as key stakeholder groups and Harris County officials. The purpose of the Open House was to provide critical transparency into the election night process, specifically detailing how ballots are processed and the security measures in place. This was the first time the EAO had offered an inside look and detailed explanation of its process. (Overview of Open House talking points: https://www.harrisvotes.com/Voter/Ballot-Processing)

On October 21, the EAO also hosted a Media Town Hall event for reporters specifically assigned to cover the November 8 election. This was an opportunity to revisit information shared during the Open House, as well as answer logistical questions regarding media access, points of contact, and visibility during election night.

- E. Website This year, the EAO rebranded the website (HarrisVotes.com) to provide more transparency and improved user experience ahead of the November 8 Election. The website experienced the following traffic:
 - 45-days before Election Day (September 24): 8,297 page views with 1,922 users averaging 3.58 pages/session in 2,318 sessions

- Combined 12-Days of Early Voting: 2,611,384 page views with 554,614 users averaging 3.07 pages/session in 849,792 sessions
- Election Day (day after included to account for Election Results viewing): 1,728,179 page views with 349,106 users averaging 3.36 pages/session in 514,215 sessions

F. Improvements to the Planning Process

The EAO will take the following actions to improve its Election Day Planning Operations for future elections:
